Soldiers Buried In Tons of Debris

Foreign Situation.

Loyalist defenders of Madrid made surprise attacks on rebels early today, killing 300 insurgents with dynamite in one suburb of the city.

Rebels Dynamited.

By the United Press.

Madrid (Saturday), April 10.—Loyalist defenders of Madrid, driving Gen. Francisco Franco's rebels from the city's gates in one of the greatest onslaughts of the civil war, early today killed 300 insurgents with dynamite in suburban Carabanchel.

The loyalist militia, including fierce "dynamiteros" from Asturias, crossed the Manzanares River on the southwestern fringe of the city and destroyed an entire block of houses with crude dynamite bombs.

The 300 rebels, comprising two companies of Franco's picked men, were buried beneath tons of debris, military dispatches said.

Government leaders announced—while the burst of shells and roving antiaircraft searchlights illuminated the sky above Madrid—that the rebel ring around the capital had been pushed back on 11 sectors encircling the city, from Pardo Park on the northwest to the Estramadura road around Carabanchel.

Hundreds were said to have been killed and thousands wounded in the fighting that began at dawn yesterday and continued unabated early today.

Scores of rebel airplanes appeared last night over the battlefronts where loyalist planes were the only fighting ships in the air yesterday. Franco, it was reported, hurriedly recalled his air fleets from the Basque and Cordoba fronts to resist the surprise loyalist offensive.

The battle, in Casa de Campo Park on the western outskirts of the capital, was the most violent in the nearly 9-month-old war.

The loyalists announced that 10,000 rebels were trapped in University City, north of the Casa de Campo, their retreat cut off by murderous shell fire raking the only bridge leading back to the park.

Gen. Jose Miaja, commander in chief of the Madrid front, was jubilant as he watched his picked troops drive against the enemy in a wide circle.

"Our offensive is proceeding with great success," he said. "We have

Irwin Has Killed Himself, Theory Of Hospital Head

New York, April 9 (AP).—Dr. Russell E. Blaisdell, superintendent of the Rockland County Hospital for the Insane where Robert Irwin underwent treatment for three years, said today he was "inclined to believe" the sculptor suspect in the triple murders of Beekman Hill had committed suicide.

"That is the only way I can reconcile with the records of his case here his disappearance since the police started search for him," Dr. Blaisdell said.

Dr. Blaisdell said he believed that if Irwin was responsible for the strangling of the 20-year-old art model, "Ronnie" Gedeon, her mother, Mary, and the stabbing of Frank Byrnes, a roomer, it was the result of shock following his being requested to leave Divinity School at St. Lawrence University March 18 because of "instability."

King Carol's Brother Gives Up Rank Because Wife Is Slighted

By the United Press.

Vienna, April 9.—Prince Nicholas of Rumania, younger brother of King Carol, today renounced his rank and titles following a "royal family disagreement," the Telkomp News Agency reported from Bucharest.

Nicholas had quarreled frequently with Carol since he eloped in 1931 with a commoner beauty, Mme. Jana Lucia Deletj. Nicholas' marriage resulted on one occasion in blows between the brothers.

The Telkomp dispatch said the feud was climaxed when Carol rejected a fresh petition from Nicholas in which the latter asked that his morganatic wife be recognized as a full princess and that their son be made a Rumanian prince.

The cabinet, after a two-hour session, dispatched Vice Premier M. Incluetz to Nicholas with the resignation document. In signing it Nicholas surrendered his title, all his orders and all military commands.

A special crown council reportedly was held tonight in the royal palace in Bucharest with Carol presiding. The chief of Rumanian general staff, the active commander of the army, church dignitaries and other leaders ratified the document.

Revised Corporation Profits Tax Gains Support in House

Doughton, Vinson Seek to Lessen Drain on Small Companies; Opposition to Blanket Levy Grows; Expansion Clause Favored.

By Robert C. Albright.

A demand for important modification of the undivided profits tax gathered headway in the House yesterday, with the backing of influential members of the House Ways and Means Committee.

Relief from provisions drastically taxing small corporations and placing new hurdles in the path of debt-ridden companies, was urged in the face of obvious Administration embarrassment at revenue shortages, relief pressure and continued talk of a new general tax bill.

Opposition to increased taxes to offset low revenue yields and meet the heavy cost of relief, farm, educational and housing programs spread through both houses.

House Sees Modification.

House leaders discounted the likelihood of a general tax bill, but held out a strong possibility that the undivided profits tax imposed last session will be modified.

Representative Fred M. Vinson (Democrat), of Kentucky, a high ranking member of the Ways and Means Committee, said it was "likely" steps will be taken this session to ease the burden on debt-ridden companies and provide exemptions for plant expansion and improvement.

In a letter to a North Carolina colleague, Chairman Robert L. Doughton, of the Ways and Means Committee, said he had "been of the opinion since this law was enacted that some amendments would be found advisable and perhaps necessary," and had discussed the matter with the Treasury Department.

Replies to Bulwinkle.

Doughton wrote in reply to a letter from Representative Alfred L. Bulwinkle (Democrat), North Carolina, who had urged "the necessity of amending the law immediately." Bulwinkle is sponsor of a bill to repeal entirely the undivided profits tax. He said he had only "slight hope" the law would be repealed, but thought his measure would at least call attention to the need for relief of "the smaller corporations and the companies that have suffered financial reverses."

Doughton's reply was dated Thursday.

"I still believe that the law should be amended so as to give some relief to corporations with little or no surplus, and those which are heavily in debt," Doughton wrote, "but I doubt if sufficient time has elapsed in which to secure the necessary information with which to proceed wisely in this matter."

"I will discuss your bill with representatives of the Treasury Department, and with members of the Committee on Ways and Means, and hope very much that some time in the near future the law may

Bill to Control Pay and Hours To Get Hearings

House Group to Take Up Plan; New Dealer Hits Court Change.

By Sidney Olson.

A new means of achieving one of the aims of the New Deal which the President has accused the Supreme Court of blocking—the regulation of wages and hours—yesterday interested the House Judiciary Committee to the extent of ordering hearings on the Smith bill.

This measure, introduced by Representative Howard W. Smith (Democrat), Virginia, plans the regulation of wages and hours through State laws enforced in interstate commerce by the Government.

Meanwhile, no let-up came in the national debate over the President's court program, as the president of Yale, a Republican, and a Democratic Senator, two Democratic and one Republican Representatives, two law college deans and a city bar association chairman denounced the plan publicly. A lone Democratic Representative, Byron Scott, California, defended the program by radio last night.

Postmaster General James A. Farley, however, repeated to reporters his prediction of a few weeks ago, that the court bill will be passed by a sufficient margin to avoid compromise.

Most significant of the blasts against the plan came from Representative Patrick H. Drewry (Democrat), Virginia, chairman of the Democratic National Congressional Committee, a vigorous New Deal supporter.

Drewry particularly protested against the President's assertion that "the same elements of opposition" fought the court plan as had battled against past progressive legislation.

End of Cycle Of Droughts Believed Here

Increasing Rainfall for Several Years Seen for Farmers.

By Eugene Warner.

End of the drought cycle, arrival of "most encouraging" moisture conditions, and a possible bumper wheat crop were indicated yesterday by Department of Agriculture officials with the issuance of the annual spring crop forecast.

J. B. Kincer, chief of the division of climate and crop weather, yesterday in an exclusive interview said he believed America's drought cycle had reached bottom and that a period of several years of increasing rainfall is in store for the American farmer.

This spring finds the Nation's farms better moistened than in many seasons, with only five States below normal (and none of them more than 10 per cent off), while many States have enjoyed heavy precipitation, especially in the heart of the dust bowl.

Heavy snows last winter in the Northwest may presage a bumper crop of wheat there, he said, although he carefully added the reservation that heavy snows in the winter of 1935-36 were followed by the Northwest's worst rust infection. However, after consulting graphs and records running back 100 years, he said he was convinced the drought cycle of the last 10 years has "reached bottom" and an upswing is due, with increased moisture prevalent, for an undetermined span of years.

Carry-Over Reduced.

The Department of Agriculture's April crop report shows a winter wheat crop estimate of at least 140,000,000 bushels beyond the crop of the parched year of 1936. The winter wheat has been somewhat damaged in central Mississippi States by alternate freezing and thawing spells, but for the Eastern part of the United States and the Northwest the oulook is highly favorable.

Carry-over stocks of wheat are below normal in the world and wheat prices are due to rise throughout 1937-38, the Department of Agriculture stated a fortnight ago. Adding the spring wheat crop to the winter wheat crop, more than 860,000,000 bushels are foreseen, with America again exporting wheat in large quantities.

One slight factor which eventually may reduce the crop is the plentiful moisture this spring in the Northwest, which up to yesterday had rendered fields so wet planting was retarded. There have been heavy snowfalls there up until last week. "The planting season is slightly late," Kincer said, but the situation is not at all serious."

Based on present prices, which the department asserted probably would be "well maintained" this summer and autumn, the American farmers will have their first billion-dollar wheat crop since 1927.

Producing many charts which vividly illustrate that climatic cycles vary in much the same way day-to-day weather varies, with the only difference being that climatic cycles consume years instead of days or weeks, Kincer showed a long slump in precipitation (1909 to 1936), which went slightly below the lowest rainfall periods in previous history (five years ending 1895), but which from present indications is now ended with a long period of increased rains in sight.

Higher Prices Predicted.

"For the first quarter of 1937 the country is in good shape," Kincer said. "There is abundant moisture everywhere, and planting should produce good crops if there is no change in the present trend."

A winter wheat crop of 656,019,000 bushels is indicated by the April 1 condition, the crop forecast said yesterday. Production in 1936 was 519,000,000 bushels. (These figures do not take into account the spring wheat crop, which is not yet sown.)

Drought conditions last fall still will be felt this year, it said, and "only about 33,000,000 bushels above the 1928-32 average" are expected. Coupled with this is a shortage from last year of 56,000,000 bushels in present stocks in storage, which presages higher prices.

Of special interest to Southern farmers was the general crop forecast on peaches and early potatoes. In ten Southern States below-average peach crops were indicated, caused by mild winter weather

Hazen Offers $75,000,000 Building Plan

5-Year Program for City, Sent to White House, Involves U. S. Aid.

Municipal Center, Jail, Schools, Libraries Are Included.

A proposed five-year building program for the District Government whose aggregate cost would be approximately $75,000,000 was submitted for White House approval yesterday by Commisioner Melvin C. Hazen.

Providing for erection of the long delayed Municipal Center and a new jail, schools, libraries, court buildings, health centers and other facilities, part of the expense would be borne by the Federal Government, according to Hazen's plan.

Hazen said he also discussed with McIntyre the nine tax bills introduced in the House last week by Representative Ross A. Collins, chairman of the committee on District appropriations.

The Commissioner, who was accompanied to the White House by Corporation Counsel Elwood Seal, reiterated his opposition to raising of $12,000,000 in new taxes, as planned by the nine bills, when the expected deficit for 1938 is only $6,000,000.

Silent on Discussion.

However, he did not state what information he had relayed to the President in this regard. While admitting that he also took up the District minimum wage law, declared valid last week by the Supreme Court, he refused to disclose what points were discussed or whether he had laid any recommendations before the President.

As for the five-year building expansion plan, Hazen said its approval by Congress would be sought. He hopes to have a bill introduced in this session not only authorizing the project but providing for Federal aid in defraying the cost.

"Since the buildings must harmonize with the Capital's monumental buildings, I believe it is only fair for the Federal Government to stand its share of the financial burden," Hazen declared.

The Jacobs fiscal relations report, repudiated by the Collins committee and denounced by Hazen when he testified before that body, would create a National Capital Planning Commission which would decide upon division of cost in municipal building construction—bridges, schools, courts, etc.

City Bears Cost Now.

At the present time the municipal government must bear the entire cost, the only Federal contribution being a lump sum which has no direct relation to any building expansion. As passed by the House, the District supply bill for 1938 carries a $5,000,000 contribution.

According to Hazen's scheme, the five-year building plan would be authorized and appropriated for independently of the annual supply bills. The appropriations measure now awaiting Senate action provides certain new construction, including a $200,000 health center and the Thomas Jefferson Memorial High School and Library.

The blanket program espoused by Hazen includes completion of Judiciary Square by construction of new buildings for the recorder of deeds and Juvenile Court; the Municipal Center, whose site is now in District ownership; replacement of the antiquated jail; additions to the workhouse and reformatory; replacement of Pennsylvania avenue bridge, and new schools, libraries and playgrounds.

In his testimony before the Collins committee two months ago Hazen pointed out District department heads, the Board of Education, National Capital Parks and Planning Commission and National Capital Parks office had recommended initiation of a six-year program whose cost would be about $116,000,000.

The improvements contemplated included land purchases for schools, parks and playgrounds; erection of new schools, libraries, public welfare buildings, court buildings and the Municipal Center, sewer and highway construction.

Relief, Idle Roll Set at 9,773,000

By the Associated Press.

A survey made for Secretary Wallace estimated yesterday that 9,773,000 persons were unemployed or were on relief jobs at the start of this year, compared with 12,838,000 idle in 1933.

Louis H. Bean, one of Wallace's economic advisers, reported potential gainful workers, excluding those engaged in agriculture, numbered 40,027,000 at the start of 1937, and that about one in four of these was unemployed or on relief.

He estimated the average annual wage for employed workers was $1,180 last year, compared with a low of $933 in 1933 and a peak of $1,388 in 1929.

3 Suspects Seized as Drive Opens to End Alleged Gouging by Exorbitant Loan Rates

The corporation counsel's office, the Police Department and Federal postal investigators have opened a drive against the alleged charging of exorbitant rates on loans, it was learned last night. More than 100 complaints have been received, many of them from Government employes, and three men have been arrested.

Those arrested and subsequently released on bond, according to Assistant Corporation Counsel Chester Gray, are Ben Haber, charged with violation of the insurance law, violation of the small loan law and "aiding in obtaining insurance in unauthorized companies;" Jack Schneider, of the 200 block E street northeast, violation of the small loan law, and Sol Mollack, of the 900 block Seventh street northwest, charged with violation of the small loan law and with violation of postal rules.

According to Gray, Mollack's alleged postal violation was in connection with letters of a "threatening" nature sent to persons who were delinquent in payments. Gray said Mollack had written a borrower saying that he would tell the borrower's "boss" unless the payment was made immediately.

Co-operating with Gray in the investigation are Assistant Corporation Counsel Nat Mahorner and Policeman L. A. Howard, of the hack inspector's office.

The investigation, it was said, will be city-wide in scope. It was inaugurated originally as an inquiry into alleged loan shark activities, but so many complaints were received in connection with the refinancing and repossession of autos that it has been transferred to that field.

Corporation Counsel Gray said up to 20 per cent interest had been charged by several refinancing companies, according to complaints.

A typical case cited by Gray was of an employe at the Government Printing Office who needed $25 to aid in paying for an operation on his child. This man owed $387.20 on a car for which he had contracted to pay $1,195.

The man, Gray said, went to a refinancing company here, and obtained the $25 loan. Before he had refinanced his car he had only $387.20 to pay. After securing the loan, he had contracted to pay the refinancing company $521 plus interest at 6 per cent.

The man, Gray said, was charged $89 for insurance, $3 for a notary fee, $32 interest in addition to the 6 per cent charge and $25 which he was loaned in cash. From this $15 was substracted as a credit on a former insurance policy on the car.

Canada Calls Police For Showdown Today As G. M. Plant Reopens

Clean Up Capital by Creating Work for Destitute, Idle Men

Washington's relief situation is grave.

More than 3,000 men are without work, and their families, totaling 10,000 persons, face great privation.

In an attempt to aid these less fortunate people The Washington Post suggests this plan for the public's consideration.

The District Commissioners, by proclamation, have declared April 19 to 30 "Clean-Up Week." Streets will be swept, houses painted and lawns cut. Why not use that week to take up part of our obligation to these unemployed men and their families?

If every person in the District, during that week, found some small cleaning job and gave it to one of the unemployed, a great amount of good would be done.

The District of Columbia Employment Center undoubtedly would be willing to act as an agency through which merchants and housewives could obtain the help of a man whose need has been investigated and found dire.

Many organizations throughout the city, including the Board of Public Welfare and Citizens' Committee already have manifested a deep concern for the unemployed. They, we believe, would support the plan.

If it meets with your approval, and you have or can find a job to be done, however small, we suggest you call the employment center, and thus give "Clean-Up Week" a real and lasting meaning.

Force Is Concentrated 35 Miles Away by Ontario Premier.

Pickets Are Reinforced About Big Factory At Oshawa.

On the Labor Front.

A showdown was expected today in the Canadian General Motors strike as police were concentrated at Toronto in case of trouble.

A conference of labor and industrial leaders to check the spread of sit-down strikes was suggested in the Senate.

Eight were killed and more than 20 injured in rioting between rival trade unions in Mexico.

Plants to Reopen.

Toronto, Ontario, April 9 (Canadian Press).—General Motors officials decided tonight to resume partial operations at the Oshawa plant tomorrow in what Premier Mitchell Hepburn predicted would be a showdown in the strike directed by organizers for the John L. Lewis labor organization.

The parts department of Oshawa will be opened under government protection, if necessary, the premier said.

However, Hepburn later said he was "hopeful" of a settlement of the strike by tomorrow night.

He made this statement after a two-hour conference with a representative of the United Automobile Workers of America and four representatives of the local union.

He announced he would confer with General Motors officers tomorrow morning and with the union men tomorrow afternoon.

Another Plant Closed.

Determined to guard against any disorder and vigorously opposed to the Lewis Committee for Industrial Organization, the premier concentrated mounted and provincial police here—35 miles from Oshawa and ready for a dash to that city at a moment's notice.

As there were indications the strike might spread to other industries, four representatives of the Oshawa local of the United Automobile Workers of America Union, affiliated with the C. I. O., came here to confer with Hepburn.

In addition to the 3,700 workers out at the Oshawa plant, 500 others were idle at Windsor where General Motors itself closed down.

A union meeting was called at the McKinnon industries plant, a General Motors subsidiary at St. Catherines, Ont., for a vote on joining the strike. The plant employs 1,700 men.

"We know what these agitators are up to," Hepburn exclaimed of the C. I. O. organizers. "We were advised only a few hours ago that they are working their way into the lumber camps, the pulp mills and our mines. Well, that has got to stop—and we are going to stop it. If necessary, we'll raise an army to do so."

Ultimatum By Union.

Advised that General Motors had decided to reopen the parts department, the Ontario premier predicted "that is when the showdown will come," adding that General Motors "will get all the protection from this government that they require."

He said he was told that union leaders would try to prevent moving of parts from the factory and declared that such an effort would be illegal.

At Detroit, Homer Martin, international president of the United Automobile Workers of America, said tonight "that we expected the 'Detroit agreement' with General Motors to apply to its Canadian plants, and since the corporation says it doesn't, we'll expect them to sign another like it that does."

G. M. executives there have said the pact agreed on March 12, after the extensive strike in the United States, did not apply to the Canadian company, which they said is not controlled by the New York

Cold Drizzle Again Delays Blossom Fete

As cheerless skies poured a chilling drizzle on pink buds yesterday, causing a second postponement of the Cherry Blossom Festival, the Merchants and Manufacturers Association voiced vigorous opposition to the Tidal Basin site of the proposed Jefferson Memorial, which would cause uprooting of the Nipponese trees.

The festival will take place this evening at 7:45 o'clock, C. Melvin Sharpe, chairman of the fete committee, said. However, the weather man predicted fair and continued cool weather for today.

Would Keep Tidal Basin.

In attacking the memorial site, meanwhile, the board of governors of the association called attention to the destruction of much of the present Tidal Basin, along with the famous trees.

"The Japanese cherry trees," asserted the governors, "are one of the attraction that bring thousands of people to Washington each year.

"This would be a tremendous esthetic and commercial loss to the city, as it would be necessary to fill in the present basin and excavate three other pools, which would change the present beauty spot into an ugly eyesore throughout the period of several years required to change the terrain."

Suggest Other Sites.

It is the opinion of the association, the statement added, that there are other available sites for the memorial which would be "more appropriate."

"These sites would not necessitate the destruction of one of Washington's greatest natural attractions, and would be much less expensive."

The festival postponement found the little Japanese queen of the fete, Sakiko Saito, daughter of the Japanese Ambassador, and her court ready to carry on, despite the weather.

When Mme. Saito was called about delaying the event, she assured Sharpe her daughters were healthy and sturdy and not at all afraid of the inclement weather.

Pope Plans Auto Rides.

Rumors of Rise In Dollar Cited For Franc Loss

Paris Financiers Blame Trade Slump Also, as Drop Is Checked.

For further discussion of this subject read Shively's Market Review—Page 18.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, April 9.—Persistent rumors of a contemplated rise in the dollar and the prospect of one of the largest trade deficits in French history were blamed in financial quarters tonight for the sudden drop of the franc.

The downward course of French money—the cheapest for American tourists in four years—was checked late today for the first time in two days.

In unofficial trading after the bourse closed France's sagging currency recovered a small fraction of its losses against the dollar and the pound, mounting to a value of 22.30 francs to the dollar against the official closing of 22.40 and 109.25 to the pound against 109.90. The gains were 10 centimes on the dollar and 65 centimes on the pound.

Denies Slump Intended.

Although government quarters acknowledged that a cheaper franc would not be unwelcome in view of the forthcoming exposition and an anticipated bumper tourist year, Finance Minister Vincent Auriol issued a denial that the government proposed creating "a sort of tourist franc."

Auriol's statement counteracted the opinion in some financial quarters that the slump from 4.593 cents per franc at the opening yesterday to 4.464 at the official closing today was purposely allowed in the hope a cheap franc would bring a good share of the summer tourists to France.

Most of the unfavorable balance of trade, amounting to a deficit of 3,532,000,000 francs ($157,648,480) for the first two months of 1937 as compared with 1,633,000,000 francs ($72,997,120) in the corresponding period last year, was ascribed by financiers to forward buying of raw materials, almost entirely for rearmament purposes.

Since many of these commitments are due for payment or are about to become due, experts said rumors of a higher dollar led Frenchmen to sell francs in purchase of dollars in a rush to cover.

On the other hand, some financial circles said, notable increases by

Latimer's Party Ties Block Security Board Appointment

By William V. Nessly.

President Roosevelt's nomination of Murray W. Latimer to succeed John G. Winant as a member of the Social Security Board has encountered legal obstacles that are providing the Administration with a problem, it was learned last night.

For seven weeks the nomination has lain in the Senate without any action toward confirmation having been taken. Discovery of the fact that the law provides that not more than two members of the board of three shall be members of the same political party is blocking action, it was learned.

Winant is a Republican and former Governor of New Hampshire, though he has been an active supporter of the New Deal. When President Roosevelt appointed the first board to administer the new social security act, in August, 1935, he named Winant chairman, with a six-year term.

Arthur J. Altmeyer, then Second Assistant Secretary of Labor, and Vincent M. Miles, attorney, of Fort Smith, Ark., and a member of the Democratic National Committee for a number of years, were named to the other positions on the board, as Democrats.

Winant first resigned from the board last fall, giving as his reason a desire to reply as a private citizen to Republican campaign attacks on the Social Security Act. After the election President Roosevelt persuaded him to return to assist in launching the board on its vast task of compiling the employment records of some 26,000,000 workers affected by the new law.

In February, however, Winant de-

crat), Massachusetts, which was presented ot the Senate Judiciary Comsented to the Senate Judiciary Committee, said:

"While sincerely sympathetic to many of the aims which President Roosevelt has sought to achieve, I regard his proposal to enlarge the Supreme Court as extremely unwise and quite unnecessary * * * unwise because it affords no assurance of achieving its alleged ends.

"No judiciary made up of political 'yes-men' could maintain public confidence and respect.

"There simply is no emergency such as requires this ravaging of the court * * * To spring it (the plan) now and to try and whip into line the huge Democratic majority in Congress is a flagrant instance of political bad faith, which it would be difficult to match in our entire history."

Burke Cites "Butchery."

In Chicago, Senator Edward R. Burke (Democrat), Nebraska, and Representative Sam B. Pettengill (Democrat), Indiana, joined in assailing the President's plan. Burke called the program "butchery of the court," and Pettengill attacked it as "reactionary in the extreme—not liberal."

Before the Senate Judiciary Committee, Dean William E. Masterson, of the University of Missouri law school; William M. Cain, college of law, University of Notre Dame, and Frederic R. Coudert, chairman of the New York City Bar Association, appeared in opposition to the measure.

The usual meager audience and minority committee attendance of the past week, testifying to the slackened interest in the hearings, did not deter the opposition witnesses from presenting vigorous arguments against the court-reform program.

"Pre-Pledging" Attacked.

Coudert termed the plan "legislative trespass upon the dignity and independence of the Supreme Court;" Masterson insisted that the plan would "leave open a door through which autocracy may enter," and Cain opposed "pre-pledging of judges."

Scott, speaking for the plan, stressing the "reactionary viewpoint" of the Supreme Court, said: "The forces which have chained this Nation to a highly individualistic and destructive competitive industrialism have succeeded in dominating the Supreme Court. Is this domination sacrosanct?"

Smith's bill, to prohibit interstate transportation of goods and merchandise produced under conditions that would have made their production unlawful in the State into which they were consigned, will be given public hearings at which national labor leaders, representatives of the Interstate Commerce Commission and representatives of industry will be invited to testify.

Eaton Criticizes Farley.

By focusing the Federal action against movement of sweatshop-made goods or child-labor-made goods in one State into a State where such goods are outlawed, Smith hopes to pattern his bill's action along the lines of the Ashurst-Sumners law banning the movement of prison-made goods in interstate commerce, recently upheld by the Supreme Court.

In the Senate, Senator Warren Austin (Republican), Vermont, attacked the President's program on the grounds that delays in Supreme Court procedure often proceeded from Justice Department requests, and not from court congestion.

In the House, Representative Eaton (Republican), New Jersey, criticized a statement by "St. James Farley" that "we will call the roll of Congress after they get through talking." He urged that the House "quit being a rubber stamp."

President's Court Plan Held 'Certain' By Berle, Ex-Aide

Toledo, Ohio, April 9 (AP).—Prof. A. A. Berle, jr., New York City chamberlain and reputedly one of President Roosevelt's original "brain trusters," tonight declared his "private advices" confirmed the Administration's claims that the judicial reorganization bill "can be passed whenever a vote on it is pressed."

"Plainly, it is a judicial crisis rather than a constitutional crisis," he said, "and the plan of the President, though it leaves much to be desired, may already be accepted as an established fact."

"While he may not have had a mandate for his method, the President did have a mandate for his policies; and he had a mandate likewise to appoint judges who would support those policies, for precisely that issue was raised in the last campaign."

Lindberghs Arrive In London, Go to Home

London, April 9 (AP).—Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh flew back to England from Munich today, ending a ten-week aerial tour of Europe and the East. The couple landed at Gatwick Airdrome and went immediately to their home to see Jon, their little son.

It was generally believed Col. Lindbergh combined business with pleasure on the trip by making aerial surveys of India. They maintained their customary silence to the end of the flight, however.

Belgium Ship Aground.

London, April 9 (AP).—The Belgian steamer Anversville (8,433 tons) ran aground in a fog tonight off Dungeness Point on the English Channel. The sea was smooth. A lifeboat put out to the steamer's assistance.

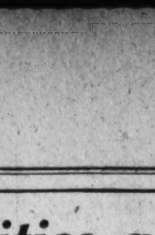
Educational Qualifications of Roosevelt Judicial Appointees Called Lowest in Years.

By Franklyn Waltman

A PERTINENT aspect of the controversy over the President's Supreme Court reorganization program that has not received a great deal of attention is the caliber of men Mr. Roosevelt has named to the Federal bench during the four years he has been President.

It has been intimated that if the President is given authority to name six new justices to the Supreme Court he would not name desirable men, and it has been contended openly that he would name men sympathetic to his political philosophy who could be expected to hold valid his legislative undertakings. All this, however, is a venture into the realm of speculation. What has Mr. Roosevelt done in the past in regard to filling judicial vacancies? Has he sought the best legal talent he could find, men of learning as well as character? Or has he regarded judicial appointments as political plums to be awarded to deserving party workers?



WALTMAN.

These questions open a field for research which requires both time and patience. Any casual examination of the "Who's Who in America" sketches of a group of the Roosevelt judicial appointments, however, indicates that mediocrity predominates. Few of those named judges by the President brought honor to the bench to which they were appointed. Indeed, most of them were honored by the appointment and for the first time, in many cases, became known outside of their home towns.

Of unusual interest at this time is a study which Judge Merrill E. Otis, of the Federal District Court for Western Missouri, made last year into the educational qualifications of the judges named by President Roosevelt and how they compared with the appointees of his six predecessors. The results of this study were given by Judge Otis in an address to the American Bar Association last August—long before the present controversy developed.

Judge Otis' study encompassed 47 appointments which President Roosevelt had made to the Federal district and circuit court of appeals benches. He found that Mr. Roosevelt had the poorest record, as far as the educational qualifications of his judicial appointments went, of any President since the turn of the century.

Of the circuit and district judges named by President Roosevelt, 49 per cent had college training; 25 per cent were college graduates; 55.3 per cent were law school graduates and 17 per cent had graduated from both college and law school.

The significance of those figures becomes clear when the educational qualifications of the Roosevelt appointees are compared to the educational qualifications of the entire Federal district and circuit bench and when they are compared with the educational qualifications of the appointees of other Presidents.

Thus at the time that Judge Otis completed his study—last summer—70.3 per cent of all the Federal district and circuit judges had college training; 50.2 per cent were college graduates; 58.8 per cent were law school graduates, and 29.1 per cent graduated from both college and law school.

Comparison in percentages of the Roosevelt judges with those of other Presidents, as found by Judge Otis, follows:

President	College Training	College Graduates	Law School Graduates	Law School College Graduates
T. Roosevelt	77.0	55.8	32.7	23.0
Wilson	69.3	36.4	47.0	22.5
Harding	69.0	54.8	54.8	40.5
Coolidge	73.7	52.4	60.0	36.0
Hoover	66.6	57.8	66.6	40.0
F. D. Roosevelt	49.0	25.5	55.3	17.0

Thus it will be seen that despite the greater opportunities for high education which have developed in the last 30 years and despite the increased number of college graduates in the legal profession, President Roosevelt's judicial appointees have a worse record from the viewpoint of educational qualifications than the appointees of any President since 1901.

Certainly the inference cannot be drawn that Democrats with college and law school degrees cannot be found—that Republicans are better educated than Democrats. The fault would seem to lie in the appointing power.

In setting forth the results of Judge Otis' study here it is contended that educational qualifications are the best or only standard on which the competence of a judge should be considered. Many a learned jurist, as well as men in many other fields of life, has neither college nor law school degrees. But they are the exceptions. It is undoubtedly an important and significant factor in any large group.

It is rather surprising that in this day of specialized knowledge and education only 55.3 per cent of President Roosevelt's judicial appointees were law school graduates.

Another point frequently overlooked in the contention of proponents of the President's court scheme that they are trying to "unpack" the court is the fact that Herbert Hoover named Justice Benjamin N. Cardozo to the Supreme Court and that Calvin Coolidge named Justice Harlan F. Stone. Surely these Presidents were not placing men of their personal economic predilections on the Supreme Court. Nor were they naming men sympathetic with their political philosophies.

It may be a strange thought in this day when judicial appointments seem to be considered as instruments for the advancing of political philosophies, but perhaps former Presidents Coolidge and Hoover when they named Justices Stone and Cardozo were seeking only to add men of outstanding legal talent and character to the Supreme Court.

Iowans Hear Talk By J. M. Hepbron On Solving Crime

Scientific crime detection technique, that will "out-Sherlock" Sherlock Holmes himself, was described last night by James M. Hepbron, director of the Washington Criminal Justice Association, in an address before the Iowa State Society at the Shoreham Hotel.

"The professional criminal is using the best that science can offer," the speaker said in attacking the conventional conception of a criminal as a person of low mentality. Mental tests, he said, reveal the inmates of prisons have higher ratings than the draft army of 1917 than the guards at the prisons and often the wardens themselves.

He described the lie-detector which, he said, will play an increasingly important part in awarding parole to convicts. He pointed out that the mechanism distinguished between excitement and a guilty conscience.

About 150 Iowans heard the program which included soprano solos by Mrs. Allen Shreve, accompanied by Mrs. Susan Sackett.

Politics in Pensions Charged by Epstein

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, April 9.—A political "stranglehold" has been fastened on old-age pension systems in many parts of the country, Abraham Epstein, pioneer advocate of old-age pensions, charged today at the opening session of the tenth anniversary national conference of the American Association for Social Security.

Asserting grants in many States are made frequently "not on the basis of need, as the laws intend, but on the basis of political expediency," Epstein urged immediate action to end these alleged practices.

Striking Reliefers Driven From Office Of Ohio Governor

Columbus, Ohio, April 9 (AP).—Sheriff's deputies cleared the Governor's office late today of a group of relief clients who had expressed determination to remain until their relief demands were met.

The deputies removed the screaming and shouting men and women one by one, two deputies to a person.

Striking the backs of the legs of the reliefers, they herded them from the richly furnished Governor's office, where they started their sit-down Wednesday evening and maintained it in shifts of 30.

The dispersal came after the relief group had defied a reading of the riot act by Chief Deputy Ralph Garner.

They had been warned at noon today that they must vacate by 5 p. m. so the office could be cleaned.

They had demanded a $50,000,000 relief appropriation

First Lady Predicts Improved Conditions

New York, April 9 (AP).—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt said tonight at the silver anniversary dinner of the Girl Scouts of America she did not believe "the next generation is going to tolerate the conditions we have tolerated in this age."

Speaking on a program with Sir Gerald Campbell, British consul general here, and Mrs. Harper Sibley, wife of the president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, Mrs. Roosevelt said the depression has "forced" people to know more about government than at any other time in history.

U. S. Attorney Asks Court to Uphold Security

Jackson Is Spokesman; Butler Fears Federal Rule of Schools.

By the Associated Press.

A Government spokesman told the Supreme Court yesterday a decision upholding the Federal social security law would be "the greatest contribution during this generation to the art of government in this country."

Robert H. Jackson, Assistant Attorney General, made this statement during debate which produced conflicting questions from members of the court. While Jackson was arguing, Justice Butler asked whether the principle of the legislation could not be employed by the Federal Government to regulate schools.

"I suggest it is not fantastic to say that, if one is within the reach of Congress, the other is not far removed," he asserted, raising his voice.

Justice Brandeis commented:

"The question before the court is whether this particular purpose and limitation exceeds the power of Congress. It is very interesting to consider, as an academic matter, where to draw the line; but I find it difficult to see where that is related to the question before us."

Butler Draws Laugh.

"I am sure you're not inviting us to look at this through a keyhole," Butler replied.

The audience laughed at the exchange.

Justice Roberts, whose vote might determine whether the act is sustained or overthrown, since it has been the deciding factor in some other cases, remained silent during the five-hour argument.

The debate was completed late in the day, after a denunciation of the measure by Neil P. Sterne, attorney for the Charles C. Steward Machine Co. of Alabama. Sterne contended the law illegally coerces the States to act as the Federal Government wills.

A decision as to whether the statute is constitutional is possible April 26.

Brandeis Questions Sterne.

The disputed legislation imposes a pay-roll tax on employers. Ninety per cent of the amount collected under the unemployment insurance section is refunded to States which pass unemployment compensation laws approved by the Federal Social Security Board.

Brandeis also questioned Sterne concerning the attorney's statement that the Federal Government had no power to provide relief unless the existence of the Government itself and its people is threatened.

"Does the Federal Government," Brandeis asked, "have to fold its hands and hope that if another depression develops it will be met we know not how? Doesn't such a thing as preparedness exist?"

"The Government is attempting to deal with a perfectly practical situation that has to be dealt with if we are to handle intelligently important governmental problems," Brandeis added.

Sterne replied that he thought it a problem for the States to handle.

"And the Federal Government can do nothing to induce the States to act?" Brandeis inquired.

"Not by constraint or coercion or compulsion," Sterne said.

Earlier in the day, Charles E. Wyzanski, jr., special assistant to the Attorney General, argued that the legislation promoted the general welfare by protecting the unemployed against hardship.

He also contended it would aid in "preventing the worst effects of a future depression."

Davis Discusses Peace, Economics

London, April 9 (AP).—President Roosevelt's traveling ambassador, Norman H. Davis, turned from the sugar conference to other international issues today, outlining his Government's views on world peace, disarmament and economic co-operation.

The white-haired envoy conferred separately for half an hour at his hotel with Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden of Great Britain and Charles Spinasse, the French minister of economy.

Pan-American Clipper Resumes Mapping Trip

Kingman Reef, April 9 (AP).—Continuing its exploration for a proposed airline between Auckland, New Zealand, and Alameda, Calif., the Pan-American Clipper took off at 8:38 a. m. today for Pearl Harbor, Honolulu. The flight of 1,067 miles is one of a series of four which total 6,820 miles in the return voyage from New Zealand.

Army Airmen Ordered West For War Tests

G. H. Q. Corps Concentrates May 1 in Speed Trial, Maneuvers.

Concentration of virtually the entire General Headquarters air force in California, beginning May 1, was ordered by the Army yesterday for a month of maneuvers.

Participating will be approximately 3,000 officers and enlisted men and 244 fighting planes.

Air craft will be based at March Field, Riverside, Calif.; Hamilton Field, San Rafael and various commercial and municipal flying fields.

In direct command will be Maj. Gen. F. M. Andrews, commander of the Headquarters air force.

Speed Dashes.

On May Day planes will take off from various sections of the Nation on speed dashes to the Pacific Coast concentration points. The rapidity with which the widely separated units can reach their destination is one of the principal problems of the maneuvers.

Following concentration of the air armada, daily maneuvers, involving actual offensive and defensive battle practice, will be performed by bombardment, attack and pursuit squadrons.

Participating with G. H. Q. already stationed on the Pacific Coast will be units from Langley Field, Va.; Barksdale Field, La., and Selfridge Field, Mich.

The entire personnel of the First Pursuit Group at Selfridge Field will be ferried in 15 huge Army transport planes to the operating airdrome at Muroc Lake, Calif.

Stops are to be made at Muskogee, Okla.; Amarillo, Tex.; Winslow, Ariz., and Albuquerque, N. M.

All missions performed by the pilots and their planes will be on a wartime scale.

Average flying time required for each mission will be from three hours, for the smaller pursuit planes, to six hours for the bombers.

Aiding Gen. Andrews in command will be Lieut. Col. H. J. Kerr, as chief of staff; Brig. Gen. D. C. Emmons and Brig. Gen. G. C. Brant.

Damage Is Heavy In Miami Storm

Miami, Fla., April 9 (AP).—Tornadic winds roared with a severe electrical storm through Miami's southwest residential section before dawn today, injuring a number of persons, demolishing a frame dwelling and damaging several others.

Sam Scowins, about 58, suffering critical head injuries, and Mrs. Lillian Brewer, 40, less seriously hurt, were taken to a hospital. Other persons were treated by physicians.

Corporate Tax Revision Wins House Backing

Doughton, Vinson Favor 'Relief' for Small Corporations.

be amended so as to effect the relief you have in mind."

Representative Vinson, whose proposed "cushions" in the corporate surplus tax were virtually wiped out in the final draft of the tax, said yesterday he thought "there is a good likelihood some relief will be granted this session."

"Treasury yields may be off somewhat," said Vinson, "but regardless of yields, I believe justice demands that we remedy present inequities. I also believe we should write exemptions into the law to permit plant modernization and expansion."

Vinson attributed much of the drop in revenues below estimates to postponement of the operation of the windfall tax, extensions granted big taxpayers and resort to the quarterly payment method. He predicted most of the loss will be recouped by June 15.

Bulwinkle recalled that Chairman Jesse H. Jones of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, during the last campaign, urged amendments to encourage industrial modernization, replacement of plant, equipment and machinery, to aid rebuilding, and to relieve corporations laboring under debt.

Jones said at that time he had "every confidence" the President would be willing for Congress to review the measure.

Bulwinkle advanced the following three examples of how the tax affects corporations hard hit by the depression:

"The first is corporation A, which has a large deficit; and, if the directors should declare a dividend, they, the directors, are individually responsible to the creditors of the corporation under the North Carolina law. And, yet, if the dividend is not declared and paid, and if the corporation happens to have made a profit for the year, they will have to pay the tax, which is nothing more or less than penalizing the corporations because the directors acted in accordance with the law."

"The second example, corporation B, has outstanding preferred stock, and under the preferred-stock agreement a sinking fund must be set aside before dividends on the common stock can be paid. The working capital of this corporation does not permit the setting aside of the sinking fund, and dividends are, therefore, prohibited. Under the revenue act of 1936 the corporation will be required to pay the surtax on the undistributed earnings, which payment places a penalty upon the corporation because its management acted in good faith with the holders of the preferred stock.

"The third example is the case of corporation C, which is in receivership, and, therefore, naturally cannot pay any dividends to the stockholders. There is a question, we assume, as to whether or not the corporation is insolvent. If it is decided that, although the corporation is in the hands of a receiver, it is not yet insolvent, then the corporation would have to pay the undistributed profits tax; which brings us to the point of the absurdity in this situation, because it cannot make any distribution of its profits to the stockholders on account of being in the receivership, and it is likewise penalized."

Dentist Denies He Was Father Of Girl's Baby

Dr. Miller Again Attacks State Allegations in Death Case.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., April 9.—Interviewed in his cell at Albemarle County jail today, Dr. Richard G. Miller, 53-year-old Charlottesville dentist, sentenced yesterday to serve 18 years in prison for the second-degree murder of Cleo Sprouse, a senior at Lane High School, once again denied responsibility for the condition of the girl before she died.

"I'll tell you and the world," he said, "that I was not responsible for the condition of the girl. I always treated her as I would a daughter of my own. Never did our relations take on the seriousness that was reported."

When asked concerning charges or inferences of premeditation, the prisoner flatly denied any thought of murder had "crossed his mind." "I wouldn't have done what I did, if murder was in my mind," he explained and emphasized his words with gestures. "I never would have driven up to that filling station to get gas if such were my thoughts."

"Nor would I have left those clues behind. I might just as well have left my hat by the girl's body."

Miller emphatically denied that he intended to place suspicion upon the university students. "That never was my intention. I thought of three or four places where the body might be left, but it was not until I was approaching Fry's Spring road that this spot came suddenly into my head."

"All that I ask now is that they hurry up and take me to Richmond so that I can get to work," Dr. Miller said, "I just can't stand around doing nothing. I want to be busy with my hands even if it's only sweeping the yard."

The hope that his family would be treated kindly by friends concluded the interview.

Cultist Gives Up On Girl's Charges

Los Angeles, April 9 (AP).—John W. Hunt, 33, West Coast leader in the Father Divine cult movement, surrendered late today at the United States marshal's office on Mann act charges.

Hunt appeared unexpectedly within two hours after an attempt was made to "surrender" him without producing him personally or giving Federal officers, who have sought him two weeks, even a glimpse of him.

United States Commissioner David B. Head rejected the proposal.

Hunt's brother, Warren Hunt, appeared at Head's office, exhibited $1,000 and offered to post it to guarantee the fugitive former advertising man would be in court when his trial is called.

4 Police Injured In Relief Rioting

Cairo, Ill., April 9 (AP).—Two State highway patrolmen and two Cairo police officers were beaten severely late today by a group of colored men at the Alexander County emergency relief office when the officers sought to take out the men's leader for questioning.

In the melee shots were fired and L. M. Dowell, elderly colored man, was shot in the leg and taken to a hospital for treatment.

Italian Bachelors Face Wage Slashes

Rome, April 9 (AP).—Fancy-free Italian bachelors, taxed for the privilege of remaining single, wondered tonight whether they would face the alternative of marrying or earning less money. The cabinet will meet tomorrow to consider a program for increasing the Italian birth rate. It already carries indorsement of the Fascist grand council.

The program includes priority in occupation and promotion for fathers of large families; adjustment of salaries, so fathers of the big families will get preferential wages; establishment of a national big families association. The bachelor tax now in effect mounts as one advances in years and salary.

Counterfeit $5 Notes Flood New York Area

New York, April 9 (AP).—The Secret Service, it was learned today, has sent out 20,000 circulars to banks and shopkeepers here, warning that an unprecedented flood of counterfeit $5 bills has hit the metropolitan area.

One bank, it was reported, said the bills were coming in at the rate of 100 a week and were being confiscated from customers.

Sit-Down Ban Signed.

Montpelier, Vt., April 9 (AP).—Gov. George B. Aiken today signed a bill making sit-down strikes illegal in Vermont. The measure, the first of its kind signed in the country, provides for a maximum sentence of two years in prison or a $1,000 fine.

Over 2 Million Is Bequeathed By Mrs. Lisner

$1,000,000 Trust Fund to Be Established for Husband.

An estate of more than $2,000,000 was left by the late Mrs. Laura Hartmann Lisner, wife of Abram Lisner, one-time owner of the Palais Royal Department Store, it was learned in District Court when her will was filed. The exact size of the estate will not be shown until a petition for probate is filed.

Mrs. Lisner, who died at her home, 1723 Massachusetts avenue northwest, March 26, is survived by her husband and a nephew, John T. Graham, a retired business man.

The will directed that a million-dollar trust fund be set up for Mr. Lisner, who is to receive the income for life. Upon his death the fund is to be used to pay numerous bequests. Some of them are $10,000 to a niece, Gertrude Luchs; $5,000 to Eugene Luchs, her husband; George W. White, president of the National Metropolitan Bank, $5,000; Mary Norwood, Baltimore, $3,000; Millie Toplitz, a niece, $5,000, and to each of her eight grandnephews and grandnieces, $3,000.

Other bequests are $200,000 to the Washington Home for Incurables; a like sum to the Henry and Annie Hurst Home for the Blind; $50,000 to the Presbyterian Home for the Aged; $10,000 to the Washington Home for Foundlings, and the Washington Sanitarium, $100,000. Two other bequests that were contingent upon Mr. Lisner's death provided $25,000 to Mr. Graham and $10,000 to Henrietta Posner, of New York City.

Mrs. Lisner's summer home at Springfield, N. H., is to go to her husband along with the portion of the estate not expended in meeting bequests. Executors were Mr. Lisner, Mr. White, William A. Rodenberg and Leon Tobriner, who have been attorneys for the Lisners for 50 years.

Funeral Is Today For Miss Wallace

Funeral services for Miss Kate Wallace, 95, will be held at 2 p. m., today, in All Saints' Episcopal Church. Burial will be in Beltsville, Md.

Miss Wallace had known Washington society in the days before the Civil War, when the Capital was only a roughly outlined plan.

Miss Wallace, descendant of an old Maryland family and daughter of William A. Wallace, southern Maryland plantation owner, died Thursday at her home, 3803 Jocelyn street northwest. She had been active in the Episcopal Church and for many years had been a member of the Clan MacGregor.

Surviving are her sister, Mrs. Florence Ellen MacGregor; seven nieces, four nephews and several grand and great-grandnieces and nephews.

Statute Blocks Security Board Appointment

cided to leave the Government service definitely in order to engage in private business, and the President withdrew his second nomination, which still was before the Seante, and sent in its place the nomination of Latimer, now chairman of the Railroad Retirement Board. He specified that Altmeyer should be chairman of the board.

Classed as Democrat.

Though it has been reported in some quarters that there is a question whether Latimer should be classed as a Republican or a Democrat, Who's Who lists him definitely as Democrat. To confirm his nomination as a member of the board, with Altmeyer and Miles already members, would create apparently a board of three Democratic members, a situation expressly forbidden in the law.

There has been some talk that Miles might not remain long with the board. He was ill for some time during the early part of the board's existence, but apparently is fully recovered now. There has been talk of his appointment to a Federal judgeship, and there is a vacancy on the bench for the Eastern District of Arkansas. Miles' home is in the Western District.

In case he is given this appointment or some other, there still will be room on the board for both Latimer and a Republican.

Term Ends in August.

Miles' term will not expire until August of this year. When the President first created the board he gave Winant a six-year term, to run until 1941, but, to prevent all the terms from expiring at the same time, he gave Altmeyer a four-year term, expiring in 1939, and Miles was named for two years, until August, 1937.

Should Miles continue a member of the board until that time, it appeared last night that it would be impossible to bring about confirmation of Latimer's nomination for some months.

Meanwhile, Latimer is continuing as head of the Railroad Retirement Board and attempting to work out, with representatives of the railroads and rail unions, as well as with Congressional leaders and Treasury experts, the controverted proposed substitute pay-roll tax law to finance the railroad pension system administered by his board.

Reich May Offer Trade to Belgium

Berlin, April 9 (AP).—Germany will offer Belgium a much larger share of business for Antwerp Harbor in return for badly needed raw materials from the Belgian Congo, well informed sources believed tonight.

Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, president of the Reichsbank, will seek some such arrangement when he confers with leading financial experts at Brussels next week, these sources believed.

The impending visit to Brussels was described officially as purely coincidental with acceptance by Premier Paul van Zeeland, of an assignment to investigate international trade questions. This was regarded in high German official circles, however, as of great importance.

Prospector Who Lost Fortune Dies at 100

St. Edouard de Napierville, Quebec, April 9 (Canadian Press).—Leovold Dorais, who made and lost a Western mining fortune and then recouped, died yesterday. He was 100 years old.

It was almost 80 years ago that he went West from his Sorel, Quebec, birthplace as a prospector. After amassing a sizable fortune in the Northwest Territories, he came back and sank it all in real estate. When it was gone, he went back West and piled up another nest-egg that kept him for the rest of his life on a big farm.

Four Orphans Ask $200,000 In Auto Deaths

Mother and Father Killed, Children, Sue Firm, Driver of Car.

Four small children, the eldest 11, who were orphaned when their mother and father were killed in an automobile crash at Waterloo, Md., yesterday in District Court filed four suits asking $200,000 from Capitol Motors, Inc., 215 Pennsylvania avenue southeast, and a like amount from one of its employes, Joseph Marks, who was driving the death car.

The parents, Mary Eckloff and Charles A. Eckloff, received fatal injuries April 18, 1936, when the car crashed into a truck that was crossing the Baltimore boulevard at Waterloo.

The children, Charles Andrew Eckloff, jr., 11, Mary Ellen Eckloff, 10, Joan Ann Eckloff, 8, and Evelyn Ann Eckloff, were not with their parents at the time. Because they are minors they were represented by George Eckloff, their grandfather, who has been appointed administrator of their estates.

Through Attorneys A. L. Newmyer and David Bress, he charged the car Marks was driving was not carefully operated and was speeding. Marks was pictured as the agent for the Motors Co., and was said to be on duty for the company at the time of the crash.

The children live with their grandfather at 2842 Belair place northeast.

President May Get Coal Act Monday

By the Associated Press.

House supporters of the Guffey-Vinson coal-control bill said yesterday they hoped the legislation would go to President Roosevelt for his signature by Monday.

The Senate adopted yesterday a Senate-House conference report compromising differences over the legislation. Representative Vinson (Democrat), Kentucky, immediately presented the report to the House and later said he hoped for a vote on Monday.

The bill, designed as a substitute for a law invalidated by the Supreme Court last year, would create a national bituminous coal commission to fix prices and establish a code of fair practices for the soft-coal industry.

Women's Heavy Sports Hit by Vatican Paper

Vatican City, April 9 (AP).—Excessive sports for women—both single and married—were proscribed by the official Vatican newspaper Osservatore Romano today.

In a sharp attack on women's participation in sports, the newspaper said excessive sports made women sterile.

Keep Up Relief, 4 Governors Ask President

Two Representatives Also Oppose Reduction in WPA Rolls.

Four State Governors and representatives of two others yesterday carried to President Roosevelt a request that the Works Progress Administration rolls be continued at the present strength through the next fiscal year, beginning July 1.

The State executives' visit to the White House was in the nature of a follow-up of their conference with the President on March 6, when they protested against reported Administration plans to drop 600,000 persons from the rolls by June. At that time the President agreed to see the Governors again before he sends to Congress his relief budget for the coming fiscal 12 months. He now plans to send up the budget message about the middle of next week.

For an hour and a half yesterday afternoon the visitors went over with the President their contention that the States cannot do more than they are doing at present to care for the needy. Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau and WPA Administrator Harry Hopkins participated in the conference as they had in the previous one.

After the discussion Gov. Herbert Lehman of New York, leader of the delegation, declined to give any information regarding it.

"We have no comment to make," he said. "The only person who can talk about the conference is the President."

Other Governors present were Elmer Benson of Minnesota, Philip La Follette of Wisconsin and Robert E. Quinn of Rhode Island. Representative John W. McCormack (Democrat), of Massachusetts, represented Gov. Charles F. Hurley of that State, and Leo M. Lyons, State relief administrator, represented Gov. Henry Horner of Illinois.

Indications that either the Governors' previous protest against WPA cuts in the current fiscal year had been effective or that their fears a cut was to be made were groundless came later in the day when Hopkins told newspapermen that the rolls now contain about 2,200,000 names, about the same number as in February. It had been reported that the President and Hopkins intended to reduce the number to 1,600,000 by June 1, but Hopkins said yesterday he had told the House Appropriations Committee in January only that it was hoped private industry would absorb enough of the relief clients to permit such a reduction.

Before seeing the Governors, President Roosevelt told newspapermen at his press conference yesterday morning that he would not arrive at the total figure to be recommended in the relief budget until about 24 hours before sending his message to the Capitol. He said he had not started work on the message yet.

Last January the President mentioned $1,500,000,000 as approximately the amount that probably would be needed for relief in the coming year. However, continuation of the present total on WPA rolls could hardly be accomplished on that sum. The United States Conference of Mayors has asked that $2,200,000,000 be appropriated, and a House bloc headed by Representative Maverick (Democrat), Texas, is seeking to make the total $2,400,000,000.

The President plans to send, along with the budget recommendation, a message recasting the estimates of receipts and expenditures for the coming fiscal year, based on new returns received since last December. One important factor in the changed budget situation was the decline of March income tax payments below estimates.

Senate Group Reports War Price-Fixing Bill

By the Associated Press.

The Senate Military Affairs Committee reported favorably yesterday a bill providing for mobilization of both manpower and material resources of the Nation in time of war.

Under it the President would be given authority to fix prices. All profits of a business above its previous three-year average would be taxed at the rate of 95 per cent.

Red Snow, Rare Birds, Plants Among '36 Smithsonian Finds

Red snow, a new type of flying squirrel from West Virginia, new and beautiful birds, and connecting links in man's complex history were among the myriad discoveries of scientists from the Smithsonian Institution, tersely reported yesterday in the annual summary of the year's activities.

Eighteen expeditions explored far places from the hyacinth-fringed lakes of Honduras to the frigid wastes of the Arctic, bringing back rare biological and mineral specimens and relics, the report shows.

Capt. "Bob" Bartlett, the Arctic explorer, took an expedition to Greenland which brought back two live baby musk oxen and a sample of red snow that falls on the northeast coast of that frigid land.

The mammal and bird life of certain mountain areas of West Virginia, which curiously enough, as they are near great scientific centers, never have been explored by naturalists, was the object of an expedition led by Watson M. Perrygo. Among the discoveries was a new type of flying squirrel.

Natives of Siam, unable to scale the heights of Mount Phu Kha, have told their children for centuries that gold covered the mountain top. H. C. Deignan, of the institution, at the risk of his life, scaled it and found not gold but many rare and beautiful birds, which were quite tame because they never before had seen man.

Three expeditions went to Alaska. Dr. Ales Hrdlicka continued his diggings at the Aleutian Islands and found many peculiar mummies. He was attempting to trace the migration of man from Siberia to America. E. P. Henderson found rare minerals on Prince of Wales Island. Dr. Henry B. Collins cleared up some mysteries of Alaskan archeology.

Dr. Alexander Wetmore found a rare bird, a species of grebe, in the highlands of Guatemala. G. Arthur Cooper uncovered new fossil remains in the Middle West. In the mountains of the Navajo Reservation of New Mexico, Lewis Gazin sought remains of ancient mammal life of the Southwest.

Austin H. Clarke, of the staff, made an intensive study of West Virginia butterflies. E. P. Killip, botanist, collected plant life on the Florida Keys, discovering a dogwood which paralyzes fish. Frank H. H. Roberts, jr., continued his studies of the Lindenmeier site in Colorado, which is the earliest known American habitation site.

J. N. B. Hewitt studied the Iroquois of New York and Ontario. Julian H. Steward studied the desert life of the Shoshone, and Herbert Kreiger studied the remains left by the prehistoric population of the Bahamas. Dr. William H. Strong made archeological explorations among the Mayas of northwestern Honduras.

The Smithsonian explorations of the year will furnish the subject of a national broadcast Sunday, April 18, given by the United States Office of Education over N. B. C.

Layman League Meets Today to Plan Retreat

Members of the League for Layman Retreats will gather at the Press Club at 12:30 today for a luncheon and discussion of final plans for the annual retreat June 11-14, at Manresa-on-the-Severn.

The group, composed largely of lawyers, also will consider a report to be submitted by the committee in charge of the annual communion May 2.

Joseph Cantrel will preside at the luncheon.

3 Air Hostesses' Glasses Were Dry In Toast to Dead

Newark, N. J., April 9 (AP).—Three air hostesses reported to have toasted with wine the memory of plane crash March 25, were careful to express their grief in a manner that involved no violation of a Commerce Department regulation concerning the use of alcoholics, it developed today.

The three, with whom Miss Dorris Hammons lived, learned of her death in the crash at Upper St. Clair, Pa., as they sat in their apartment in East Orange that night.

They had to go into the air again the next day, despite their grief. To have sipped wine or any other alcoholic in a toast would have violated the regulation. So they clinked empty glasses together and then smashed them on a table in a toast just as expressive.

Fla. Railway Loses $17,000,000 Trust

New York, April 9 (AP).—The Florida East Coast Railway Co. was ruled out by the Appellate Division today as a beneficiary of a $17,000,000 trust created in the will of Mary Lily Flagler Bingham, who died in 1917.

Mrs. Bingham was the widow of Henry M. Flagler, one of the founders of the Standard Oil Co., and later was the wife of Robert W Bingham, of Louisville, Ky., now Ambassador to England. The Appellate Division was unanimous in ruling the railway is not a beneficiary of the will.

Walsh Suggests Impeachment Of Four Justices

Procedure Is Termed 'Far Less Dangerous' Than Court Change.

If proponents of the present bill to increase the membership of the Supreme Court fear to submit an amendment to the people, they should exercise their legal powers and impeach the four justices "whose acts have been considered obstructive of social justice," declared Dr. Edmund A. Walsh, S. J., vice president of Georgetown University and regent of its school of foreign service.

Father Walsh spoke last night in Memorial Continental Hall, continuing his series of lectures on "The Constitution and the Supreme Court."

"For surely," he continued, "the public accusations recently leveled against certain designated members of the court, if true, constitute something worse than malfeasance and misfeasance in office.

"Substantially, they are charged with obstructing needed reforms of a vital character and from their high eminence according comfort and support to the enemies of the people.

"Impeachment, in my opinion, would be far less dangerous as a precedent than the circuitous method now proposed.

"And more honest. For, though success may be achieved and legislation enacted, respect for the party which engineered it may be lost forever.

"A short gain is often followed by a long lament."

Bill to Control Pay and Hours To Get Hearings

House Group to Take Up Plan; New Dealer Hits Court Change.

crat), Massachusetts, which was presented ot the Senate Judiciary Comsented to the Senate Judiciary Committee, said:

"While sincerely sympathetic to many of the aims which President Roosevelt has sought to achieve, I regard his proposal to enlarge the Supreme Court as extremely unwise and quite unnecessary * * * unwise because it affords no assurance of achieving its alleged ends.

"No judiciary made up of political 'yes-men' could maintain public confidence and respect.

"There simply is no emergency such, as requires this ravaging of the court * * * To spring it (the plan) now and to try and whip into line the huge Democratic majority in Congress is a flagrant instance of political bad faith, which it would be difficult to match in our entire history."

Burke Cites "Butchery."

In Chicago, Senator Edward R. Burke (Democrat), Nebraska, and Representative Sam B. Pettengill (Democrat), Indiana, joined in assailing the President's plan. Burke called the program "butchery of the court," and Pettengill attacked it as "reactionary in the extreme—not liberal."

Before the Senate Judiciary Committee, Dean William E. Masterson, of the University of Missouri law school; William M. Cain, college of law, University of Notre Dame, and Frederic R. Coudert, chairman of the New York City Bar Association, appeared in opposition to the measure.

The usual meager audience and minority committee attendance of the past week, testifying to the slackened interest in the hearings, did not deter the opposition witnesses from presenting vigorous arguments against the court-reform program.

"Pre-Pledging" Attacked.

Coudert termed the plan "legislative trespass upon the dignity and independence of the Supreme Court;" Masterson insisted that the plan would "leave open a door through which autocracy may enter," and Cain opposed "pre-pledging of judges."

Scott, speaking for the plan, stressing the "reactionary viewpoint" of the Supreme Court, said: "The forces which have chained this Nation to a highly individualistic and destructive competitive industrialism have succeeded in dominating the Supreme Court. Is this domination sacrosanct?"

Smith's bill, to prohibit interstate transportation of goods and merchandise produced under conditions that would have made their production unlawful in the State into which they were consigned, will be given public hearings at which national labor leaders, representatives of the Interstate Commerce Commission and representatives of industry will be invited to testify.

Eaton Criticizes Farley.

By focusing the Federal action against movement of sweatshop-made goods or child-labor-made goods in one State into a State where such goods are outlawed, Smith hopes to pattern his bill's action along the lines of the Ashurst-Sumners law banning the movement of prison-made goods in interstate commerce, recently upheld by the Supreme Court.

In the Senate, Senator Warren Austin (Republican), Vermont, attacked the President's program on the grounds that delays in Supreme Court procedure often proceeded from Justice Department requests, and not from court congestion.

In the House, Representative Eaton (Republican), New Jersey, criticized a statement by "St. James Farley" that "we will call the roll of Congress after they get through talking." He urged that the House "quit being a rubber stamp."

President's Court Plan Held 'Certain' By Berle, Ex-Aide

Toledo, Ohio, April 9 (AP).—Prof. A. A. Berle, jr., New York City chamberlain and reputedly one of President Roosevelt's original "brain trusters," tonight declared his "private advices" confirmed the Administration's claims that the judicial reorganization bill "can be passed whenever a vote on it is pressed."

"Plainly, it is a judicial crisis rather than a constitutional crisis," he said, "and the plan of the President, though it leaves much to be desired, may already be accepted as an established fact."

"While he may not have had a mandate for his method, the President did have a mandate for his policies; and he had a mandate likewise to appoint judges who would support those policies, for precisely that issue was raised in the last campaign."

Lindberghs Arrive In London, Go to Home

London, April 9 (AP).—Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh flew back to England from Munich today, ending a ten-week aerial tour of Europe and the East. The couple landed at Gatwick Airdrome and went immediately to their home to see Jon, their little son.

It was generally believed Col. Lindbergh combined business with pleasure on the trip by making aerial surveys of India. They maintained their customary silence to the end of the flight, however.

London, April 9 (AP).—The Belgian steamer Anversville (8,433 tons) ran aground in a fog tonight off Dungeness Point on the English Channel. The sea was smooth. A lifeboat put out to the steamer's assistance.

By Franklyn Waltman

A PERTINENT aspect of the controversy over the President's Supreme Court reorganization program that has not received a great deal of attention is the caliber of men Mr. Roosevelt has named to the Federal bench during the four years he has been President.

It has been intimated that if the President is given authority to name six new justices to the Supreme Court he would not name desirable men, and it has been contended openly that he would name men sympathetic to his political philosophy who could be expected to hold valid his legislative undertakings. All this, however, is a venture into the realm of speculation. What has Mr. Roosevelt done in the past in regard to filling judicial vacancies? Has he sought the best legal talent he could find, men of learning as well as character? Or has he regarded judicial appointments as political plums to be awarded to deserving party workers?

WALTMAN.

These questions open a field for research which requires both time and patience. Any casual examination of the "Who's Who in America" sketches of a group of the Roosevelt judicial appointments, however, indicates that mediocrity predominates. Few of those named judges by the President brought honor to the bench to which they were appointed. Indeed, most of them were honored by the appointment and for the first time, in many cases, became known outside of their home towns.

Of unusual interest at this time is a study which Judge Merrill E. Otis, of the Federal District Court for Western Missouri, made last year into the educational qualifications of the judges named by President Roosevelt and how they compared with the appointees of his six predecessors. The results of this study were given by Judge Otis in an address to the American Bar Association last August—long before the present controversy developed.

Judge Otis' study encompassed 47 appointments which President Roosevelt had made to the Federal district and circuit court of appeals benches. He found that Mr. Roosevelt had the poorest record, as far as the educational qualifications of his judicial appointments went, of any President since the turn of the century.

Of the circuit and district judges named by President Roosevelt, 49 per cent had college training; 25 per cent were college graduates; 55.3 per cent were law school graduates and 17 per cent had graduated from both college and law school.

The significance of those figures becomes clear when the educational qualifications of the Roosevelt appointees are compared to the educational qualifications of the appointees of other Presidents.

Thus at the time that Judge Otis completed his study—last summer—70.3 per cent of all the Federal district and circuit judges had college training; 50.2 per cent were college graduates; 58.8 per cent were law school graduates, and 29.1 per cent graduated from both college and law school.

Comparison in percentages of the Roosevelt judges with those of other Presidents, as found by Judge Otis, follows:

President	College Training	College Graduates	Law School Graduates	Law School and College Graduates
T. Roosevelt	77.0	55.8	32.7	23.0
Wilson	69.3	36.4	47.0	22.5
Harding	69.0	54.8	54.8	40.5
Coolidge	73.7	52.4	60.0	36.0
Hoover	66.8	57.8	66.6	40.0
F. D. Roosevelt	49.0	25.5	55.3	17.0

Thus it will be seen that despite the greater opportunities for high education which have developed in the last 30 years and despite the increased number of college graduates in the legal profession, President Roosevelt's judicial appointees have a worse record from the viewpoint of educational qualifications than the appointees of any President since 1901.

Certainly the inference cannot be drawn that Democrats with college and law school degrees cannot be found—that Republicans are better educated than Democrats. The fault would seem to lie in the appointing power.

In setting forth the results of Judge Otis' study here it is contended that educational qualifications are the best or only standard on which the competence of a judge should be considered. Many a learned jurist, as well as men in many other fields of life, has neither college nor law school degrees. But they are the exceptions. It is undoubtedly an important and significant factor in any large group.

It is rather surprising that in this day of specialized knowledge and education only 55.3 per cent of President Roosevelt's judicial appointees were law school graduates.

Another point frequently overlooked in the contention of proponents of the President's court scheme that they are trying to "unpack" the court is the fact that Herbert Hoover named Justice Benjamin N. Cardozo to the Supreme Court and that Calvin Coolidge named Justice Harlan F. Stone. Surely these Presidents were not placing men of their personal economic predilections on the Supreme Court. Nor were they naming men sympathetic with their political philosophies.

It may be a strange thought in this day when judicial appointments seem to be considered as instruments for the advancing of political philosophies, but perhaps former Presidents Coolidge and Hoover when they named Justices Stone and Cardozo were seeking only to add men of outstanding legal talent and character to the Supreme Court.

Iowans Hear Talk By J. M. Hepbron On Solving Crime

Scientific crime detection technique, that will "out-Sherlock" Sherlock Holmes himself, was described last night by James M. Hepbron, director of the Washington Criminal Justice Association, in an address before the Iowa State Society at the Shoreham Hotel.

"The professional criminal is using the best that science can offer," the speaker said in attacking the conventional conception of a criminal as a person of low mentality. Mental tests, he said, reveal the inmates of prisons have higher ratings than the draft army of 1917 than the guards at the prisons and often the wardens themselves.

He described the lie-detector which, he said, will play an increasingly important part in awarding parole to convicts. He pointed out that the mechanism distinguished between excitement and a guilty conscience.

About 150 Iowans heard the program which included soprano solos by Mrs. Allen Shreve, accompanied by Mrs. Susan Sackett.

Politics in Pensions Charged by Epstein

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, April 9.—A political "stranglehold" has been fastened on old-age pension systems in many parts of the country, Abraham Epstein, pioneer advocate of old-age pensions, charged today at the opening session of the tenth anniversary national conference of the American Association for Social Security.

Asserting grants in many States are made frequently "not on the basis of need, as the laws intend, but on the basis of political expediency," Epstein urged immediate action to end these alleged practices.

Striking Reliefers Driven From Office Of Ohio Governor

Columbus, Ohio, April 9 (AP).—Sheriff's deputies cleared the Governor's office late today of a group of relief clients who had expressed determination to remain until their relief demands were met.

The deputies removed the screaming and shouting men and women one by one, two deputies to a person.

Striking the backs of the legs of the reliefers, they herded them from the richly furnished Governor's office, where they started their sit-down Wednesday evening and maintained it in shifts of 30.

The dispersal came after the relief group had defied a reading of the riot act by Chief Deputy Ralph Garner.

The sit-downers' luggage was thrown out a window.

They had been warned at noon today that they must vacate by 5 p. m. so the office could be cleaned.

They had demanded a $50,000,000 relief appropriation

First Lady Predicts Improved Conditions

New York, April 9 (AP).—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt said tonight at the silver anniversary dinner of the Girl Scouts of America she did not believe "the next generation is going to tolerate the conditions we have tolerated in this age."

Speaking on a program with Sir Gerald Campbell, British consul general here, and Mrs. Harper Sibley, wife of the president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, Mrs. Roosevelt said the depression has "forced" people to know more about government than at any other time in history.

U. S. Attorney Asks Court to Uphold Security

Jackson Is Spokesman; Butler Fears Federal Rule of Schools.

By the Associated Press.

A Government spokesman told the Supreme Court yesterday a decision upholding the Federal social security law would be "the greatest contribution during this generation to the art of government in this country."

Robert H. Jackson, Assistant Attorney General, made this statement during debate which produced conflicting questions from members of the court. While Jackson was arguing, Justice Butler asked whether the principle of the legislation could not be employed by the Federal Government to regulate schools.

"I suggest it is not fantastic to say that, if one is within the reach of Congress, the other is not far removed," he asserted, raising his voice.

Justice Brandeis commented:

"The question before the court is whether this particular purpose and limitation exceeds the power of Congress. It is very interesting to consider, as an academic matter, where to draw the line; but I find it difficult to see where that is related to the question before us."

Butler Draws Laugh.

"I am sure you're not inviting us to look at this through a keyhole," Butler replied.

The audience laughed at the exchange.

Justice Roberts, whose vote might determine whether the act is sustained or overthrown, since it has been the deciding factor in some other cases, remained silent during the five-hour argument.

The debate was completed late in the day, after a denunciation of the measure by Neil P. Sterne, attorney for the Charles C. Steward Machine Co. of Alabama. Sterne contended the law illegally coerces the States to act as the Federal Government wills.

A decision as to whether the statute is constitutional is possible April 26.

Brandeis Questions Sterne.

The disputed legislation imposes a pay-roll tax on employers. Ninety per cent of the amount collected under the unemployment insurance section is refunded to States which pass unemployment compensation laws approved by the Federal Social Security Board.

Brandeis also questioned Sterne concerning the attorney's statement that the Federal Government had no power to provide relief unless the existence of the Government itself and its people is threatened.

"Does the Federal Government," Brandeis asked, "have to fold its hands and hope that if another depression develops it will be met we know not how? Doesn't such a thing as preparedness exist?"

"The Government is attempting to deal with a perfectly practical situation that has to be dealt with if we are to handle intelligently important governmental problems," Brandeis added.

Sterne replied that he thought it a problem for the States to handle.

"And the Federal Government can do nothing to induce the States to act?" Brandeis inquired.

"Not by constraint or coercion or compulsion," Sterne said.

Earlier in the day, Charles E. Wyzanski, jr., special assistant to the Attorney General, argued that the legislation promoted the general welfare by protecting the unemployed against hardship.

He also contended it would aid in "preventing the worst effects of a future depression."

Davis Discusses Peace, Economics

London, April 9 (AP).—President Roosevelt's traveling ambassador, Norman H. Davis, turned from the sugar conference to other international issues today, outlining his Government's views on world peace, disarmament and economic co-operation.

The white-haired envoy conferred separately for half an hour at his hotel with Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden of Great Britain and Charles Spinasse, the French minister of economy.

Pan-American Clipper Resumes Mapping Trip

Kingman Reef, April 9 (AP).—Continuing its exploration for a proposed airline between Auckland, New Zealand, and Alameda, Calif., the Pan-American Clipper took off at 8:38 a. m. today for Pearl Harbor, Honolulu. The flight of 1,067 miles is one of a series of four which total 6,820 miles in the return voyage from New Zealand.

Army Airmen Ordered West For War Tests

G. H. Q. Corps Concentrates May 1 in Speed Trial, Maneuvers.

Concentration of virtually the entire General Headquarters air force in California, beginning May 1, was ordered by the Army yesterday for a month of maneuvers.

Participating will be approximately 3,000 officers and enlisted men and 244 fighting planes.

Air craft will be based at March Field, Riverside, Calif.; Hamilton Field, San Rafael and various commercial and municipal flying fields.

In direct command will be Maj. Gen. F. M. Andrews, commander of the Headquarters air force.

Speed Dashes.

On May Day planes will take off from various sections of the Nation on speed dashes to the Pacific Coast concentration points. The rapidity with which the widely separated units can reach their destination is one of the principal problems of the maneuvers.

Following concentration of the air armada, daily maneuvers, involving actual offensive and defensive battle practice, will be performed by bombardment, attack and pursuit squadrons.

Participating with G. H. Q. already stationed on the Pacific Coast will be units from Langley Field, Va.; Barksdale Field, La., and Selfridge Field, Mich.

The entire personnel of the First Pursuit Group at Selfridge Field will be ferried in 15 huge Army transport planes to the operating airdrome at Muroc Lake, Calif.

Stops are to be made at Muskogee, Okla.; Amarillo, Tex.; Winslow, Ariz., and Albuquerque, N. M.

All missions performed by the pilots and their planes will be on a wartime scale.

Average flying time required for each mission will be from three hours, for the smaller pursuit planes, to six hours for the bombers.

Aiding Gen. Andrews in command will be Lieut. Col. H. J. Kerr, as chief of staff; Brig. Gen. D. C. Emmons and Brig. Gen. G. C. Brant.

Damage Is Heavy In Miami Storm

Miami, Fla., April 9 (AP).—Tornadic winds roared with a severe electrical storm through Miami's southwest residential section before dawn today, injuring a number of persons, demolishing a frame dwelling and damaging several others.

Sam Scowins, about 58, suffering critical head injuries, and Mrs. Lillian Brewer, 40, less seriously hurt, were taken to a hospital. Other persons were treated by physicians.

Corporate Tax Revision Wins House Backing

Doughton, Vinson Favor 'Relief' for Small Corporations.

be amended so as to effect the relief you have in mind."

Representative Vinson, whose proposed "cushions" in the corporate surplus tax were virtually wiped out in the final draft of the tax, said yesterday he thought "there is a good likelihood some relief will be granted this session."

"Treasury yields may be off somewhat," said Vinson, "but regardless of yields, I believe justice demands that we remedy present inequities. I also believe we should write exemptions into the law to permit plant modernization and expansion."

Vinson attributed much of the drop in revenues below estimates to postponement of the operation of the windfall tax, extensions granted big taxpayers and resort to the quarterly payment method. He predicted most of the loss will be recouped by June 15.

Bulwinkle recalled that Chairman Jesse H. Jones of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, during the last campaign, urged amendments to encourage industrial modernization, replacement of plant, equipment and machinery, to aid rebuilding, and to relieve corporations laboring under debt.

Jones said at that time he had "every confidence" the President would be willing for Congress to review the measure.

Bulwinkle advanced the following three examples of how the tax affects corporations hard hit by the depression:

"The first is corporation A, which has a large deficit; and, if the directors should declare a dividend, they, the directors, are individually responsible to the creditors of the corporation under the North Carolina law. And, yet, if the dividend is not declared and paid, and if the corporation happens to have made a profit for the year, they will have to pay the tax, which is nothing more or less than penalizing the corporations because the directors acted in accordance with the law."

"The second example, corporation B, has outstanding preferred stock, and under the preferred-stock agreement a sinking fund must be set aside before dividends on the common stock can be paid. The working capital of this corporation does not permit the setting aside of the sinking fund, and dividends are, therefore, prohibited. Under the revenue act of 1936 the corporation will be required to pay the surtax on the undistributed earnings, which payment places a penalty upon the corporation because its management acted in good faith with the holders of the preferred stock.

"The third example is the case of corporation C, which is in receivership, and, therefore, naturally cannot pay any dividends to the stockholders. There is a question, we assume, as to whether or not the corporation is insolvent. If it is decided that, although the corporation is in the hands of a receiver, it is not yet insolvent, then the corporation would have to pay the undistributed profits tax; which brings us to the point of the absurdity in this situation, because it cannot make any distribution of its profits to the stockholders on account of being in the receivership, and it is likewise penalized."

Mrs. DeRothschild, Edwardian Hostess, Dies

London, April 9. (AP).—Mrs. Leopold de Rothschild, famous Edwardian hostess, died yesterday in London. She was 75 years old and, until the last year of her life, hunted with the Rothschild stag hounds.

Her marriage to the late Leopold de Rothschild was one of the events of the 1881 season. Edward VII, then Prince of Wales, attended. Her friendship with the royal family was of long duration and, last year, Queen Mother Mary visited her.

Simpson Slander Suit In London Is Postponed

London, April 9 (AP).—The suit of Ernest Aldrich Simpson, charging slander by Mrs. Joan Sutherland, British society matron, in a sequel to the divorce granted to Wallis Warfield Simpson, was postponed today until the next court term opening May 16.

The postponement removed any possibility of the slander charges being aired until after the coronation of King George VI on May 12.

Dentist Denies He Was Father Of Girl's Baby

Dr. Miller Again Attacks State Allegations in Death Case.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., April 9.—Interviewed in his cell at Albemarle County jail today, Dr. Richard G. Miller, 53-year-old Charlottesville dentist, sentenced yesterday to serve 16 years in prison for the second-degree murder of Cleo Sprouse, a senior at Lane High School, once again denied responsibility for the condition of the girl before she died.

"I'll tell you and the world," he said, "that I was not responsible for the condition of the girl. I always treated her as I would a daughter of my own. Never did our relations take on the seriousness that was reported."

When asked concerning charges or inferences of premeditation, the prisoner flatly denied any thought of murder had "crossed his mind." "I wouldn't have done what I did, if murder was in my mind," he explained and emphasized his words with gestures. "I never would have driven up to that filling station to get gas if such were my thoughts."

Miller emphatically denied that he intended to place suspicion upon the university students. "That never was my intention. I thought of three or four places where the body might be left, but it was not until I was approaching Fry's Spring road that this spot came suddenly into my head."

"All that I ask now is that they hurry up and take me to Richmond so that I can get to work," Dr. Miller said, "I just can't stand around doing nothing, I want to be busy with my hands even if it's only sweeping the yard."

The hope that his family would be treated kindly by friends concluded the interview.

Cultist Gives Up On Girl's Charges

Los Angeles, April 9 (AP).—John W. Hunt, 33, West Coast leader in the Father Divine cult movement, surrendered late today at the United States marshal's office on Mann act charges.

Hunt appeared unexpectedly within two hours after an attempt was made to "surrender" him without producing him personally or giving Federal officers, who have sought him two weeks, even a glimpse of him.

United States Commissioner David B. Head rejected the proposal.

Hunt's brother, Warren Hunt, appeared at Head's office, exhibited $1,000 and offered to post it to guarantee the fugitive former advertising man would be in court when his trial is called.

4 Police Injured In Relief Rioting

Cairo, Ill., April 9 (AP).—Two State highway patrolmen and two Cairo police officers were beaten severely late today by a group of colored men at the Alexander County emergency relief office when the officers sought to take out the men's leader for questioning.

In the melee shots were fired and L. M. Dowell, elderly colored man, was shot in the leg and taken to a hospital for treatment.

Italian Bachelors Face Wage Slashes

Rome, April 9 (AP).—Fancy-free Italian bachelors, taxed for the privilege of remaining single, wondered tonight whether they would face the alternative of marrying or earning less money. The cabinet will meet tomorrow to consider a program for increasing the Italian birth rate. It already carries indorsement of the Fascist grand council.

The program includes priority in occupation and promotion for fathers of large families; adjustment of salaries, so fathers of the big families will get preferential wages; establishment of a national big families association. The bachelor tax now in effect mounts as one advances in years and salary.

Counterfeit $5 Notes Flood New York Area

New York, April 9 (AP).—The Secret Service, it was learned today, has sent out 20,000 circulars to banks and shopkeepers here, warning that an unprecedented flood of counterfeit $5 bills has hit the metropolitan area.

One bank, it was reported, said the bills were coming in at the rate of 100 a week and were being confiscated from customers.

Sit-Down Ban Signed.

Montpelier, Vt., April 9 (AP).—Gov. George B. Aiken today signed a bill making sit-down strikes illegal in Vermont. The measure, the first of its kind signed in the country, provides for a maximum sentence of two years in prison or a $1,000 fine.

Over 2 Million Is Bequeathed By Mrs. Lisner

$1,000,000 Trust Fund to Be Established for Husband.

An estate of more than $2,000,000 was left by the late Mrs. Laura Hartmann Lisner, wife of Abram Lisner, one-time owner of the Palais Royal Department Store, it was learned in District Court when her will was filed. The exact size of the estate will not be shown until a petition for probate is filed.

Mrs. Lisner, who died at her home, 1723 Massachusetts avenue northwest, March 26, is survived by her husband and a nephew, John T. Graham, a retired business man.

The will directed that a million-dollar trust fund be set up for Mr. Lisner, who is to receive the income for life. Upon his death the fund is to be used to pay numerous bequests. Some of them are $10,000 to a niece, Gertrude Luchs; $5,000 to Eugene Luchs, her husband; George W. White, president of the National Metropolitan Bank, $5,000; Mary Norwood, Baltimore, $3,000; Millie Toplitz, a niece, $5,000, and to each of her eight grandnephews and grandnieces, $3,000.

Other bequests are $200,000 to the Washington Home for Incurables; a like sum to the Henry and Annie Hurst Home for the Blind; $50,000 to the Presbyterian Home for the Aged; $10,000 to the Washington Home for Foundlings, and the Washington Sanitarium, $100,000. Two other bequests that were contingent upon Mr. Lisner's death provided $25,000 to Mr. Graham and $10,000 to Henrietta Posner, of New York City.

Mrs. Lisner's summer home at Springfield, N. H., is to go to her husband along with the portion of the estate not expended in meeting bequests. Executors were Mr. Lisner, Mr. White, William A. Rodenberg and Leon Tobriner, who have been attorneys for the Lisners for 50 years.

Funeral Is Today For Miss Wallace

Funeral services for Miss Kate Wallace, 95, will be held at 2 p. m., today, in All Saints' Episcopal Church. Burial will be in Beltsville, Md.

Miss Wallace had known Washington society in the days before the Civil War, when the Capital was only a roughly outlined plan.

Miss Wallace, descendant of an old Maryland family and daughter of William A. Wallace, southern Maryland plantation owner, died Thursday at her home, 3803 Jocelyn street northwest. She had been active in the Episcopal Church and for many years had been a member of the Clan MacGregor.

Surviving are her sister, Mrs. Florence Ellen MacGregor; seven nieces, four nephews and several grand and great-grandnieces and nephews.

Drunken Drivers Bill Asks $6,000 Liability

Dover, Del., April 9 (AP).—The Delaware House of Representatives approved today a bill which would require persons whose automobile licenses were revoked for driving under the influence of liquor or drugs to take out indemnity insurance of $6,000 before their licenses could be restored.

The House passed another bill providing a fine of $50 to $200 or imprisonment for persons who operated an automobile while their licenses were suspended.

Statute Blocks Security Board Appointment

cided to leave the Government service definitely in order to engage in private business, and the President withdrew his second nomination, which still was before the Seante, and sent in its place the nomination of Latimer, now chairman of the Railroad Retirement Board. He specified that Altmeyer should be chairman of the board.

Classed as Democrat.

Though it has been reported in some quarters that there is a question whether Latimer should be classed as a Republican or a Democrat, Who's Who lists him definitely as Democrat. To confirm his nomination as a member of the board, with Altmeyer and Miles already members, would create apparently a board of three Democratic members, a situation expressly forbidden in the law.

There has been some talk that Miles might not remain long with the board. He was ill for some time during the early part of the board's existence, but apparently is fully recovered now. There has been talk of his appointment to a Federal judgeship, and there is a vacancy on the bench for the Eastern District of Arkansas. Miles' home is in the Western District.

In case he is given this appointment or some other, there still will be room on the board for both Latimer and a Republican.

Term Ends in August.

Miles' term will not expire until August of this year. When the President first created the board he gave Winant a six-year term, to run until 1941, but, to prevent all the terms from expiring at the same time, he gave Altmeyer a four-year term, expiring in 1939, and Miles was named for two years, until August, 1937.

Should Miles continue a member of the board until that time, it appeared last night that it would be impossible to bring about confirmation of Latimer's nomination for some months.

Meanwhile, Latimer is continuing as head of the Railroad Retirement Board and attempting to work out, with representatives of the railroads and rail unions, as well as with Congressional leaders and Treasury experts, the controverted proposed substitute pay-roll tax law to finance the railroad pension system administered by his board.

Reich May Offer Trade to Belgium

Berlin, April 9 (AP).—Germany will offer Belgium a much larger share of business for Antwerp Harbor in return for badly needed raw materials from the Belgian Congo, well informed sources believed tonight.

Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, president of the Reichsbank, will seek some such arrangement when he confers with leading financial experts at Brussels next week, these sources believed.

The impending visit to Brussels was described officially as purely coincidental with acceptance by Premier Paul van Zeeland, of an assignment to investigate international trade questions. This was regarded in high German official circles, however, as of great importance.

Prospector Who Lost Fortune Dies at 100

St. Edouard de Napierville, Quebec, April 9 (Canadian Press).—Leovold Dorais, who made and lost a Western mining fortune and then recouped, died yesterday. He was 100 years old.

It was almost 80 years ago that he went West from his Sorel, Quebec, birthplace as a prospector. After amassing a sizable fortune in the Northwest Territories, he came back and sank it all in real estate. When it was gone, he went back West and piled up another nest-egg that kept him for the rest of his life on a big farm.

Four Orphans Ask $200,000 In Auto Deaths

Mother and Father Killed, Children Sue Firm, Driver of Car.

Four small children, the eldest 11, who were orphaned when their mother and father were killed in an automobile crash at Waterloo, Md., yesterday in District Court filed four suits asking $200,000 from Capitol Motors, Inc., 215 Pennsylvania avenue southeast, and a like amount from one of its employes, Joseph Marks, who was driving the death car.

The parents, Mary Eckloff and Charles A. Eckloff, received fatal injuries April 18, 1936, when the car crashed into a truck that was crossing the Baltimore boulevard at Waterloo.

The children, Charles Andrew Eckloff, jr., 11, Mary Ellen Eckloff, 10, Joan Ann Eckloff, 8, and Evelyn Ann Eckloff, were not with their parents at the time. Because they are minors they were represented by George Eckloff, their grandfather, who has been appointed administrator of their estates.

Through Attorneys A. L. Newmyer and David Bress, he charged the car Marks was driving was not carefully operated and was speeding. Marks was pictured as the agent for the Motors Co., and was said to be on duty for the company at the time of the crash.

The children live with their grandfather at 2842 Belair place northeast.

President May Get Coal Act Monday

By the Associated Press.

House supporters of the Guffey-Vinson coal-control bill said yesterday they hoped the legislation would go to President Roosevelt for his signature by Monday.

The Senate adopted yesterday a Senate-House conference report compromising differences over the legislation. Representative Vinson (Democrat), Kentucky, immediately presented the report to the House and later said he hoped for a vote on Monday.

The bill, designed as a substitute for a law invalidated by the Supreme Court last year, would create a national bituminous coal commission to fix prices and establish a code of fair practices for the soft-coal industry.

Women's Heavy Sports Hit by Vatican Paper

Vatican City, April 9 (AP).—Excessive sports for women—both single and married—were proscribed by the official Vatican newspaper Osservatore Romano today.

In a sharp attack on women's participation in sports, the newspaper said excessive sports made women sterile.

Keep Up Relief, 4 Governors Ask President

Two Representatives Also Oppose Reduction in WPA Rolls.

Four State Governors and representatives of two others yesterday carried to President Roosevelt a request that the Works Progress Administration rolls be continued at the present strength through the next fiscal year, beginning July 1.

The State executives' visit to the White House was in the nature of a follow-up of their conference with the President on March 6, when they protested against reported Administration plans to drop 600,000 persons from the rolls by June. At that time the President agreed to see the Governors again before he sends to Congress his relief budget for the coming fiscal 12 months. He now plans to send up the budget message about the middle of next week.

For an hour and a half yesterday afternoon the visitors went over with the President their contention that the States cannot do more than they are doing at present to care for the needy. Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau and WPA Administrator Harry Hopkins participated in the conference as they had in the previous one.

After the discussion Gov. Herbert Lehman of New York, leader of the delegation, declined to give any information regarding it.

"We have no comment to make," he said. "The only person who can talk about the conference is the President."

Other Governors present were Elmer Benson of Minnesota, Philip La Follette of Wisconsin and Robert E. Quinn of Rhode Island. Representative John W. McCormack (Democrat), of Massachusetts, represented Gov. Charles F. Hurley of that State, and Leo M. Lyons, State relief administrator, represented Gov. Henry Horner of Illinois.

Indications that either the Governors' previous protest against WPA cuts in the current fiscal year had been effective or that their fears a cut was to be made were groundless came later in the day when Hopkins told newspapermen that the rolls now contain about 2,200,000 names, about the same number as in February. It had been reported that the President and Hopkins intended to reduce the number to 1,600,000 by June 1, but Hopkins said yesterday he had told the House Appropriations Committee in January only that it was hoped private industry would absorb enough of the relief clients to permit such a reduction.

Before seeing the Governors, President Roosevelt told newspapermen at his press conference yesterday morning that he would not arrive at the total figure to be recommended in the relief budget until about 24 hours before sending his message to the Capitol. He said he had not started work on the message yet.

Last January the President mentioned $1,500,000,000 as approximately the amount that probably would be needed for relief in the coming year. However, continuation of the present total on WPA rolls could hardly be accomplished on that sum. The United States Conference of Mayors has asked that $2,200,000,000 be appropriated, and a House bloc headed by Representative Maverick (Democrat), Texas, is seeking to make the total $2,400,000,000.

The President plans to send, along with the budget recommendation, a message recasting the estimates of receipts and expenditures for the coming fiscal year, based on new returns received since last December. One important factor in the changed budget situation was the decline of March income tax payments below estimates.

Senate Group Reports War Price-Fixing Bill

By the Associated Press.

The Senate Military Affairs Committee reported favorably yesterday a bill providing for mobilization of both manpower and material resources of the Nation in time of war.

Under it the President would be given authority to fix prices. All profits of a business above its previous three-year average would be taxed at the rate of 95 per cent.

Red snow, a new type of flying squirrel from West Virginia, new and beautiful birds, and connecting links in man's complex history were among the myriad discoveries of scientists from the Smithsonian Institution, tersely reported yesterday in the annual summary of the year's activities.

Eighteen expeditions explored far places from the hyacinth-fringed lakes of Honduras to the frigid wastes of the Arctic, bringing back rare biological and mineral specimens and relics, the report shows.

Capt. "Bob" Bartlett, the Arctic explorer, took an expedition to Greenland which brought back two live baby musk oxen and a sample of red snow that falls on the northeast coast of that frigid land.

The mammal and bird life of certain mountain areas of West Virginia, which curiously enough, as they are near great scientific centers, never have been explored by naturalists, was the object of an expedition led by Watson M. Perrygo. Among the discoveries was a new type of flying squirrel.

Natives of Siam, unable to scale the heights of Mount Phu Kha, have told their children for centuries that gold covered the mountain top. H. C. Deignan, of the institution, at the risk of his life, scaled it and found not gold but many rare and beautiful birds, which were quite tame because they never before had seen man.

Three expeditions went to Alaska. Dr. Ales Hrdlicka continued his diggings at the Aleutian Islands and found many peculiar mummies. He was attempting to trace the migration of man from Siberia to America. E. P. Henderson found rare minerals on Prince of Wales Island. Dr. Henry B. Collins cleared up some mysteries of Alaskan archeology.

Dr. Alexander Wetmore found a rare bird, a species of grebe, in the highlands of Guatemala. G. Arthur Cooper uncovered new fossil remains in the Middle West. In the mountains of the Navajo Reservation of New Mexico, Lewis Gazin sought remains of ancient mammal life of the Southwest.

Austin H. Clarke, of the staff, made an intensive study of West Virginia butterflies. E. P. Killip, botanist, collected plant life on the Florida Keys, discovering a dogwood which paralyzes fish. Frank H. H. Roberts, jr., continued his studies of the Lindenmeier site in Colorado, which is the earliest known American habitation site.

J. N. B. Hewitt studied the Iroquois of New York and Ontario. Julian H. Steward studied the desert life of the Shoshone, and Herbert Kreiger studied the remains left by the prehistoric population of the Bahamas. Dr. William H. Strong made archeological explorations among the Mayas of northwestern Honduras.

The Smithsonian explorations of the year will furnish the subject of a national broadcast Sunday, April 18, given by the United States Office of Education over N. B. C.

Layman League Meets Today to Plan Retreat

Members of the League for Layman Retreats will gather at the Press Club at 12:30 today for a luncheon and discussion of final plans for the annual retreat June 11-14, at Manresa-on-the-Severn.

The group, composed largely of lawyers, also will consider a report to be submitted by the committee in charge of the annual communion May 2.

Joseph Cantrel will preside at the luncheon.

3 Air Hostesses' Glasses Were Dry In Toast to Dead

Newark, N. J., April 9 (AP).—Three air hostesses reported to have toasted with wine the memory of plane crash March 25, were careful to express their grief in a manner that involved no violation of a Commerce Department regulation concerning the use of alcoholics, it developed today.

The three, with whom Miss Dorris Hammons lived, learned of her death in the crash at Upper St. Clair, Pa., as they sat in their apartment in East Orange that night.

They had to go into the air again the next day, despite their grief. To have sipped wine or any other alcoholic in a toast would have violated the regulation. So they clinked empty glasses together and then smashed them on a table in a toast just as expressive.

Fla. Railway Loses $17,000,000 Trust

New York, April 9 (AP).—The Florida East Coast Railway Co. was ruled out by the Appellate Division today as a beneficiary of a $17,000,000 trust created in the will of Mary Lily Flagler Bingham, who died in 1917.

Mrs. Bingham was the widow of Henry M. Flagler, one of the founders of the Standard Oil Co., and later was the wife of Robert W Bingham, of Louisville, Ky., now Ambassador to England. The Appellate Division was unanimous in ruling the railway is not a beneficiary of the will.

Walsh Suggests Impeachment Of Four Justices

Procedure Is Termed 'Far Less Dangerous' Than Court Change.

If proponents of the present bill to increase the membership of the Supreme Court fear to submit an amendment to the people, they should exercise their legal powers and impeach the four justices "whose acts have been considered obstructive of social justice," declared Dr. Edmund A. Walsh, S. J., vice president of Georgetown University and regent of its school of foreign service.

Father Walsh spoke last night in Memorial Continental Hall, continuing his series of lectures on "The Constitution and the Supreme Court."

"For surely," he continued, "the public accusations recently leveled against certain designated members of the court, if true, constitute something worse than malfeasance and misfeasance in office.

"Substantially, they are charged with obstructing needed reforms of a vital character and from their high eminence according comfort and support to the enemies of the people.

"Impeachment, in my opinion, would be far less dangerous as a precedent than the circuitous method now proposed.

"And more honest. For, though success may be achieved and legislation enacted, respect for the party which engineered it may be lost forever.

"A short gain is often followed by a long lament."

Senate-Labor Parley Sought On Sit-Downs

McAdoo Asks Conference Plan in 'Independent' Resolution.

A new type of Senate investigation to check spread of the sit-down controversy by round-table discussions with labor and industrial leaders, was proposed in the Senate yesterday by Senator William Gibbs McAdoo (Democrat), California.

Appointment of a committee of five Senators to confer with leaders of industry and labor "with a view to the elimination of industrial strife and the promotion of the general welfare" was suggested by McAdoo.

His resolution was offered in the Senate as House action was scheduled next week on the Senate-approved Pittman-Robinson resolution, condemning both sit-down strikes and "unfair" industrial practices.

Introduction of the McAdoo resolution followed overwhelming House rejection Thursday of a proposed House investigation to determine the cause of and fix the responsibility for sit-downs.

The California Senator tried a different approach in seeking a solution of the industrial-labor conflict. Instead of the usual public inquiry, with open hearings, McAdoo proposed the milder conference method "for the purpose of formulating a basis for improving relations between industry and labor."

His resolution was ordered to lie on the table. It was described entirely as an "independent" move on McAdoo's part, with no immediate indication of Administration interest.

Opposed Byrnes Rider.

The Californian voted against the defeated Byrnes amendment to the Vinson-Guffey coal bill, condemning sit-downs, because, he said, he thought it had no place in the coal bill. He supported the Pittman-Robinson Senate resolution jointly condemning sit-down strikes and "unfair" industrial methods.

Blocked from consideration in the House on Thursday, the Pittman-Robinson denunciation yesterday was taken from the table and sent to the House Labor Committee. Chairman William P. Connery will move for a favorable report on Monday. Later the resolution must go before the Rules Committee, which was upset Thursday in its effort at a sit-down investigation.

Bankhead expressed doubt that House action can be obtained before the middle of the week. Ultimate approval is taken for granted.

A. F. L. Asks Congress Aid.

The rift between the American Federation of Labor and John L. Lewis' Committee for Industrial Organization meanwhile reached Congress in the form of a request for aid by the federation. Observers believed Congress yet may be placed in the position of taking sides in the labor dispute.

The federation asked Congress to help in requiring the Labor Relations Board to poll workers by craft rather than by factory in elections to show who should represent the employes in mass production industries. The federation is organized by crafts; Lewis' organization by mass production industries.

Bills to carry out the federation's request have been introduced by Representative Martin Dies (Democrat), Texas, author of the defeated sit-down investigation measure, and Senator David I. Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts.

Round-Table Funds Sought.

McAdoo, who recently said in the Senate that Congress must produce "a new formula" for governing industrial relations, laid his resolution for a "conference inquiry" before the Senate shortly after noon yesterday.

He proposed that up to $10,000 be provided from the Senate's contingent fund to finance the round-table discussions with industrial and labor leaders. The special committee would be authorized to "report to the Senate as soon as practicable with a recommendation for appropriate legislation."

"I have the feeling," McAdoo told reporters, "that such a committee, by conferences and discussions with individuals and small groups, representing both sides, would develop the true bases of the causes.

"The problem is to find some means to bring peace to both sides that will avoid the frightful cost of these controversies."

Textile Drive Rushed.

New York, April 9 (U.P.).—A drive to place the Southern textile industry, with its 1,250,000 employes, under a collective bargaining agreement is meeting with "exceptional results," Sidney Hillman, chairman of the textile workers organizing committee, said tonight.

At least 16 offices have been set up in the South, Hillman said, with Atlanta headquarters for the drive. Hillman announced a conference next Wednesday with Frank H. Griffin, vice president of the Viscose Co. of New York, one of the largest producers of rayon yarns in the country. The conference will be held in New York.

Mediation Proposed.

Rochester, N. Y., April 9 (AP).—A plan of mediation, aimed at bringing peace between the embattled national labor groups headed by John L. Lewis and William Green, was offered by unanimous resolution of C. I. O. and A. F. of L. delegates at a meeting of the Rochester Central Trades and Labor Council.

The resolution, passed without opposition last night, asks the two groups to name seven mediators each. If this arbitration board can not reach an agreement within two weeks, the resolution provides for the appointment by the Secretary of Labor of three impartial arbitrators.

Oil Firms Raise Pay.

Houston, Tex., April 9 (AP).—Major oil companies announced today "a gusher" that spouted millions of dollars in fattened pay rolls into the pockets of thousands of workers, and reliable sources predicted the flow would spread throughout the $12,000,000,000 industry.

Representatives of the Committee for Industrial Organization sponsored drive to unionize the industry extended their campaign into all the oil belts of the Nation by establishing seven district offices. They announced definite plans to recruit 1,000,000 workmen and confer with oil companies on "collective bargaining."

or Detroit offices of the American firm.

Martin said the union "plans to meet with the heads of Canadian General Motors and have them sign the agreement." He added that no time for a meeting had been arranged.

The "Detroit agreement" accorded the U. A. W. A. collective bargaining recognition for its members. The union had asked for exclusive bargaining rights. The pact also provided for a 40-hour week, time and a half for overtime, established methods for handling grievances and settled other strike issues.

About a month ago a high official of the Canadian government said two large American manufacturers which had experienced labor troubles were making arrangements to spend several million dollars in expanding their operations in Canada to escape strikes. He did not name the companies.

C. I. O. Organizer Hugh Thompson said the strikers would decide "later" whether to permit partial operations, but had agreed with General Motors that parts necessary for "ambulances, trucks, milk trucks and other utilities transport machines may be taken from the plant without interference."

"This does not cover parts for passenger cars," he said.

Earlier Thompson had warned General Motors that it must recognize his union and "sign an agreement before it builds another motor car in Canada."

Thompson declared he had assurances from Detroit that "not a car will be built in any General Motors plant in the United States if an attempt is made to break this strike."

He said he had been in communication with Martin, who, after conferring with General Motors executives in Detroit, said United States employes would be called out the minute force was used to break the Oshawa strike.

The C. I. O. did not send him into Oshawa, a statement from Thompson's office said. He was asked to come by workers in the plant to settle a "minor strike" and then "to remain in order to help organize the rest of the plant."

However, he added, when these negotiations broke down the strike "was then called for Wednesday morning with 100 per cent turnout."

Thompson attacked Hepburn's support of the General Motors Corporation and asked "what legal backing has the premier for his threats? What business is it of the premier if the workers wished to join a union? . . . Is the premier of the province demanding that these men go back to work? Is he going to get the mounties with machine guns to force them to go to work? We feel his position is entirely illegal and the people of the province will tell him so."

(At Detroit headquarters, Ed Hall, vice president of the United Automobile Workers of America, spoke in similar vein, contending that the C. I. O. organizer went to Oshawa at the invitation of the workers.

("If the premier were as interested in protecting citizens of his country from exploitation by foreign interests as he is in protecting the exploiters, this strike would not be necessary," Hall said.)

Union pickets were reinforced in the lines around the big Oshawa plant. Picketing, however, was peaceful. The strikers, working four-hour shifts in groups of 30 or less, picketed the dozen gates around the factory.

C. H. Millard, head of the local union, promised "any Communist agitator found in the picket lines will be taken out." and arranged with Thomas Farrell, union sergeant at arms, for a striker police squad to "supervise the peaceful picketing in shifts."

Besides union recognition the strikers demanded the full "Detroit agreement" reached by the union and officials of General Motors in the United States, which stipulated a 40-hour week, time and a half for overtime, creation of a grievance committee, and seniority rights.

The company has agreed to discuss all these issues except union recognition.

Auto Output Rises.

Detroit, April 9 (AP).—The Nation's automotive industry, strikeless for the first time in five months, headed for high production levels again tonight.

The Chrysler Corporation, pushing its plans to resume 6,000-a-day capacity operations next week after a month-long labor dispute, issued calls for all workers in plants of its Dodge division to report for work Monday.

Hershey Plant Picketed.

Hershey, Pa., April 9 (AP).—Several hundred singing men and women picketed the Hershey chocolate factory today while representatives of the corporation and the Committee for Industrial Organization sought vainly to settle the strike called a week ago.

The conference adjourned until 10 a. m. tomorrow. Neither side would comment on the meeting today. The union demanded recognition.

8 Die in Mexican Riot.

San Martin Texmelucan, Puebla State, Mexico, April 9 (AP).—Government soldiers mounted machine-guns in the windows of the big El Pilar textile factory tonight after battering down barricades and quelling bloody fighting between rival trade unions.

A 45-minute fight between employes before the troops arrived left eight dead and more than 20 injured.

The soldiers, arresting 133 workers, sent 30 to the municipal jail and held the others inside the plant.

A. F. of L. Begins Drive.

Pittsburgh, April 9 (AP).—An affiliate of the American Federation of Labor abandoned part of its traditional craft organization plan today to enter into open competition with an industrial type of union against forces of John L. Lewis.

Pickets Are Routed.

Bellefonte, Pa., April 9 (AP).—Non-striking employes of the Titan Metal Works today drove four pickets several miles from the factory after ripping down union signs and burning a shed in which strikers had set up headquarters.

India Suggests World 'Trust' In Cotton Sales

Textile Conference Offered Proposal for Price Stabilization.

By the Associated Press.

India proposed to the World Textile Conference yesterday that cotton growers and manufacturers set up an international cartel to regulate sales and stabilize prices.

It was the first time the cotton farmers' interest in world textile trade had been brought into the discussion and various delegates used the occasion to stress importance of agricultural purchasing power to consumption of textile products.

Sir Firoz Kahn Noon, Indian government delegate, said the conference, which is seeking to establish minimum wages and maximum hours for textile workers throughout the world, should "consider the advisability of setting up an international cotton committee composed of representatives of cotton growers and manufacturers from the principal cotton producing and manufacturing nations to regulate sales and stabilize prices of raw cotton."

Pooling Plan Urged.

Besides his proposal for an international textile cartel, Sir Firoz urged that the manufacturers work out some plan of pooling their resources in purchasing cotton so as to guarantee an adequate price to the grower.

Godfrey van der Muelen, employer delegate from The Netherlands, suggested the conference consider urging governments of countries with essentially agricultural populations to take steps to increase agricultural efficiency, for instance through the establishment of agriculture schools and the utilization of modern agriculture machinery.

Dr. J. Wisselink, Dutch government representative, stressed the need of adapting agriculture production to industrial production.

Harriman Speaks.

Henry I. Harriman, United States employers representative on the governing body of the International Labor Office, said it was significant that the conference was considering the balance between agriculture and industry.

Harriman's views were supported in addresses by B. M. Birla, Indian employers delegate, and by J. Kitaoka, Japanese government representative, who said the consuming power of the agricultural worker in Japan was far more important to the textile industry than the consuming power of the industrial population.

Kan Yo-nieh, Chinese employers delegate, stressed the potential purchasing power of China's population of 400,000,000, about 80 per cent of which is agricultural.

McCarl Criticizes Reorganizing Plan

Cincinnati, April 9 (AP).—John R. McCarl, former Comptroller General of the United States, criticized in an address tonight the President's proposal to reorganize the Government.

"I am firmly convinced of the imperative need for a thorough reorganiaztion of the activities of Government, after 15 years of most intimate contact with such agencies.

"But it is a matter of keen disappointment to me that I find nothing to enthuse about in the report of the President's committee (on Government reorganization). The report has already done serious damage and done it most effectively—as apparently was its purpose."

Century of Rain and Drought Shown in Graphs

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge Foundation in the Library of Congress presents the first concert of the eighth biennial chamber music festival Friday evening.

Before an audience of invited guests distinguished by the presence of composers, artists and music lovers from many cities, the eighth biennial festival of chamber music began last evening in the auditorium which houses in the Library of Congress the concerts endowed by Mrs. Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge, America's most devoted patroness of room music. Continuous as her activities are in the dissemination of intimate compositions, they reach a symbolic crest every two years at these festivals given in the home of the foundation that bears her name.

Preserving a cronological unity, the program transported its auditors to the baroque period of the late seventeenth and early eighteenth centuries, that epoch when music, as well as architecture and literature, decked itself with florid and whimsical ornamentation. The earliest composer in the list was Henry Purcell, who made English music illustrious while Bach was still an infant. His sonata for trumpet, strings and harpsichord, so rare a document as to be a complete novelty in this later age, illustrated the indefinable yet unmistakable accents of nationality in music.

Anything more English in its quality it would be difficult to adduce. While it contains no folk elements, its characteristics are Anglo-Saxon: a sturdy and eupeptic strength, a breezy vigor, a certain reticence in emotion, and a sound sweetness beneath a bluff demeanor.

Johann Sebastian Bach came next with his Chromatic Fantasia and Fugue, a veritable extravagance of decorative fancy. Our ears have become accustomed to its dynamic distortion on the noisy and percussive pianoforte, but last evening it resumed its symmetrical proportions in the performance by Alice Ehlers on the harpsichord. Miss Ehlers has a skilled fluency on that delicate instrument, but that is only one aspect of a musicianship marked by perspective subtleties and a spirit fresh in poetic impulses.

Gerhard Diessener emerged from the shadow of obscurity to speak for a moment through his sonata for two violins, viola and harpsichord. Little is known about him, but he seems to have been a gentle soul, contemplative in temperament, and somewhat of a mystic. Giovanni Valentini, represented by a sonata transcribed for two violins, violoncello and harpsichord by E. H. Meyer, was a predecessor of Bach, and his sonata has a charming Italinate flavor.

which brought out a too early bloom on the trees. The crop may be as much as one-third below last year's and one-fifth below average. The Southern potato crop is below average due to cold, wet weather during March, except in North Carolina, Florida, Alabama, and Louisiana. Nevertheless the crop will be 1.2 per cent above 1936 and will equal the average crop.

Stocks of corn stood at 411,980,000 bushels, and oat stocks at 287,745,000 bushels.

The report estimated the condition of rye at 71.4 normal. Also showing the lingering effect of the drought, pastures were reported only 66 per cent normal on April 1.

Seeding of wheat in the Northwest will begin this week, and should be general all over that vast section of the wheat belt in a few days, Kincer said. There was 20 inches of snow on the ground there last year and the same amount this year, but the 20-inch blanket extends hundreds of miles farther south and west this year than last, assuring wider moisture for spring planting. This does not necessarily assure a bumper crop, Kincer said, "but it is a very good start."

Kwantung Blind Flee At Execution Threats

Yeungkong, Kwantung Province, China, April 9 (AP).—Blind persons as well as lepers were believed doomed to death tonight as civil and military authorities continued hunting down and executing the lepers.

It was rumored the eradication campaign would extend to the blind, and afflicted persons went into hiding. Those physically able fled the area. Seventy-five lepers were executed on Easter Sunday by the provincial soldiery.

Italians Brand 3 Missionaries Of U.S. as Spies

By the United Press.

Rome, April 9.—Premier Benito Mussolini's angry press attacks on foreign nations threatened tonight to bring sharp U. S. diplomatic action following semi-official hints that three American missionaries would be expelled from Ethiopia as "spies or agents of shady business."

The U. S. Embassy said it was "quite likely" that official inquiries would be made at Il Duce's foreign office.

At the same time it was revealed that "Great Britain has instructed her ambassador, Sir Eric Drummond, to "take up strongly" with the Italian government the expulsion of seven British missionaries from Ethiopia on the same grounds.

Virginio Gayda, editor of the Giornale d' Italia, the mouthpiece for Mussolini, revealed in an article that the seven British missionaries had been expelled and warned that three American women would be ousted soon

"All Protestant missionaries in Ethiopia will be revealed as spies or the agents of shady business," Gayda said.

The fiery Fascist editor charged that the American women "have been discovered to have had intimate connections" with a British spy.

The American women were identified by Gayda as Ruth Shippey, Bartha Domermuth and Helen French.

The alleged British spy was described as a "British Col. Sandford, who is revealed to have been active in the espionage service." Sandford, the article said, formerly was attached to the British legation in Addis Ababa and later was one of Tafari's (Haile Selassie) counselors.

"It is only fair," Gayda said, "that these three American girls should be put across the frontiers to hunt for other fields for their propaganda."

The United States Embassy said it had no official information regarding Giornale d'Italia's charges because all documents regarding such matters are in possession of Morris Hughes, United States diplomatic agent, who is expected to leave Addis Ababa soon.

Italian officials, it was explained, gave United States officials no notice of the expulsions.

Duce Held Aiding Franco.

By the Associated Press.

An assertion Premier Mussolini is "concentrating new divisions of Italian troops" to aid the Spanish insurgents failed yesterday to win immediate Senate consideration of alleged foreign intervention in Spain's civil war.

Senator Nye (Republican), North Dakota, made the assertion in support of his proposal that the Senate ask the State Department whether American neutrality laws require "an embargo against nations whose armed forces are engaged in active warfare" in Spain.

The embargo now in effect is limited to arms shipments to the warring Spaniards.

Nye's proposal was challenged by Chairman Pittman (Democrat), of Nevada, of the Foreign Relations Committee, who termed it unfortunate and dangerous.

After the North Dakotan had contended that according to all rules of fair play and consistency the United States should forbid arms shipments to "all nations participating in the Spanish conflict," Pittman told the Senate:

"I think this matter should not be stirred up in this country, when there is nothing we can accomplish except to arouse hatred.

"I think it is very dangerous to our peace . . . to insinuate that a government is conducting an undeclared war against another government until the facts are clearly established."

He noted a nation might have armed citizens fighting in Spain without involving its official armed forces.

America itself is in such a position, he said, since "undoubtedly many Americans are fighting on one side or the other in Spain"

Doubt Seen Impossible.

Pittman also contended Nye's resolution was not in proper form, and asked that it be given his committee for study. The Senate agreed.

In presenting his request for a State Department report on embargo powers, Nye argued:

"Even the Italian newspapers have admitted that there has been official Italian aid in Spain."

13 Foreign Service Assignments Made

Thirteen foreign service officers in the State Department were assigned to foreign posts yesterday. They will serve with American vice consuls at the various points.

Two of the 13 are from Washington: John Ordway, 1710 Thirty-fifth street northwest, son of Col. Godwin Ordway, U. S. A., retired, assigned to Calcutta, and Douglas MacArthur 2d, 3102 Cleveland avenue, nephew of Gen. Douglas MacArthur, assigned to Naples.

Other assignments are: E. Tomlin Bailey, to Warsaw; Russell E. Benton, to London; Roswell C. Beverstock, to Belfast; Richard W. Byrd, to Marseille; James Espy, to Shanghai; Andrew D. Foster, to Athens; Richard D. Gatewood, to Sao Paulo, Brazil; Elbert C. Mathews, to Sydney; George F. Sherer, to Havana; William P. Snow, to Stockholm, and Louis Woodruff Wallner, jr., to Barcelona. All except Ordway and Gatewood are expected to sail immediately.

Loyalists Make Strategic Gains

Government forces in Spain, joining from the north and south to close a long-existing gap near Blasquez and threatening to cut the insurgent line of communication to Cordoba at both Penarroya and Villaharta, made important gains.

captured many important positions."

Among these were a dominating hill on the Coruna road, running northwest from the city, and the upper Cuessia de la Perdice, adjoining the Casa de Campo Park.

Miaja's infantry, led by the International Brigade and his machine gun squads, pushed through the heavily wooded park—now a field of gaunt, shell-riddled trees—while the fleeing enemy fell in rows.

Further north another army of loyalists drove against El Pardo Woods, attempting to cut in behind the rebels retreating from the Casa de Campo.

The fighting lines extended, without a break, along the whole western side of the city, where Franco's rebels have attacked repeatedly in hope of penetrating the capital.

Rebels Push Toward Bilbao.

Hendaye, Franco-Spanish Border, April 9 (AP).—Spanish insurgent troops, fighting to capture Bilbao, Basque capital in Northern Spain, were reported today to have smashed through government lines and entered suburbs of the key city of Durango.

Durango, 16 miles from Bilbao, is situated on an improved highway leading directly to the capital. One column of the northern insurgent army was said to have occupied outskirts of the city.

Francisco Franco, announcing the entry, said defenders of Bilbao had received reinforcements of seven battalions of soldiers from Asturias Province.

13 Americans Sentenced.

Perpignan, France, April 9 (AP).—Thirteen Americans, convicted by a police court of attempting to enter Spain to enlist with the Spanish government army, were sentenced today to 20 days in prison.

They will have to serve only five days, however. With five Canadians and seven men of other nationalities who also received 20-day terms, they had spent 15 days of their sentences in jail awaiting trial.

Banquet to Honor Dean Fitzpatrick

Rounding out his fifth year as dean of Columbus University Law School, Dr. John R. Fitzpatrick will be honored tonight at a testimonial banquet at the Kennedy-Warren given by Alpha Mu Chapter of Sigma Delta Kappa legal fraternity. The banquet will be combined with ceremonies initiating 26 new members into the fraternity.

William A. Roberts, former people's counsel of the District, and a member of the faculty, will present an oil painting of Dr. Fitzpatrick to the university, which will be accepted by Harold Francis Jones, member of the board of trustees, who will be inducted into the legal fraternity as an honorary member. The oil painting was executed by Mary Margaret Hudgins.

Dr. Fitzpatrick is completing 15 years' association with Knights of Columbus educational activities in this city. In the five years he has been dean of the law school, student enrollment has been boosted from 232 to 783.

Soviet Tightens Rail Regulation To Balk Spying

Newspaper Says Reich, Japan Are Active; Confidential Messages Reduced.

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, April 9.—The Russian commissariat of railways, fearing information gained by spies in peace time may be used in war, tightened its rail communications today in two moves designed to wipe out espionage and sabotage.

The newspaper Gudok disclosed the rail administration proposes to weed out all employes considered not wholly trustworthy, and that the commissariat of posts and telegraphs will decrease the sending of important information over its lines.

A close check will be made on the political views of all telegraphers handling necessary messages.

"Every railroad station, shop and water tower, even turntable, is important for the defense of the country," the newspaper said.

"Every employe must remember his responsibility—remember Germany's aims to spread its claws into our branches of transport."

The newspaper charged the German Intelligence Service with trying to recruit train agents as spies in important garrison centers to report on troop movements during peace time and be able to wreck communications in war.

"The Japanese also are busy sending spies," the paper said, admonishing employes to bear in mind that Japan is converting Manchuria into a military garrison preparatory to an attack on the Soviet Union."

Brazil Sit-Down Curbs Cupid's Work

Rio de Janeiro, April 9 (AP).—Brazil had two "sit-down" strikes to worry about today—one stopped marriages, the other music.

Nineteen would-be bridegrooms petitioned the court at Bello Horizonte, capital of the state of Minas Geraes, to compel justices of the peace to marry them.

The justices, they said, were sitting down in their offices, striking against "low pay."

Rumors of Rise In Dollar Cited For Franc Loss

Paris Financiers Blame Trade Slump Also, as Drop Is Checked.

London money rates afford new attraction for idle French funds. This, they said, created a reversal of the previous monetary situation in which Paris rates were much higher than British. Much of the sales of francs for pound sterlings, they said, was for this reason.

Financiers maintained they had no evidence that the equalization fund had been used to stimulate the tourist business and for repatriation of French capital.

The question now, these circles said, was whether the equalization fund would be able to control the decline. Monetary experts pondered the effect of political nervousness which, while not as marked as several months ago, still is not entirely abated. They feared the possibility that weakness of the franc in foreign exchange might provoke a new exodus of capital.

Furthermore, some financial sources believed the equalization fund had not yet recovered its resources lost in the flight of gold from France at the end of 1936 and the beginning of this year.

Toward A Cuban Settlement.

Accredited representatives of American groups holding bonds of the overthrown Machado regime have been invited by the present Government of Cuba to participate in discussions looking toward a debt settlement. The legality of the public works bonds issued by Machado had been challenged. But last June the Supreme Court of Cuba recognized them as a legal obligation and urged their payment.

The fact that the present Cuban government has taken the initiative in suggesting a debt settlement is most gratifying. It strengthens hope that an amicable solution of the controversy over these bonds will soon be found. Pressure exerted by creditors to obtain satisfaction from unwilling or indifferent foreign debtor groups or governments is seldom successful. Willingness to pay is quite as important—sometimes more important—than ability to pay. In the present instance the Cuban government has given the best possible indication of good faith.

The step now taken by the Havana government results from a notable improvement in economic conditions, reflected in increased governmental revenues and a rapid rise in Cuban exports. Hence the time seems opportune for eliminating an ever-present potential cause of friction between this country and our island neighbor by settling legitimate claims of American creditors.

Our trade relationships with Cuba have been regulated and improved by the conclusion of a reciprocal trade pact, followed by a pronounced rise in both our exports to and imports from Cuba. That is due in part to concessions granted under the trade agreement and is partly the result of the general betterment in economic conditions.

If the State Department had followed the policy of linking debt settlements with trade agreements, as urged by some critics of its policies, an amicable settlement of these distinct if related issues in case of the Cubans might have been indefinitely deferred. The wisdom of the policy followed is demonstrated in this case by the course events are taking.

Tax-Exempt Officials.

As a result of opinions handed down by two Attorneys General of New York State a large number of officials, including the Governor, Lieutenant Governor and members of the Legislature, are exempt from State income taxes. Gov. Lehman has, therefore, addressed a message to the Legislature urging abolition of these tax exemption privileges by a statutory declaration of policy which would entail a different interpretation of a relevant provision of the State Constitution.

Even if the Legislature should accede to this request, and if the courts should uphold its action, as constitutional, the officials of New York State, whether of high or low degree, will continue to enjoy exemption from Federal income taxation. It is well established that the employes of State and local governments are not liable to payment of Federal income taxes. And employes of the Federal Government are likewise exempt from payment of State income taxes.

Hence, however rigorously State governments or the Federal Government may tax their own employes, a constitutional amendment would be required to eliminate all the tax-exemption privileges which public employes now enjoy.

Gov. Lehman's proposal, however, has the merit of calling attention to the larger issue presented by the existence of a vast and growing body of public servants who ought to be contributing to the support of government along with their fellow citizens in private employment. The need for such reforms has been emphasized by the recent decision of the Supreme Court in the Brush case. The Court there held that an engineer in the employ of New York City's municipally-owned water system was not subject to a Federal income tax. The reason assigned was that the acquisition and distribution of water involved the exercise of "essential governmental functions."

As a result of this decision many thousands of individuals employed on State and municipal projects may be able to establish claims to tax exemption. With all our governments—Federal, State and local—taking over new functions formerly regarded as private, there is likely to be an alarming increase in the number of tax-exempt officials, if the Brush case is regarded as a precedent.

While there are possibilities of abuse in a system of intergovernmental taxation of public officials under our dual system of government, the danger is not great. And there is no doubt that thousands of citizens who can afford to pay taxes, and who ought to contribute to their own upkeep, are legally shifting the burden to others.

A Study In Contrasts.

Premier Mitchell Hepburn's denunciation of the sit-down strike becomes the more impressive when it is realized that this form of coercion has not yet become a menace in Canada. The strike at Oshawa is an old-fashioned walkout. In issuing his emphatic statement against lawless practices on the part of labor unions the Ontario premier's chief purpose seems to have been to forestall any spread of sit-down tactics across the border.

It is interesting to measure policies pursued in the United States against those of our neighbor on the north. In Michigan, Gov. Murphy has tactfully compromised with groups holding illegal possession of factories. His commendable purpose has been to avoid bloodshed. But failure to enforce the law until the demands of the strikers have, in some measure, been met appears definitely to have encouraged further use of illegal methods.

In Pennsylvania, Gov. Earle has severely criticized the sheriff who failed to prevent Wednesday's riot at Hershey. But he appears completely to ignore the illegal acts which caused the riot. The State police, he says, "will prevent mob rule." They "will not be used to suppress union labor." "Neither," he added, "are they interested in the sit-down problem."

This seems to indicate that Gov. Earle draws a distinction between the illegal seizure of property and mob rule. Actually, no such distinction can be made. Mob rule begins when a minority group forcibly takes over a factory, thus trampling upon the rights of the management, of other employes, and of producing and consuming groups whose interests are closely involved in the operation of that plant. Riots resulting from this strategy are merely a manifestation of its intrinsic lawlessness.

Canada is well advised to guard against this approach to anarchy. It is not surprising that Premier Hepburn should prepare to utilize all the resources of the province, if the occasion warrants, to prevent any development in Ontario "resembling that which is taking place at the present time across the line, due to failure on the part of constituted authority to take adequate action."

Nor is it strange that he should resent the interference of "agitators" from this country in the Canadian labor situation. Certainly Americans would not look with complacence upon the importation into this country of foreign strike leaders with a reputation for revolutionary tactics in their home lands.

In assuming that the chief issue in the sit-down strike is adjustment of grievances between employes and employers many of our officials are making a serious mistake. From the public viewpoint the larger question is the preservation of law and order. The negotiation of working agreements will mean little if the ability of the State to uphold the law is impaired, or if the State fails to protect citizens in the legal pursuit of a livelihood.

The Senate denounced the sit-down technique and the refusal of employers to bargain collectively largely because these practices are a challenge to orderly government. For the same reason it is highly desirable that the House should make its position clear. Rejection of the Dies resolution calling for an investigation of sit-down strikes is subject to misunderstanding. No legislative body can afford to let its silence be construed as encouragement to groups employing the methods of mob rule.

Muddling With Child Welfare.

The consequences of trying to effect important institutional changes through appropriation bills are pointedly illustrated by the muddle in which the Children's Receiving Home has become involved. Every one familiar with conditions at the home realizes that they are unsatisfactory. But the remedy approved by the House would result in chaos where there is now only want of segregation.

An appropriation of $250,000 was requested by the Board of Public Welfare for a new Children's Receiving Home so that young bandits held to answer charges could be properly separated from children who happen to be lost or abandoned. In view of the District's prospective deficit, funds for that project could not be found. Nevertheless, the House sub-committee on District appropriations decided to abandon the present receiving home and substitute therefor a system of boarding homes.

Elimination of the present unsuitable institution is all to the good. It has no playground, which makes the problem of discipline very difficult. It is an improper place to incarcerate young criminals, who find escape relatively easy. Children sent there are frequently afflicted with venereal disease. It is obviously unsuitable as a temporary abode for youngsters who have committed no offense whatever.

In providing for a substitute arrangement, however, the committee chose the least desirable plan offered by the Board of Public Welfare. And that plan was emasculated. As the District appropriations bill was passed by the House, it calls for the placement of children who fall into the hands of the police in foster homes. Presumably that would permit proper segregation. But how could young desperadoes be properly held in a boarding home? That part of the arrangement appears especially absurd because the committee eliminated funds for the maintenance of a staff to select and supervise boarding homes and generally to look after the welfare of children who temporarily become wards of the community.

As an emergency measure the placement of children in foster homes might be satisfactory, if proper supervision can be given and a special institution can be provided for youngsters accused of serious crimes. As the bill stands, however, it would make a bad situation worse. In this instance all the House succeeded in doing was to create a difficult problem for the Senate to iron out.

Russia's Air Fleet.

No recent development in the Spanish civil war has occasioned more interest, or is of more far-reaching significance, than the mastery of the air which has now been achieved by the loyalist forces. Whether or not this indicates eventual victory for the Valencia government, it is clear that supremacy in airplanes has coincided with a new-found ability to take the aggressive.

The interest of the development, however, is not limited to the ebb and flow of the Spanish war. Because the contending armadas are composed almost entirely of foreign planes, and are probably in large part flown by foreign pilots, the implications of the aerial struggle are international, and are recognized as such by all military observers.

The great majority of the Fascist planes, of course, are of Italian or German manufacture. Both these nations pride themselves on the prowess of their air fleets, and until recently it appeared that the "Spanish maneuvers," as the fighting there is sometimes cynically styled, had justified that pride. But a month or so ago the French and Russian planes attached to the loyalist forces began to accomplish a supremacy which now seems firmly established.

Most of the credit for this clearly belongs to the Russian planes. Whether shipped by sea or flown direct, scores of swift pursuit planes and bombers have reached loyalist territory from the Soviet Union. And, to the surprise of many, they have now proceeded to demonstrate their superiority over the opposing Italian and German aircraft.

In the war colleges of two nations in particular this development must be causing much concern. Neither Germany nor Japan, with their densely populated cities lying within striking distance of Russia's far-flung frontiers, could afford to wage war on the Soviet Union if there is any strong likelihood that the latter can maintain air supremacy. To Japan, with its tinder-box cities so short a distance from the Russian air base at Vladivostok, the Spanish object lesson must seem particularly grim. For Germany, with the nerve centers of its compact industries exposed to attack from above, the moral will be scarcely less effective.

Whether, or how much, Russia has violated the nonintervention agreement for Spain is a question of importance. But independent of the answer to that, the recent achievements of the Russian planes in Spain are a significant matter. In a curious paradoxical way the miniature world war in the Iberian Peninsula may now make a more widespread battlefield less probable. For the current evidence is certainly such as to encourage a great deal of restraint in both Berlin and Tokyo.

Italy, having less to fear from Russia, and more at stake in Spain, may be less circumspect. But the chances against either Germany or Japan pushing a forward policy against Russia are certainly lessened by the demonstration that the latter country is in a position to hit back, and to hit hard, if it is made a victim of aggression.

The Commercial Angle.

Newspaper and newsreel shots of one particular Washington scene are speeding today to every corner of the country, if not the world. Through them tens of millions of persons will visualize something of the full glory of the cherry blossoms around the Tidal Basin. As a result, many so far deprived of the opportunity will shortly register their resolve to visit Washington when—or rather if—the blossoms bloom again.

The cherry blossoms are not the only attraction for our springtime visitors. But they may fairly be termed a principal influence, as an infallible and particularly appealing symbol of spring. And spring is the season, as Chaucer aptly observed, when "folk longen to goon on pilgrimages." More colloquially, spring brings an urge to go places. And the National Capital, everywhere advertised by its cherry blossoms, becomes a natural magnet for this restlessness. Estimates of the annual commercial value of spring tourists here run well into the millions.

The point has a particular significance this year in view of the much-criticized design for the proposed Jefferson Memorial. As now planned, the structure will require a transformation—for the worse—of the entire Tidal Basin area. The construction would entail obliteration of the basin's present shore-line along which the cherry blossoms blow. For a period which would have to be measured in years, only memory would picture the blossoms mirrored against still waters or silhouetted against the graceful shaft of Washington's Monument.

For years the attractions of Washington in springtime would be very materially lessened and visitors would stay away by just that much. It may be a secondary criticism of the present memorial plans, but it is one which the city should appreciate before protest is too late.

Sherman's March.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A prominently displayed article on the front page of your paper of April 7 affords a superb example of the ignorance and sloppy editing which has caused the public so greatly to lose confidence in the accuracy of the news as it is printed.

"Sherman's unopposed march to the sea explained in newly found letter to Jefferson Davis" says the headline. The news item begins: "A dark mystery of the Civil War—Gen. William Tecumseh Sherman's unopposed march to the sea was solved tonight," etc.

In the first place, who says there was any mystery about it? Sherman was unopposed because the Confederate army marched off to Tennessee and left Sherman to his own devices. They thought he would march in pursuit of them, but he didn't. No mystery about it.

In the second place, the letter from Jefferson Davis quoted wouldn't solve the mystery if there were one. It merely gives his reasons for changing the commanders of the army. The most casual students of history knew about this long ago; it's hardly front page news today.

Somebody in your organization ought to invest in a good elementary history of the United States—and a first-class alarm o'clock. If you don't take some such precaution, you're likely to startle the Washington public with a five-star extra explaining the mystery of why Jefferson Davis evacuated Richmond. J. P. VARNER.

Examples Of Anarchy.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Because a newspaper has a great influence on the minds of the people, great care should be taken to present both sides of the question. Of course, if you are looking for one thing, you are most likely to find only one thing.

In your report titled "Symptoms of Anarchy" you referred to the sit-down strike as anarchical disorder. You also imply that it is the President's job to give an opinion on the sit-down strike.

The parts that you left out in your editorial were that half of these strikes were not collective bargaining, and you failed to publish a set of laws governing the President stating that he shall voice an opinion on this and that. The Wagner labor law says that there shall be collective bargaining. Some employers failed to follow this law. There is a good example of anarchy.

The root of the matter is more interesting than that which lies on the surface. OH SAY.

Anti-Lynching Legislation.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Gavagan anti-lynching bill has been brought to my attention in an article by Mr. Russel Smith which was published in the issue of April 7.

The above-mentioned bill endeavors to place the liability upon the State or political subdivision in which a lynching occurs. The supporters of this type of legislation claim that under the Fourteenth Amendment the State has denied to the person lynched the equal protection of the laws and therefore the Federal Government has a constitutional right to step in.

The United States of America is a Federal Republic composed of 48 smaller republics. According to the Tenth Amendment, "The powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution, nor prohibited by it to the States, are reserved to the States respectively, or to the people." This is the basis of the celebrated doctrine of States' rights. There is no express delegation of power to the Congress to control the local affairs of a State so long as there is a constitutionally organized government functioning therein. Any attempt by Congress to appropriate to itself such a power is an invasion of States' rights.

The Gavagan anti-lynching bill and its proposed action are contrary to Article IV, Section 4, of the Federal Constitution which says, "The United States shall guarantee to every State in this Union a Republican form of government and shall protect each of them against invasion, and on application of the Legislature, or of the Executive (when the Legislature cannot be convened) against domestic violence."

It is clear that lynching comes under the head of domestic violence and according to our Constitution Federal action can only be taken when the State Legislature or Executive applies for the same. I maintain that such a case is beyond the legislative jurisdiction of the Congress.

The members of Congress take an oath to uphold and support the Constitution of the United States and they should not attempt to pass legislation which tends to destroy or undermine the principles of that document. If they do not care to be true to themselves they might at least remember that such action is a reflection upon the people who elected them to office.
IVO DE CAPET.
Washington, April 8.

Advice To Congressmen.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A Congressman, to support the President's court-packing plan and the regulatory laws which will follow it, will have to be very courageous, or very dumb, or both.

Those regulatory laws will operate directly and immediately on all enterprises and on all the people, both employers and employes, engaged in them. Naturally, therefore, those laws and the Congressmen who helped pass them will be blamed by the people if living costs should be high and times hard shortly before the 1938 elections. And they will be.

The budget will never be balanced during Mr. Roosevelt's Administration. That is a cinch. Income taxes are not producing the expected revenue and increased taxes will have to be levied this year or next, or the Government will have to resort to even heavier borrowings. Benefit payments to farmers will continue. So will excessive relief expenditures. Wages paid to certain groups of organized labor will go higher and higher, as will operating expenses of business and industry. The point is that all of these will cause the already high prices of the things a family has to buy to go higher and higher. They make for a high cost of living and hard times for more than a majority of the people. Moreover, the regulatory laws themselves may have this same effect. But whether they do or not they and the Congressmen who passed them will get the blame if living costs should be high and times hard at election time in 1938. CANUTE.
Washington, April 1.

"No More Cherry Blossoms?"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Congratulations on your editorial of April 7 with respect to the Jefferson Memorial proposal. I believe that there is a definite public appreciation of the enormity of this idea, both architecturally and geographically.

I have yet to have any of my acquaintances mention this approvingly, and even in this rather frank age you could not publish some of the descriptive terms that I have heard applied to the plans for this alleged memorial.

RICHARD W. WESTWOOD,
Managing Editor, Nature Magazine.
Washington, April 8.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Please let me thank The Post for its powerful editorial of April 7 entitled "No More Cherry Blossoms." It is the most comprehensive and enlightening statement that has appeared to date on the contemplated destruction of the Tidal Basin, revealing for the first time the full enormity of a vast construction "project," for which Thomas Jefferson was to be made the excuse.

There is a further great and necessary public service that I hope The Post will perform, which is to ascertain and make public the answers to the following questions:

What are the concrete, cement and asphalt interests that stand to make huge profits out of filling up the biggest possible sink hole, namely, the Tidal Basin, with the largest possible amount of their products—and out of the construction of all of the extra roadways?

Are these the same corporations that cleaned up on the recent million-dollar so-called "parks rehabilitation program," whose sole result—and apparently sole purpose—was to pour asphalt and cement in every possible available space?

What are the political connections of these firms?

Was anyone else except Representative Boylan, of New York, responsible for the inception and promotion of the Thomas Jefferson Memorial project? Is Mr. Boylan responsible for its present form? Did Mr. Boylan also father the "parks rehabilitation program?"

What has been the role of the Park and Planning Commission and of the Fine Arts Commission, which are supposed to be custodians of the public interests in esthetic matters, in this contemplated crowning outrage in the progressive demolition of our parks?

THERESA H. RUSSELL.
Washington, April 7.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Hurrah for your editorial of April 7 in regard to the contemplated destruction of the cherry trees in the name of Thomas Jefferson. To the visitors in Washington to see the cherry blossoms today let us say, go up to Congress and protest to your Representatives and Senators there against this wasteful destruction of beauty. This is the last time the City of Washington will ever have the privilege of beholding this miracle of nature in its midst.

Why can we not beautify an ugly spot in this city to honor Jefferson rather than desecrate beauty already revered?

WILDA P. MACKENZIE.
Washington, April 7.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your most excellent editorial of April 7 entitled "No More Cherry Blossoms" should be copied and widely distributed by the press generally. It may cause those interested citizens who are anxious that our Capital City shall remain a beautiful spot to use their influence with the ones in authority to reconsider the plans formulated and starting to be carried out to destroy the exceptional beauty of the Tidal Basin and cherry trees in that section of the city.

Of course, there could be some other site selected for the Jefferson Memorial that is appropriate and suitable, and we join you most heartily in registering our disapproval of the "contemplated outrage," though the writer is a stanch Jeffersonian South Carolina Democrat. JAMES R. DURHAM.
Columbia, S. C., April 7.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have just finished reading the editorial, "No More Cherry Blossoms?" in The Post of April 7. The description of the demolition of esthetic and utilitarian values involved in the use of the proposed Tidal Basin site for the Jefferson Memorial is both astonishing and alarming to anyone who cares for what water and cherry blossoms have done for that part of Washington. So far as the proposed structure is concerned, it seems to be quite out of keeping with the characteristics of the man it is to memorialize.

I wish your editorial might be copied by newspapers throughout our country. You have rendered Washington and the Nation a valuable service.

EDWARD W. THOMPSON.

The Post Impressionist

A Lass And A Alack.

WE were what Mrs. Arabella Mixing, our hostess, called a nicely balanced little party, four men and four women, and after we had dined, and before we sat down to bridge, we chatted.

During dinner the judge's wife had mentioned that in Spence County, Ind., women held all the offices; Casual Smith after saying they probably filled them adequately had left his declaration hanging on a "but;" Mrs. Smith had said that she had seen in the paper that some celebrated man had declared that at some time in the future we might have a woman for President; and Mrs. Mixing had snorted; that's the only word for it.

Which is why Capt. Ebenezer Longbow, as he lit his cigar, asked her, with a glint of mischief in his eyes, what she meant by it. So she told us.

Far be it from me (said Mrs. Mixing) to either belittle or unduly exalt my own sex. I strive to be fair though never fat and no longer 40. But I hope I may never live to see a woman President.

I'm not saying that such a thing will never happen. Lots of strange, sad things happen. I'm not saying, either, that a woman isn't big enough for the job. The trouble is that all the chances are she would be too big.

Brainy women are not so common as brainy men (I'll grant you that, you big lummuxes!) but we have 'em. Some of them the world knows and some of them are hiding their lights under a bushel for daws to peck at—if I haven't got my measures mixed.

And I'm not worried about a woman's handicaps in life's race. Of course she has them. Nature handicaps her. And custom handicaps her. It may even be that most of her handicaps wear pants. But she has her compensations.

Ingersoll said that a woman should have all the rights of man and one right more; the right to be protected. I'll go him one better. She has a right to all her privileges. It riles me to see advanced feminists disdaining their privileges; threatening to throw them right and left till none are left.

No, it isn't a woman's ability I'm questioning, but her democracy. I have an abiding faith in, and love for, the government handed down to us by our fathers and I don't want to see it spoiled. And when I say "our fathers" I speak with a proper sense of proportion. Our mothers undoubtedly had much to do with the advantages and the blessings we know. Physically and socially woman has been a powerful factor in the making of America, but with our democracy she had next to nothing to do, for temperamentally she is opposed to anything of the kind.

Terhune has noted the fact that it is the woman of the house a dog loves best but it is the man he obeys and with whom he is chummiest. It is that combination of chumminess and discipline that a woman is unable to achieve; and that combination, be it noted, is the essence of democracy. And you don't have to go to high places for proof. Compare Tugboat Annie and Disko Troop. Tugboat Annie, for all her kindly disposition, is a despot. Troop preserves absolute discipline on the We're Here merely by "suggesting" this or that.

There is a fellowship among men foreign to women. Men have worked together and played together, hunted and fished together; and that fellowship is democracy. But women have always ruled or been ruled. They have never known any middle course. A woman is a despot in her own home, a kindly and loving despot as a rule, but a despot nevertheless, and her husband and her children are her subjects. And she slaves for them while she rules. Oh, of course, there are exceptions. There are always exceptions.

That women are holding office here and there and making good at it is nothing to grow elated about. It just isn't as important as it sounds. And it doesn't at all affect my main contention.

Perhaps the United States is moving toward a dictatorship. There are times when it looks that way. But if ever we have a woman President that dictatorship will proceed to walk from around the corner where it has been loafing.

A woman will care nothing for a government with checks and balances. She'll want action. She'll run the country as she runs her home. She'll have spring cleaning and regular days for the laundry. She'll explore the cupboards in due season and look for moths. She'll shift the furniture around when she has a mind to and put little economic and eleemosynary doo-dads here and there. And the proletariat will have no more say-so than the hired girl.

Yes, indeed. There'll be everything in that mansion except harmony. There will be one boss, and in just a little while she won't be content simply to run things; the rest of the country will have to tell her continually how good she is; and that sooner or later will make for trouble.

When a woman wins the apple of authority there ain't goin' to be no esprit de corps.

GRIP ALEXANDER.

Books On Sex.

SOMETIMES I envy the profundity of those serious thinkers who read the ideology magazines and know all about the Supreme Court, the Constitution, the Ukraine, Stakhanovism and soil erosion in Tennessee.

They do get around, these people, if only in the compass of a 15-cent weekly having neither illustrations nor humor, as such. Yet on those rare occasions when I tiptoe into their solemn company to the extent of buying a copy at the hotel newsstand to while away an evening puzzling out the editorials I have a feeling that in one respect at least I am a very superior man.

• • • • •

IT SEEMS that these serious thinkers are great dummies on the subject of sex, and I frankly marvel at the advertisements for sex books calculated to teach them homely fundamentals which most adults regard as matters of common knowledge. Somehow, ordinary people, living on a lower plane, just pick up this information as they go along and come to maturity with a fair practical understanding of what it is all about. Some get it in revelations from their mothers and fathers, others pick it up from older kids who learned it God knows where, and those who lived on farms in their youth can hardly remember a time when they didn't know the score.

We-all, baby-havin', 'tater-hoein', homespun folks of the great American majority—well, stranger, we don't regard sex as any fittin' topic for a book, and it's our view that any grown-up man or woman who has got to read a book about it ain't going to be any wiser afterward than what they was before. They just ain't the type, and it seems a shame for any book publisher to take their money at the rate of $7.50 a copy for the de luxe edition or $2 for the cloth.

• • • • •

JUST ON THE RECORD, this kind of book seems superfluous except for people to whom it would be useless. The human race has achieved a very ripe age and steady improvement thus far, and no man of any pride will ever admit that he had to turn to Chapter IX to brush up on courtship. He would try her with mandolin music, poetry, gin or a good bust on the snoot, according to his own judgment of her susceptibilities, and if he didn't click—well, giddap. But he would have done no better if, having her in a hammock of a summer night, he switched on the light—the fool—to see what the book said about it. This is a time for ad libbing, and if a man has the knack she's his'n.

The learned doctors who wrote these books might be surprised and more than a little disappointed in the human race if they could read a verbatim of some of the gibberish which has been used to close successful deals of this kind. And I would lay something like 8 to 5 that our serious thinkers when they come to a clinch forget their lessons and gurgle and goo like any soda clerk, failing which they might better save their breath.

• • • •

BUT PERHAPS I flatter them. They do seem a gritty, gloomy lot, these brows who write and read cold anatomies of humor and love, and they may be just as grim as they seem. And I do not waive a suspicion that some of these pretentious intellects, for all their Ph. D.'s and their chilly approach to a warm subject, like to read such copy for the same reason that dirty-minded people of inferior orders like to pore over dog-eared copies of the standard dirty classics.

As for the female of the species, I have only a mental picture, and that unappetizing. But for that I might invite them to stay after class.

15 Years of Elevating the Movies.

Will Hays this year celebrates 15 years in the movies. He is about the only person to last that long in pictures without being in a cabaret brawl, a bungalow shooting or a test for the role of Rhett Butler.

• • • •

It seems only yesterday that Hays, fresh from the chairmanship of the Republican National Committee and a few years out of a Washington Cabinet, became czar of the screen.

• • • •

But it was away back when a Republican was thought to have made a sacrifice if he abandoned a political career.

• • • •

Deciding to give up all hopes of a career with the G. O. P. that long ago shows how smart Will was.

• • • •

It was in 1922 that Hays became czar of the movies. That was away back when a Theda Bara hip twist could shock the public and when Francis X. Bushman was thought to constitute a love menace.

• • • •

Nineteen twenty-two! . . . The most oft-repeated title was "That Night," there was a profession known as title writing, a screen kiss was thought daring and obscenity couldn't get a start anywhere.

• • • •

When the screen went in for a censor Charlie Chaplin's pie-tossings were rated as the height of vulgarity, Mae West hadn't attained a following outside of Brooklyn, and if a boy wanted to find out how to operate a machine gun he had to go some place besides a children's matinee. "Nuts to you!" would have been unthinkable on stage or screen, and the nearest thing to a gangster film was a Keystone picture in which the Keystone cops were called out.

• • • •

Still, Mr. Hays has been good for pictures. He gives the public the comforting idea its moral life is being protected down to the last smoking-car wisecrack. It makes the movie magnates feel that if their crime pictures reach the nurseries it isn't all their own fault, and, as for the public, it is always glad to see a Republican with a good job.

• • • •

Mr. Hays may not have been a militant censor, and it is true that the lines and situations in modern pictures would have caused a riot call back before he took the job of making the movies prophylactic.

• • • •

But we salute him. Can you imagine what the screen would be like without him?

Pennsylvania Peace

By Eugene Pharo.
Special Correspondence of The Post.
Philadelphia.

EVERY SHADE of personal and governmental attitude from individual anarchy to paternal despotism is being employed these days in Pennsylvania to express the peace intentions of this formerly Quaker-ruled Commonwealth. Throughout the month of April, the movement will be intensified by means of formal programs sponsored by an amalgamation of peace organizations in an Emergency Peace Campaign, with headquarters here.

The most dramatic action that has occurred lately has been the outright banning by Gov. Earle of two motion pictures bearing on the Spanish war, because of his expressed fear that they would encourage "the sacrifice of adventurous and courageous American youth on European battlefields." The recent death in Spain of Joseph Seligman, of Kentucky, an honor student at Swarthmore College, who enlisted in the loyalist cause, gives some color to the Governor's fears, but fails to explain why he feels it incumbent upon him to act as the guide and conscience of the State's citizens.

'Nation' Berated Earle For Prohibiting Movies.

THE PICTURES that were banned were "Spain in Flames," for which action The Nation on March 27 berated Earle, drawing from him an answer; and "Madrid Document." The first of the films, both of which were said to be in the nature of newsreels, was ruled against by the State Board of Censors, and later on, after a personal viewing, by the Governor. The second, "Madrid Document," has been proceeded against by agents of the State Board of Censors as though it were a particularly vicious kind of illicit booze.

In its editorial comment, The Nation directly charged that Catholic influence was partly responsible for the Governor's action, but this charge was totally ignored in the answer the Governor made, and in the resume of the editorial that was printed in the local press. Instead, Earle stated his belief that the picture was merely recruiting propaganda for the loyalist cause. And, at least as summarized by the Philadelphia Record, which is almost an official organ for the Governor, The Nation's editorial was described purely as an objection to the alleged illegal banning of the picture, together with a report that legal action to compel the Board of Censors and the Governor to rescind their orders, was being sponsored by the North American Committee to Aid Spanish Democracy.

Speakers From Spain Address College Meetings.

DURING MARCH several meetings were held in colleges in and around Philadelphia at which the loyalist cause was described to students by four visitors from Spain: Luis Simmarro, a battalion commander who had been wounded in action; Eugenio Imaz, teacher and editor of "Catholic Youth of Spain;" Mrs. Marie Simmarro, director of a war orphanage, and Miss Josefina Ramirez, war nurse. At the University of Pennsylvania, evidently because of the presence in the student body of the son of a Spanish nobleman, Jose Luis Pedroso, son of the Count de San Carlos, there was considerable heckling of the speakers. At Temple University they were listened to respectfully. And at a large meeting in Lulu Temple a delegation of Swarthmore students, attending in memory of their college-mate, Seligman, made part of a cheering audience.

Agitation over the Spanish fighting affords a concrete object lesson, involving as it does the Communist-Fascist argument, and the conflict between isolationist "neutrality" and international co-operation, for the peace movement which centers so appropriately in Pennsylvania, and more exactly in Philadelphia. Meetings of the two Yearly Meetings of Friends, or Quakers, on March 26 and March 29, both of which took up the peace question, emphasized lately the peace tradition of the State. It was shortly before the Revolutionary War, after 70 years of Quaker rule, that government of the commonwealth by a Quaker legislature was ended because Friends could not conscientiously deal with military affairs. Now the sect is joining with other bodies and denominations in the hope of at last making its historic attitude effective.

Strangely enough, the most concretely defiant attitude concerning military service has been expressed lately not by the Friends, whose peace committees seem united in searching rather for means of preventing war, but by the Methodists who state a position of individual refusal to fight. Perhaps that is because the latter position has been held by the Quakers for more than 250 years, and they feel that it no longer needs to be stated so definitely.

Methodist Conference Calls War Sin Against God.

ON MARCH 3 a report at the annual Philadelphia Methodist Episcopal conference made the following statements: "War as a means of settling international disputes is a sin against God. We believe that in all matters of violence our allegiance to the Kingdom of God is higher than our allegiance to the state. • • • We believe that death in a dungeon for conscience's sake makes a larger contribution to the permanent welfare of the Christian state than death as a conscript in a dugout."

It was at the Yearly Meeting of the orthodox Friends (its 256th annual meeting, incidentally) that emphasis was put upon constructive efforts to prevent war.

"The peace committee," it was reported to the meeting on March 29, "believes that an essential part of the problem of peace is the provision of alternatives to war as a means of settling disputes between nations and the development of public opinion to demand that those peaceful alternatives be used. This is essentially a religious problem, requiring that mutual consideration which is demanded by Friends' fundamental assumption of the Inner Light, with its corollary of human brotherhood. The committee has put less emphasis on another part of the peace problem: the condemnation of all war and preparation for it."

Discussion at the meeting, following this report, besides emphasizing the importance of "friendliness and goodwill as a positive force," bore further upon the need to prevent war through international cooperation, and definitely opposed narrowly national and isolationist tactics.

Emergency Peace Drive Influenced By Quakers.

THE EMERGENCY PEACE Campaign, which is preparing radio broadcasts and mass meetings in Philadelphia and elsewhere later in the month, is to a large extent an outgrowth of Quaker influence exerted through the American Friends Service Committee, this meeting was told. The A. F. S. C. report, in considering its peace section, reported, "This section strives to apply to the world today the testimony held historically by Friends that Christianity and war are irreconcilable."

After telling of institutes on international relations, which enrolled about 1,500 students last summer, and of editorial services and bulletins estimated to have reached more than 11,000,000 readers, the committee reported, "The Emergency Peace Campaign was organized by Ray Newton, secretary of the section, and others, as a national drive to keep the United States out of war. The service committee is acting as treasurer of this movement. That the E. P. C. has proved itself to be fulfilling a need felt by the masses of the people is evidenced," it concluded, "by the fact that thousands have co-operated with it in its Nation-wide program."

In addition to the focal points of peace agitation here mentioned as existing in Philadelphia, there are plans being made in various schools and colleges, under the auspices of the American Student Union, to stage "peace strikes" and other demonstrations later in April. These apparently are meeting opposing currents in the schools, just as some of the other projects and statements reported here are meeting with occasional answering expressions from patriotic and veterans' organizations.

G. W. Sponsors Joint Dance Symposium

Student dancers from eight institutions will take part in a dance symposium today sponsored by the department of physical education for women of George Washington University.

The program will open at 2:15 at Pierce Hall, All Souls Church, with a group lesson conducted by Evelyn Davis, of the Evelyn Davis School of the Dance. Dance techniques will then be presented by groups from the George Washington University, Hood College, Trinity College, Marjorie Webster School, Goucher College, Fredericksburg State Teachers College and American University.

War Of Words

Europe's Uneasy Friendships.

THE VIOLENT assault on France in the Italian press may foreshadow a new aggressive move by Mussolini in the tangled Spanish situation. Under present circumstances, large-scale Italian intervention on behalf of Gen. Franco would have to be preceded by a denunciation of the non-intervention agreement.

The possibility cannot be dismissed as fantastic, therefore, that the accusations now being made by Mussolini's spokesmen, charging France with violating the letter and the spirit of that agreement, may be the prelude to open war by Italy on the Madrid-Valencia government.

Were it not for this possibility the Italian charges could be dismissed, even if proved true, as a case of a very black kettle calling a pot black. Certainly there is no longer the slightest doubt that Italy has sent large numbers of troops and considerable quantities of supplies to Spain to support the efforts of the insurgents. That these efforts have met with humiliating failure may only have determined the Duce to redouble his support of the insurgents and make victory certain regardless of the cost.

In the meantime the French can reflect on the rapid mutations in Europe's international friendships.

• • • •

TWO YEARS AGO, as a consequence of Pierre Laval's fateful trip to Rome, Franco-Italian relations showed marked signs of improvement.

To bring about this welcome change, France, through Laval, was forced to pay a great price. For the aftermath of the Laval-Mussolini meeting was Italy's invasion of Ethiopia, a near-war between Italy and Great Britain, a weakening of the Franco-British entente and a serious blow to the prestige of the League of Nations.

Very clearly France's 1935 investment in Italian good will has produced no dividends. Relations between France and Italy today are obviously worse than they were before Laval boarded the Paris-Rome express for his tete-a-tete with the Duce.

On the other side of the continent another friendship, also achieved at a great price, is similarly under a cloud.

The German-Polish accord of 1934 has weathered the stress and strain of the international crisis better than has the Franco-Italian entente. The Berlin-Warsaw treaty of friendship was, at the time it was made and for some time thereafter, highly advantageous to both nations.

For Germany it constituted a guarantee against encirclement at a time when her internal and external policies were arousing widespread alarm. For Poland it held out a promise of improved trade relations with an important customer and the shelving of a persistent threat to her security.

However, the German-Polish accord was never a love-match, only a marriage of convenience. The honeymoon period is now largely a thing of the past. Though the Danzig problem has been temporarily settled to Germany's satisfaction, relations between Berlin and Warsaw are by no means as cordial as they might be. The other day an official organ of the German Foreign Office complained with some asperity that Poland is failing to live up to the spirit of the 1934 treaty.

• • • •

AT THE SAME time there are rumors that all is not going well with the Franco-Russian alliance. Despite pressure from Moscow, the logical sequel to that alliance—a Franco-Russian military convention—has not been made.

It has not escaped the notice of the Soviet leaders that France's dilatory tactics with regard to this military convention have coincided with persistent pressure on France from many sources to abandon her ties with Russia. These have come from Germany, which has insisted that as long as the Franco-Russian alliance remains, a thoroughgoing west European pact cannot be negotiated; also from various quarters in England which are suspicious of Russia's policies, and finally from the French right.

Yet the facts are that the British government has never taken an official opposition to the Franco-Russian alliance; that this alliance was negotiated, on behalf of France, by M. Laval; and that it would be extremely dangerous for France to negotiate a western European nonaggression pact without having it linked up very definitely with a general European security program. Until Europe's peace can be organized on a continental basis, the Russian alliance has undoubted value to France.

Under the circumstances it can be taken for granted that the rumors of any impending split between Paris and Moscow are greatly exaggerated. Certainly more than a grain of salt must be applied to the companion report that Russia, in disgust at France's seeming indifference to Russian friendship, has decided to come to terms with the Third Reich.

This, certainly, would seem the least likely development in present-day Europe. Yet the diplomats have not forgotten that Germany and Russia were on terms of amity and even of intimacy from 1922 to 1933. Even today a section of the German general staff is believed to favor the restoration of good relations between the two countries. Nor is it being forgotten the Reich, even after Hitler came into power, renewed the Russo-German treaty of 1936 and extended commercial credits to the Soviet regime.

The presumption of evidence is overwhelmingly against the idea of any imminent break between Russia and France, or any restoration of amity between Russia and Germany, but it is nonetheless significant that rumors of such a shift in Soviet foreign policy are being given credence.

For nothing has seemed more certain in recent days than that Hitler was unalterably opposed to any modus vivendi with Russia, that the whole direction of his policy was anti-Russian, indeed, that the program he expounded in "Mein Kampf" of Russian expansion into the Ukraine remains his program today. As for Russia, Germany's aggressive designs have motivated much of the Soviet's diplomatic activity of the last three years. Apparently no friendship—or enmity—in the Europe of today can, however, be wholly taken for granted.

In Memoriam

By William Lyon Phelps.

William Dean Howells.

It is a sad commentary on the transitory nature of fame and on the tremendous range and depth of oblivion, that the centenary of the birth of William Dean Howells, on the first of March, 1937, passed without any general attention, with hardly any comments in the daily press; though it was not forgotten by the American Academy of Arts and Letters, of which he was one of the charter members.

Such neglect is all the more remarkable, because for so many years Howells was not only our most popular novelist but his influence on literature was stronger than that of any other man. And it is again all the more remarkable, that although Howells lived to be well over 80, he never survived his own reputation, as so many once favorite writers have done. His creative powers ceased only with his death; he was active and productive up to the last moment.

Although Howells lived in Boston and later in New York, he did not belong to either city; he was born in the tiny town of Jefferson, Ohio, and represented the Middle West in many ways. In the year 1889, when I was shooting in the woods near Jefferson, I encountered Howells' brother, among the dense trees. And Howells never forgot his early environment; for the best novel he wrote during the last 30 years of his life was "The Kentons."

I cannot believe that Howells' novels will be forgotten, for they constitute an admirable record and picture of the America he knew. "The Rise of Silas Lapham," "A Modern Instance," "Indian Summer," are admirable books. In conversation with him once, I asked him which of his works he thought was the best, and he replied with a question as to which I preferred. I told him I placed first "A Modern Instance." He considered that, a moment and then said, "That is undoubtedly my strongest work; but of all my numerous publications, the book I myself most enjoyed writing was "Indian Summer."

I went home and read that novel through again; and it was clear to me why he enjoyed its composition. It has an ineffable charm.

China In Distress

Central Government Forced To Levy Taxes To Maintain War Against Communism, But Taxes Drive Peasants To Reds.

By Mark J. Ginsbourg.
Special Correspondence of The Post.
Shanghai.

MISERY AND CHAOS lie hidden today behind China's imposing political facade. The bulk of the population, the four-hundred-millions of inarticulate peasants, are crushed under the burden of national and local taxes. Petty regional war lords, once thought extinct by the outside world, are still in the saddle, ruling their bailiwicks with no other aim in view but their own enrichment. Millions of armed men, variously classified as soldiers, bandits and Communists, tramp the land, fighting their foes or preying upon the peaceful population.

Millions of men forlornly face famine, as the funds that should have been used for river and soil conservancy are used to pay for German machine guns and American bombers. Millions of others die a slow death—the victims of officially enforced cultivation of opium in remote provinces.

Civil liberties are suppressed. In North China immediate closure faces publications commenting on the amicable relations between the Chinese regional administration and the Japanese army. In Shanghai, Nanking and Hankow dire fate awaits the advocates of a Popular Front. In the southwest, still independent of the central government, the reverse is true. Liberal leaders today languish in jails, while others, less fortunate, die a quick and violent death.

4,000,000 Farmers Could Re-establish Nation.

CHINA'S ECONOMY rests upon the shoulders of her farmers. Given a chance to till the soil in peace, freed of oppressive taxation, and guided intelligently and energetically by the government, China's 400,000,000 can soon make her one of the world's leading nations. In the conditions prevailing today, not even this year's bumper crop can keep the peasants far from the brink of starvation.

A local Chinese economist, who spent six months studying conditions in North Szechuen, reports that 73 per cent of the 143,000 farming families in the region remain in debt after selling their harvest. To pay the taxes and the land rent, to buy tools and fertilizer and feed his family, a farmer must thus resort to the aid of usurers, who, as often as not, are the district magistrates.

The average interest rate, he found, ranged between 20 and 40 per cent, in some villages soaring up to 1,000 per cent. The most common form of a loan is the so-called "20-crisis loan," in which a farmer who borrows $10 must repay $1 every ten days for the period of 200 days. In the "100-crisis loan," the borrower of $10 receives in cash $8, and then pays the usurer 10 cents a day for 100 days. Sometimes, the nonpayment of a single day's installment is penalized by the addition of 10 per cent to the principal.

Although the central government appears to be canceling oppressive taxes by the thousand, their number does not seem to grow smaller. Farmers pay to the Nanking government, to the local chieftain, to the military authorities, to the village officials. They pay for road building, for protection against bandits and Communists, for going out of city gates, for traveling and trading. They pay taxes when their children die and marry. They pay taxes for the yield of their fields, for the few animals they might have, for their primitive tools. They pay for planting rice and for not planting rice. The ingenuity of the tax collectors is rivaled only by their rapacity.

English Observer Cites High Land Taxes.

A CONSTANT OBSERVER of the Chinese scene, writing recently in a British newspaper, declared:

"It is clear to all students of the problem that the alarming increase in land taxes, especially after 1930, is a root cause of the impoverishment of the peasantry. In some districts the peasant is paying 300 per cent more than he was when the government came into power. Nor is this all. There has been no adjustment to compensate for the drop in agricultural prices, which have increased his burdens even more than the figures suggest. Naturally many peasants have been forced to sell their lands, and the latest figures show a measurable increase in tenantry.

"The plight of the peasants is also aggravated by social abuses: The richer landlords, merchants or officials who buy the lands of bankrupt farmers are often closely associated with the tax-collecting machinery and take advantage of this to evade payment of land taxes on a large scale. The area of non-taxpaying land therefore tends to increase, thus adding further to already heavy burdens of those unable to evade payment.

"Many are forced off the land altogether. They swell the number of the city poor or the provincial armies, become bandits, or in the last resort join the Communists.

"Reduced to its simplest terms a process is taking place by which increasing land taxation produces social unrest, which, in its extreme form, gives rise to communism, which is then put down by the army, for which taxes must again be raised, and so back once more to social unrest. That is one reason why after eight years of constant fighting the Communists are still a powerful force, so powerful indeed that China can never fight Japan until this question is settled."

National Government Has Accomplished Much.

THE NATIONAL GOVERNMENT has done much in the 10 years of its existence. It has unified the country to an extent greater than at any time since the collapse of the monarchy. It has steadily improved administration in the provinces. It has made attempts to improve the lot of farmers; to eradicate graft and corruption; to develop communications; to stimulate trade and industry; to maintain peace; to lower taxes whenever possible; to unify currency and to promote education.

The very fact that China had a national government, whose head could fly from one corner of the country to another with no other companion save his wife, gave the clannish Chinese an unaccustomed realization of their national existence. The Chinese were getting used to the belief that theirs was a great and democratic state, no less great than any other. The Sian coup brought the idealists back to earth where warlords tread and where the Central Government's achievements are largely based on its powerful military machine.

In 1935, the last year for which a financial statement is available, 35 per cent of Nanking's 1,212,013,000 Chinese-dollar budget was spent for the army, and a slightly larger amount for interest on loans. But the budgetary figure for military expenditures was only a fraction of the real amount spent for war and preparation for war. Not included in the budget were the opium revenues, certainly exceeding $100,000,000, which are used for army needs. Nor were included the vast sums spent for the upkeep of their troops by the innumerable petty warlords throughout the country.

This vast military machine was not, as patriots hoped and believed, trained and equipped for war on Japan. No hostilities against Japan would be permitted by the Kiangsu and Chekiang bankers who control the government's purse strings.

Expenses Of Army Forbid Relief Program.

FORCED TO MAINTAIN a huge army to keep the country unified under its control, the government cannot spend much money for fundamental relief measures. In the 1935 budget, only $40,000,000 was earmarked for reconstruction. Assuming that all this money was spent for agricultural relief, it still formed a very small drop in a very large bucket. Moreover, the benefits of this grant were more than offset by the necessity of increasing taxes to pay for the military machine.

This is not said in criticism of the Central Government. It is a plaything of economic, political and forces which it can neither resist, direct nor control. The object of this article is to shed a little light upon the distress of China's millions, upon the difficult problems besetting the government and upon the forces convulsing the country.

The interests controlling the Central Government do not want war with Japan. Neither do they want to stop war on communism, in which they see their only potent foe. Thus, the government must continue its policy of enormous military expenditures, which call for high taxes, which willy-nilly drive the improved peasants into Red armies. Also swelling the ranks of the rapidly expanding anti-government forces are those who want to fight Japan or who desire drastically to reorganize the Nanking administration. The latter is thus facing a crisis which it has not the capacity to meet.

Spain's Friends to Mark Founding of Republic

The sixth anniversary of the founding of the Spanish Republic will be commemorated April 14 at the National Press Club at 8 p. m. under the auspices of the American Friends of Spanish Democracy. Speakers will include Spain's Ambassador Fernando de los Rios, who took a leading part in the framing of the republic's constitution; Ernesto Galarzo, former research assistant of the Foreign Policy Association, and Marcus Childs, American journalist.

There will be an exhibition of war posters and pictures from Madrid and Barcelona, epitomizing the struggle in Spain.

American U. Group Plans Dance Concert

In colorful costumes and masks, 19 girls of the honorary dance group of the College of Liberal Arts, American University, will participate in a "dance concert" tonight at the gymnasium auditorium on the campus.

Outstanding among the features of the entertainment will be interpretation of modern college life in a special series of dances, known as "The Collegiate Suite." Miss Louise Morse, instructor of physical education for women, who is directing, will present three solo dances.

W. C. Logdell to Speak.

W. C. Cogdell, specialist in commercial science, will be the guest-speaker of the Civic National Forum at the Whitelaw Hotel, Thirteenth and T streets northwest, tomorrow at 5 p. m. His subject will be "Economic Uplift and Security for the Masses."

Lawyer Scorns History; Drops Legal Phrases

Boardman Files Complaint in Ordinary Language; Breaks Precedent.

History was written in District Court yesterday when Jean Boardman, divorce attorney, shattered a precedent of some 600 years and wrote a bill of complaint in everyday language, scorning to use age-old, legalistic phrases.

Boardman filed a divorce suit for Mrs. Leilla I. Snyder, 1400 Meridian place northwest, who is seeking to sever her marriage ties to Eugene N. Snyder, to whom she was married in 1927.

In drawing up the suit, the lawyer forsook the usual legal forms and simply stated that Mrs. Snyder wanted a divorce from her husband. The highly formal and technical forms used in the average suit were missing entirely.

Mrs. Snyder simply said in her complaint that "I am a resident of the District. • • • We have one child • • • he constantly urged me to leave him • • •" and then cited instances which prompted her to leave for her home in Pennsylvania. She said she had been awarded a permanent decree giving her custody of the child with weekly payments of $14.

Tracing the history of the highly complicated and sometimes nebulous legal pleadings, Boardman said the original litigants hundreds of years ago simply told their story to the court clerk who wrote down a summary of the information and then, later on began using technical phrases in use today. He complained the average layman could not understand the legal verbiage and on occasion was no worse off in his misunderstanding than a lawyer.

"In this day there is no sense whatsoever in writing pleadings in this form. It is really amazing how complicated a very simple statement can be made by writing it in this old-fashioned way. Lawyers frequently get the plaintiffs and defendants tangled up and even when the lawyer does his best the poor client has to sign and swear to something which he probably only half understands. I suppose that lawyers have hung on to this old moth-eaten, moss-covered style of pleading, first, because lawyers have a habit of doing things like they have always done, and second, because lawyers like to make something easy look hard."

Under Boardman's plan, the legal papers would be drawn up just as the average layman would draw them. He believes he will be sustained in his effort to simplify the language of the typical suit and he avowed he would carry the case to the higher courts if his Snyder suit is unfavorably acted upon.

China Awaits U. S. Aid In Bubonic Epidemic

Nanking, China, April 9 (AP).—China's national health administration announced tonight it was anxiously awaiting medical equipment and supplies from the United States for use in fighting the bubonic plague outbreak in Fukien Province.

The scourge has reached the virulent epidemic stage, the administration said, with at least 100 persons dying daily in the region between Foochow and Amoy. The American supplies were said to be aboard a steamer due soon at Shanghai.

Japanese Aviators Set New Speed Mark

London, April 9 (AP). — One of Japan's first bids for international flying honors ended in a new speed record today when the Divine Wind landed at Croydon just a little more than 94 hours after leaving Tokyo.

The Japanese fliers — piloting a plane made entirely in Japan—broke the mark set ten years ago by Dieudonne Coste and Joseph Lebrix. The Frenchmen flew from Paris to Tokyo in six days, twenty hours. The Divine Wind fliers brought coronation greetings from Japan.

Leach Is Appointed Idaho College Head

Caldwell, Idaho, April 9 (AP).—Dr. Raymond H. Leach, 53, New York City, was appointed president of the College of Idaho today. He succeeds Dr. W. J. Boone, founder of the college in 1891 and its first president, who died last year.

Dr. Leach formerly was dean of men at the University of Nevada, later serving as secretary of the university department of the Council of Church Boards of Education in New York.

Simpson Portrait Alone.

London, April 9 (AP).—A portrait of Mrs. Wallis Simpson was included today in an exhibition by the artist, Mrs. Reginald Andersen, but it was placed in a room apart from the other paintings and only "privileged visitors" were allowed to see it. No explanation was given for the unusual procedure.

Today's Sermon

By the Rev. Charles Enders,
Pastor, Concordia Lutheran Evangelical Church.

"Bear ye one another's burdens, and so fulfill the law of Christ."
—Galatians, 6:2.

The outstanding characteristic of Christ's life on earth was that He went about doing good. He came to earth not to be ministered unto, but to minister and to give His life a ransom for many. His whole life was lived not for Himself, but for others; for the glory of His Heavenly Father and for the welfare of His fellowmen. This is the law of Christ, that life be a bearing of the burdens of others. This is not so much obedience to legalistic demands as it is a principle of life. Giving thought and rendering service to others is the natural expression of Christ's life.

As it is with Christ, so it must be with us. Burden-bearing for others is not the result of endeavors to comply with certain demands of law. It results rather from the transformation of life. The law of Christ can find expression in our life only in that measure in which the spirit of Christ dominates our life.

This means that if we are to help bear the burdens of others, we must be fully surrendered to the spirit of Christ. Yes, if we are to fulfill the law of Christ, the spirit of our life must become Christlike. Without this surrender of self unto Christ, the law of Christ cannot be fulfilled in our life. It is most important for us to recognize this. In the world today we are coming more and more to understand that no man liveth unto himself. We are dependent on one another. Employer and employe, producer and consumer, etc., cannot enjoy the blessings of life without being mutually helpful. We need to bear one another's burdens. This mutual helpfulness, however, cannot be exercised merely through social legislation, commercial and labor agreements, co-operative organizations, etc. Not law by legislation, but the law of Christ, which is the spirit of Christ dominating the individual, will make for this mutual burden-bearing that will bring to men the fullness of life.

Dr. E. H. Pruden Selects Topics For Tomorrow

Lesson-Sermon Topic Selected

"Are Sin, Disease, and Death Real?" is the subject of the lesson-sermon in all the Churches of Christ, Scientist, tomorrow. The Golden Text is from Jeremiah 31:11: "The Lord hath redeemed Jacob, and ransomed him from the hand of him that was stronger than he."

Among the citations which comprise the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: "The steps of a good man are ordered by the Lord: and he delighteth in his way." (Psalms 37:23.)

The lesson-sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health With Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "The real man cannot depart from holiness, nor can God, by whom man is evolved, engender the capacity or freedom to sin."

NATIONAL HUMANE SUNDAY, APRIL 11
"BE KIND TO ANIMALS" WEEK APRIL 12-17

All living creatures belong to God. Man has no right to oppress, exploit or abuse them. They are only entrusted to his dominion, which must be a merciful and just one.

He must heed the Almighty's injunction, "A righteous man regardeth the life of his beast," Prov. 12:10, and obey the Saviour's command "Be ye merciful as your Father also is merciful" (Luke 6:36).

A righteous man is kind to his children by teaching them to be kind. He should always THINK, SPEAK, ACT for suffering creatures. He should bring or report such to the nearest humane organization.

The Animal Protective Association (temporary office, 322 E St. N.E., Lincoln 8578) cares for unwanted, homeless, abused animals of the District of Columbia and nearby Maryland and Virginia.

Ministers, Mothers and Teachers should especially ALWAYS teach and practice kindness to all God's creatures.

"A REASONABLE FAITH"
by Dr. Russell J. Clinchy approaches religion, not through the creeds, but by what the universe and life have to tell us. It presents a religion of conviction in plain modern terms for men and women who seek faith in the midst of modern life.

Brilliant Audience Gathers for Opening Concert in Series Sponsored by Mrs. Coolidge at the Library of Congress

By Jessie Ash Arndt.

A brilliant audience gathered last night in the Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge auditorium of the Library of Congress for the eighth biennial festival of chamber music. The series of concerts, which continues this morning, tonight and tomorrow afternoon and evening, will be attended by many of the same music lovers who were present for the opening program.

Mrs. Coolidge, of course, was there, accompanied by her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Albert Sprague Coolidge; her grandson, Mr. Frederick Coolidge, and granddaughter, Miss Elizabeth Coolidge, of Cambridge, Mass. Also in her party were Mr. Edwin Rice, who last fall received the Elizabeth Sprague medal for his work in behalf of the music temple project in Pittsfield, Mass.; Mrs. Rice and daughter, Miss Helen Rice, of New York City, and Mrs. Dexter P. Rumsey, of Buffalo.

Among other distinguished guests from out of town were Mr. and Mrs. Roger Sessions, of Remington, N. J., Mr. Sessions is the composer of the quartet in E minor which is to open the program tomorrow afternoon; Mr. Georges Barrere, renowned flutist, who will be heard this morning; Mrs. Barrere, and Mr. Paul Boepple, conductor of the Dessoff Choirs of New York, also on today's program, accompanied by Mrs. Boepple. Miss Linda Clarke-Smith, of New York City, was the guest of Miss Moira Archbold. Mrs. Carlos Salzedo, harpist, also was among those in last night's audience.

Mr. and Mrs. Bliss Have Guest.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss had with them Mlle. Nadia Boulanger, of Paris, who is a guest at their home, Dumbarton Oaks. Mr. and Mrs. Bliss are entertaining this afternoon at a tea in honor of Mrs. Coolidge, to which out-of-town guests here for the festival have been invited. Tomorrow Mrs. Coolidge is giving a luncheon for the musicians who are presenting the series of concerts. It is to be at 2400 Sixteenth street, where she resides while she is in Washington, and will be for 100 guests.

Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Mackay Smith, of White Post, Va., were present last night with Mr. and Mrs. Carlton Sprague Smith, of New York.

Mrs. Crosby Adams, of Montreat, N. C., the oldest member of the Music Teachers Association of America, also was in the audience, with Mr. Adams. Among others from out of town were Mr. Roy Harris, distinguished composer, and Mrs. Harris, who are here from Princeton, N. J.; Mr. and Mrs. Davidson Taylor, of New York City; Mr. Franklin Dunham, Mr. Carl Engel, former chief of the Music Division of the Library of Congress; Miss Marion Bauer, writer and lecturer on music; Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Morton, Mrs. George Eustis Corcoran, of New York; Mrs. J. F. Paige, of Quincy, Mass., and her daughter, Miss Emeline K. Paige, of New York; Mr. and Mrs. Franklin Dunham, of New York; Mr. Quimby Porter, noted composer, and Mrs. Porter, of Poughkeepsie, N. Y.; Mr. Arthur W. Quimby, curator of musical arts at the Cleveland Museum, and Mrs. Quimby; Mrs. Paul Wiener, of New York, the former Alma Morgenthau, sister of the Secretary of the Treasury, and Mr. and Mrs. Greer Marechal, of Dayton, Ohio.

Many Washingtonians Are Present.

Many Washingtonians also attended the opening concert and were helped from their cars by William, whose presence always proclaims an event in the Capital as an important social function. Mr. Oliver Strunk, chief of the Music Division of the Library of Congress, and Mrs. Strunk were accompanied by Miss Caroline Marsh, of Baltimore, and Mrs. Marguerite Andrews, of New York, who are their guests.

The Minister of Switzerland and Mme. Peter attended, as did Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Emory Land, Admiral Land remaining in the corridor to finish his pipe before the concert began; Mr. and Mrs. James Clement Dunn, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Louchheim, Mr. and Mrs. William R. Castle, Mr. and Mrs. Lothrop Stoddard, Mr. and Mrs Benjamin Thoron.

Mr. Justice and Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone were present, as were Mr. and Mrs. George Hewitt Myers, Col. and Mrs. C. C. Schiffler, Mr. and Mrs. Adolph C. Miller, Mr. and Mrs. John Rowland Hill, Mr. William Treet Upton, of Oberlin Conservatory, author of "Art Song in America," who is in Washington doing research work at the Library of Congress, and Mr. and Mrs. Reeve Lewis.

Underwood & Underwood.

THE MERRY WHIRL

By Marylyn.

Ah, a newcomer in the diplomatic set—Manuel Pereira, who has just taken up his duties at the Chilean Embassy. He will formally make his "debut" to society here Monday afternoon, when the three charming daughters of his Ambassador—Marta, Chela and and Rebecca Trucco—will entertain at a cocktail party.

Senor Pereira has traveled over quite a bit of this jolly old world of ours. He has been on duty in the Argentine—served as Charge d'Affaires in Egypt, and still more recently represented his country in London—so you see this is by no means his first station.

He is one of the happy persons who likes to do just about everything in the way of sports, riding, golf, tennis and swimming sharing his attention—and, as for dancing—oo-la-la. So it goes without saying that he will like Washington and its hectic life and the Capital will like him.

* * * *

Ordway Whitford looked very nice and springy in her navy-blue ensemble when we spied her walking past the Sulgrave Club at tea time. Her coat was a smooth model of wool, with flat collar, fitted in at the waist and flaring out into a bell skirt, which rhythmically swung open at each step, disclosing a gay printed frock. Her hat, a very wide-brimmed affair of straw, was trimmed across the front of the shallow crown with a spray of bright little blossoms, peeping out as if they had just burst forth.

* * * *

Bob Savage, on whom we haven't laid eyes since football days last fall, with a pretty companion went serenely sailing down past John Paul Jones' statue and thence around the Tidal Basin, in his gray roadster. Doubtless bent on seeing the cherry blossoms—just as were hundreds of other Washingtonians.

Girls are such restless creatures. They no sooner find one way of arranging their locks, than they immediately initiate a new and startling coiffure. Villette Sullivan is—these days—wearing a long bob, slightly waved and with the softest of curls falling on coy bangs across her forehead.

* * * *

Mrs. Archibald Sunderland, wife of the Chief of the Coast Artillery, stopped in for a bite to eat at noon yesterday at our favorite haunt. She was wearing a dark blue crepe frock printed in jade green and fuchsia. Her hat was a wide-brimmed sailor of black glossy straw and vastly becoming.

* * * *

It must have been a very good story and knowing the teller, we are more than certain that it was well worth hearing. Anyway, the other afternoon when nearly everyone was homeward bound, we caught sight of Jefty O'Connor and two other gentlemen, arm in arm, striding up Seventeenth street by the Army and Navy Club. Jefty was talking and his companions' faces wore large grins from ear to ear.

Georgetown Tour Draws Many Guests

Old Homes Thrown Open for Benefit of St. John's.

Gardens and Antiques Among Feature of Display.

By Dudley Harmon.

Several hundred people trudged through Georgetown yesterday afternoon on the annual tour of old houses, despite threatening weather. There were as many out-of-towners as Washingtonians, and the cobbled streets were lined with cars bearing license plates from as far away as California.

Nonresidents appeared to be fully cognizant of the charms of this old section and, in fact, a real estate deal was begun in the drawing room of Mrs. Hare Lippincott's house between an enthusiastic woman from Texas, who decided she must live in Georgetown, and one of the hostesses, who obligingly offered to refer her to an agent.

Several of the owners were present to answer questions. Mrs. Clarence Phelps Dodge showed visitors her collection of Victorian furniture and explained that a handsome cabinet in one corner was rescued by her father from the Chicago fire. Mrs. L. M. C. Smith took tickets at the door of her handsome N street residence, and Mrs. Richard Zantzinger, wearing a smart beige wool suit, showed guests around the residence of her mother, Mrs. Devereau Green, who is in Europe.

Blue Dining Room.

This latter house offers an example of what can be done to make a small dining room attractive. The walls are painted a pale green blue, and the small chairs are upholstered in rich blue satin. On the walls are crystal sconces, and a larger, although delicately made, crystal chandelier hangs from the ceiling.

In the drawing room are several beautiful consoles from Rosedale, for many generations the home of Mrs. Zantzinger's family. The gardens of this property, which is on Macomb street, and is owned by Mrs. Avery Coonley, were designed by L'Enfant, the Frenchman who laid out the Capital.

Mrs. Smith was assisted during the afternoon by Mrs. John Farr Simmons, who wore a blue wool frock, and Mrs. Alger Hiss. Mr. and Mrs. Smith own several fine French paintings of the modern school—one a Raoul Dufy—and examples of the owners' own work—both Mr. and Mrs. Smith paint—hang on the drawing room walls. Behind the house is a small garden, with a studio-garage at one end.

Visit Lippincotts.

Mrs. Griffin de Mauduit, a cousin of Mrs. Hare Lippincott, and Mrs. J. R. Kane, were among those who showed visitors through Mrs. Lippincott's home. Downstairs a newly decorated room, done entirely in white, even to the upholstery of the chairs, opens into a small walled garden. A stone on the terrace, found when the house was remodeled, is carved "1810-Gay street" (N street was formerly known as Gay).

The garden behind the home of Mr. and Mrs. Franklin Mott Gunther caused more comment than perhaps any other feature of the tour. In the first place, it is a much larger garden than one would expect to find attached to a city house. Stretching to the next street, it opens from a portico and is terraced, with brick walks and a fountain in the middle. The first hyacinths looked blue against the young green of the grass.

Mrs. Horace Torbert, author of "Doorways and Dormers of Old Georgetown," assisted in receiving at the Gunther home. She said that when the tour first was organized, members of the committee carried the sightseers around from house to house in buses, shouting descriptions through a megaphone as they went. So anxious were the tourists to see what lay behind the old brick walls that permission of the owners finally was obtained to take them inside.

Several other interesting houses were opened, including the homes of Mr. and Mrs. John Winant, Mr. and Mrs. Carroll Greenought, Mr. Victor Sutor and Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Connolly. Additional houses will be shown today between 1:30 and 5:30. Proceeds go to St. John's Church, in Georgetown, which is also on the tour.

Dr. Haggard to Talk At Town Hall Meeting

Dr. Howard W. Haggard will address the final meeting of the Town Hall at the Shoreham tomorrow at 8 p. m. He is professor of applied physiology at Yale University and will discuss "Recent Advances in Medicine and Their Significance." His lecture, originally scheduled for February 28, was changed to give place to the debate on the Supreme Court.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Betrayed by Married Man Who Posed as Being Unmarried, Girl Asks, 'What Am I to Do?'

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I read your column every day and now I need your help. You are the only one I can turn to now. About a year ago I was told of a boy who wanted to meet me. We were introduced. He seemed like a very nice person. I was lonely and wanted someone's friendship. He seemed to be just that person. He was full of fun and we always had a good time together. It developed into a great friendship and from that into love. We couldn't be away from each other and saw each other every day and night.

* * * *

Then the real trouble came. Someone told me he was married. I asked him about this and he said, "Do you think if I were married I would see as much of you as I do?" It went on and one day he said he was married, and that his wife was going to have a baby. My whole heart and soul died that day. Because I, too, was going to have a baby. His wife's baby was born about two weeks ago. I saw a notice in the paper.

* * * *

Miss Haworth, what am I going to do? I have no money and no place to go. I can't tell my family, because they would have nothing to do with me. Sometimes I wish I could die, but I must do something or go some place.

* * * *

The boy told me he never had loved his wife and that I am the only one he loves. I haven't told him about myself because I don't want to worry him. I love him dearly; ever so dearly, and would do anything for him.

I will have to know what to do before my family should find out. Isn't there some place I can go? If you can't help me, the next thing is death. I know that you will try to help me. HEARTSICK.

The Thing to Do.

DEAR HEARTSICK: Go to the Florence Crittenton Home at 4759 Reservoir road northwest (telephone Cleveland 6060) and talk with Miss Ann Rogers, the case worker there. The Florence Crittenton Mission, as it was originally termed, was established in the 1880s to afford social and medical protection to the unmarried, expectant mother during the months she is waiting for her child to be born. When the child is born, both mother and child continue to receive this same protection until the latter is six months old. Then the mother is helped in rehabilitating her life, providing she has no family or friends to lean on. If the mother prefers to relinquish her child to foster parents, she is told the proper agencies to approach in placing her child for adoption.

* * * *

The girl who wishes to guard the secret of her approaching motherhood from family and friends may take up residence at the Florence Crittenton Home as early in pregnancy as she wishes. Miss Rogers tells me some girls enter the home as early as the fourth month of their pregnancy, while others wait until a much shorter time before the baby's arrival. It is up to the girl to decide. Mornings are given over to shared household tasks, and afternoons and evenings to student and recreational activities. Girls are schooled in the domestic arts, in cooking, cleaning, nursing, sewing; there is a choral club, an art class and other activities for keeping their minds and hands occupied.

* * * *

You may make an appointment with Miss Rogers by letter or by telephone, using my name, if you wish; or you may call in person without appointment, if you prefer, since Miss Rogers is, as she says, "on duty practically 24 hours a day." M. H.

Gift for a Baby.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have been going with a girl four years, and am very much in love with her. We are not engaged, but when I visit her family (who live out of town) I am accepted almost as a member of the family. We have not seen each other very often of recent months, yet when I do see her she treats me with great affection.

* * * *

Yesterday I received from one of her married relatives an announcement of the birth of a daughter. I am wondering what sort of acknowledgment I should make—in other words, what kind of gift and card should I send? And should I send the gift and card to the mother or to the child, who is a girl? I want to send something reasonably nice. Will you please suggest something? Thanking you, I am. DAILY READER.

DEAR DAILY READER: A silver mug with the bay's name engraved on it is a nice gift for a man friend of the family to give a newborn baby. So is a $5 gold piece. If the man must spend less, he can get an attractive baby rattle, a box of fine talc, or even an extra-fancy box of safety pins of assorted sizes for less than $1. He can spend a little more and get a baby dress, a set of bibs, a pair of knit bootees or a washable toy of some kind. A cap-and-jacket set or a silken or woolen carriage coverlet is always an appreciated gift. All these things (with the exception of the silver mug and the gold piece, of course) can be found in the infants' department of any large department store.

* * * *

Go to the stationery department of the same store, or to any stationery store, and select a card which seems best to express your sentiments about this particular baby's arrival. If the gift and card must be mailed out of town, address it to both parents, and keep that idea in mind when selecting the card. In other words, choose a card which expresses a sentiment directed at both parents. If you expect to present the gift and card in person, you might address it to the baby, and select a card which seems to speak directly to the infant. M. H.

Teach Tricks to Your Pet

"STAND UP and walk," you say. And Rover struts proud as a peacock.

Almost any dog—unless he's of a short-legged breed such as a Sealyham or English Bull—easily walks upright if you teach him as trainers for the movies do.

Before walking upright, your dog must be able to "sit down" and "sit up." Use a leash fastened to the under side of the harness for the first lessons. When he's sitting up, raise a bit of food over his head and help him to upright position with the leash. Let him eat and return to "all fours" right away. Don't make him stand long until his hind leg muscles are better developed. After several short daily lessons he'll stand up without the leash. Then back away, holding food high and saying, "Stand up and walk to me."

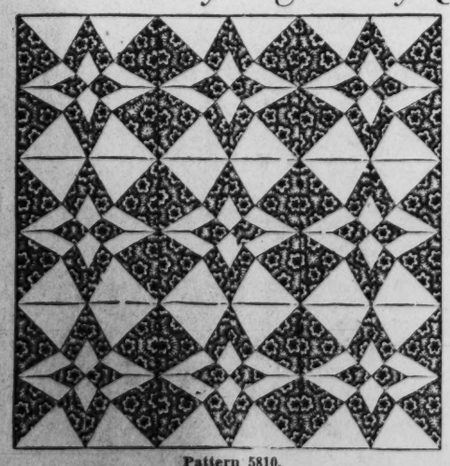
A famous dog trainer for the movies tells how to teach your dog the tricks mentioned here and many others in our 40-page booklet, Facts About Pets. Chapters on care of cats, canaries, tropical fish.

Send 15c for our booklet, Facts About Pets, to The Washington Post Home Institute 109 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

2 Materials, 3 Pattern Pieces Form Lovely Night-Day Quilt



Pattern 5810.

By Alice Brooks.

IT'S FUN to piece a quilt when the finished result looks like this! And this lovely one, Night and Day, is made of but two materials, and three pattern pieces. Look carefully and you'll see how the patches, cut from contrasting materials, alternate to form the 10-inch block. You couldn't ask for more enthralling leisure-time work, or for a prettier or easier design! In pattern 5810 you will find the Block Chart, an illustration of the finished block in actual size, showing contrasting fabrics; accurately drawn pattern pieces; an illustration of the entire quilt; three color schemes; step-by-step directions for making the quilt and exact yardage requirements.

To obtain this pattern send 10 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred) to The Washington Post, Household Arts Dept., 259 W. Fourteenth street, New York, N. Y. Be sure to write plainly your name, address and pattern number.

The Silk Suit-Dress for Varied Summer Uses

Social Visiting in Business Office Disrupts Routine and Is Bad Form.

By Margaret Wallace.

AN ETIQUETTE CODE for women visitors in business offices has been suggested by an important business man who admits he is not brave enough to permit his name to be used. This code, he believes, should apply to the wives of both executives and employes; also to women friends of all persons in offices.

It is true that the rules of good form often are broken in many business offices. Chief offenders are the women who make a downtown office their meeting place for their friends and those who have the habit of dropping in to chat with their husbands or employed friends.

The well-bred woman will avoid accepting invitations to visit men in their offices and, of course, will never do so uninvited. The engaged girl who makes it a habit of going to the office of her fiance and waiting for him to take her to luncheon or to drive her home has become a problem in many Washington offices, according to employers. Even wives should make their visits to their husbands' offices as infrequent as possible.

Always a Guest.

The wife or woman friend who calls on a man in his office should never forget that she is a guest in that office. She would not enter another person's house without knowing she was welcome or had been invited. Therefore no woman, not even the wife of the boss, should forget she is a caller and abide by the rules of common politeness for those who call on another person. She would not push past the servant at a door of a private home or enter without being invited by a member of the family. Therefore she should not push past office boys and secretaries, or come uninvited or at least unexpected and unwelcome to an office.

Another nuisance in offices is the woman employe who goes to other departments to call upon her friends and makes prolonged visits. It is particularly bad form for a woman employe to call upon men in other departments and visit at their desks. By such practice she not only upsets office routine but cheapens herself. If it is necessary for her to transact business in another department, she should do so as expeditiously and impersonally as possible, and not make her call the occasion for a social visit.

In all her office relations the well-bred woman maintains a friendly yet impersonal attitude toward her associates. Social intimacies are out of place in a business office.

Etiquette Problem.

QUERY—I was very much embarrassed recently when I took a woman friend in to see my husband, who is vice president of a corporation. A woman secretary stopped us in the lobby of the office and said my husband was in an important conference with the president of the company and the directors and could not be interrupted. She suggested that we go out to luncheon and come back afterward. When I told her I wished my husband to take us to luncheon she stated that he already had a luncheon engagement with the president. I would not be sent away like a school girl so I waited in the lobby with my friend until my husband came out.

He did not seem glad to see us at all, and said he could not stop as he had to go with the president and the board of directors to luncheon, as some of them had to catch a train after luncheon. They were waiting at the elevator for him and he hurried and joined them, calling over his shoulder to the secretary to look after us. I feel my husband was very rude, and I have insisted that he discharge his secretary, because she was rude. Please tell me what you think.

ANSWER—Your husband was right, and his secretary was only doing her duty. She evidently was polite but firm, which are the essentials of a good secretary. Your husband did not have an engagement with you. It was no more proper for you to intrude on him in his office than it would be for you to intrude in the home of a friend. He had an engagement with his business associates, and it was proper for him to keep it and to be in a hurry if they were in a hurry.

Flowers Replace Animal Figures For 1937 Prints

Paris (U.P.).—Printed materials never have been as colorful or as unusual as they are this season. The animals from the zoo, which dominated all of last year's prints, are out of the picture and are replaced by more delicate flower patterns.

Clover blossoms, ranging from pale rose to a deep mauve blue in tone are used in a silk print at one house. Several couturiers have bought a silver grey taffeta printed with blue ivory and rose iris blossoms in a large pattern evening gown. Petunias in all shades from palest pink to the deep purply red are used in silk for afternoon wear. Pansies, in yellows and deep purples make another pretty print.

Black question marks are printed in a white organdy for a gown to wear to the races. All kinds of fruit are used for colorful prints—one shantung being printed with miniature oranges, lemons and limes while the dress buttoned with composition miniatures of the fruit.

Vogue for Suits to Continue Into Summer; Trimness Noted

By Ethel Ehlen,
The Post Fashion Editor.

THE SUIT CRAZE goes on into summer! To be chic this year means that every frock has a coat or cape all its own, regardless of the weight or pattern of the chosen material. The newest interpretations are stressing trimness and smartness, rather than prettiness. Perhaps this interlude of extreme femininity and looking pretty is beginning to pall, or perhaps, according to authorities, sleekness will return to the fall fashion picture. At any rate, there is enough variety in the mode to please everyone, and whatever version one happens to choose will be considered style correct.

For late spring, the silk suit is one of the smartest and most comfortable costumes you can buy. It may consist of a short-sleeved frock topped by either a jacket or cape. With the addition of a fur scarf, it becomes ultra chic. The majority of designers are using the same material (print or solid colors), for both frock and jacket, or cape. Sometimes the print is trimmed with grosgrain in the background color, or in the case of dark solid tones, grosgrain or pique in white or a contrasting tone. It is usually considered a more practical idea, however, to disregard trimming entirely, as the suit is then ideal for planning accessories in numerous color themes.

With summer vacations not far distant, the silk suit is wonderful for traveling. In black or Navy or a dark-ground print, accented with striking accessories, one can travel anywhere with fashion assurance. Without the coat or cape, the dress is appropriate for general daytime wear, afternoon or even informal evening. The same idea is true for summer in town—wear the suit as a suit for late spring and without the topping for summer, donning the jacket or cape again for late summer wear.

If well chosen, the printed suit is equally appropriate for spring and summer, changing the accents from dark or bright colors to white and pastels for summertime. For instance, a black print with either white or multi-colored pattern looks equally smart with black hat, bag, gloves and shoes, as it will later on with the same accessories in white. The main consideration, if you plan to wear your suit for any length of time, is to be sure you are getting good material.

TODAY'S HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Logan Clendening.

Mr. Jerome Ephraim's forthcoming book, "Take Care of Yourself," contains many pieces of advice applicable to daily life. He does not soar in the clouds, but makes explanations of everyday practices. As an example, I take the liberty of abstracting his remarks on shaving.

Shaving, in the first place, is the best way to get rid of superfluous hairs. This goes for males and females. The most important element in a comfortable and successful shave is a good razor. Nothing, says Mr. Ephraim, has replaced the old-fashioned hollow-ground, open razor. It is the most efficient shaving instrument ever devised by man.

I have no doubt that is true, but it is also true that it is as temperamental as a prima donna, and only an expert can keep it in good condition. Of the modern safety razors, some of them are of the hollow-ground type, and they are just as difficult to keep in condition as th old-fashioned open razor. The double-edged wafer blade safety razor, as compared with the open razor, is an inefficient shaving instrument, but it is safe, easy to use, and its cheapness makes it possible to get a good shave every day.

It is quite as true that there is a wide variation in sharpness and durability not only among the blades of a single brand, but also among blades in a single package, and even between the two edges of an identical blade.

This is due to the method of mass production. These wafer blades used to be individually sharpened at home, but today they usually are made in reels of thousands. In this form they are carried through the name-stamping, sharpening and honing processes, and broken up into individual blades only when they are packed. The sharpening is uneven, which accounts for the rough blades that cut the face so badly. For this reason a safety razor blade always should be honed, or stropped at least, before using.

The form of the usual safety razor makes it necessary for the blade to flex in its holder, and this requires a soft steel that cannot be sharpened as harder metal. Still, it seems to me that the safety razor blade is a great advantage over the old-fashioned hollow-ground razor, for it took too much artistry to keep the latter in shape.

Of the soaps and creams, the form is unimportant—most of them are about the same. Their function is "to soften the hairs so that they can be cut more easily, to soften the skin so that it will give before the razor, to provide a matrix to support the hairs so that the razor can cut them at an angle, and to lubricate the razor so that it will glide more easily over the skin."

These functions are only partially performed by the soap and cream, because it is the water used to form the lather that accomplishes the actual softening action. Hairs are coated with a natural protection of oil, and soap must be used to permit the water to get to the hair. Lather holds the water on the hair so it will not flow away.

Brushless creams are not soaps but vanishing creams with a large proportion of water. Most of them release practically no alkali in the presence of moisture, and people with dry or tender skins may, therefore, find them less irritating.

Cooling soaps and creams are made with menthol, which not only cools but acts as a local anesthetic.

The after-shaving lotion should contain about 50 per cent alcohol. A lower amount reduces its antiseptic value and a higher amount is irritating. Other ingredients are added for their cooling or soothing effect.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Seven pamphlets by Dr. Clendening can now be obtained by sending 10 cents in coin, for each, and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a 3-cent stamp, to Dr. Logan Clendening, in care of this paper. The pamphlets are: "Three Weeks' Reducing Diet," "Indigestion and Constipation," "Reducing and Gaining," "Infant Feeding," "Instructions for the Treatment of Diabetes," "Feminine Hygiene" and "The Care of the Hair and Skin."

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

NEW YORK, April 9.

WELL, we'd better break ourselves of that terrible stone-heaving habit right away! Starry-eyed delegates to the convention of the American Ceramic Society here tell me with straight faces that one of these days many of us are going to be living in glass houses!

ALICE HUGHES.

They'll be made of glass bricks, says Charlie Peddrick, jr., a very nice ceramist (?) indeed. Such a hovel won't cost much and will last practically until Gabriel takes a deep breath and plays his long-awaited cornet solo. It will never need a repaint job, and what fire could burn the darn thing up? And it will be so easy to build that Daddy himself, with the aid of Junior and Mom (as adviser) could probably run the place up in a few days.

Of course, being translucent, curtain-lovers will be baffled, as there will be no windows. On the other hand, says Charlie, the walls will shed such a lovely light that we women will look our best. Furthermore, air-conditioning will assure a steady temperature the year round. And the walls can be easily washed down! Not so bad eh?

Moreover, tinted glass bricks will give the owner any pastel light she likes—and I suppose if she gets tired of it she can just tear the house down and rebuild over a week-end!

* * * *

If you want a look at such a thing already in use, go to East Forty-ninth street and peer at the partially-glass house built and occupied by the modern architect, Lescaze. Right near where Alma Gluck lives, you know.

* * * *

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—The second of our two big annual parades moves along Fifth avenue today—the Army Day procession. The St. Patrick's Day affair is the other. We have mighty few parades any more, because the avenue merchants have hollered murder. Business practically stops dead when such shows are on. The last big march the avenue had, which ran from Washington square straight through the shopping district, was the humdinger of a peerage when the fleet lay in the Hudson in 1934, and our pretty girls lined the curb for miles to smile upon our gallant sea-dogs . . .

* * * *

Our two leading Glamour Boys are now battling for the honor of being the best cocktail-party-tosser. They are Lucius Beebe, the Beau Brummelian newspaperman, and Jerome Zerbe, who snaps the debs at El Morocco. Jerry is now leading by two dry martinis and a stuffed olive, thanks to the affair he recently tossed in honor of Gloria Swanson, never prettier or peppier. But Lucius is now busy thinking, and soon the battle will enter another Beebian phase, nae doot! A Boston Brahmin dies, but never quits!

* * * *

My vote for one of our town's most thrillingly beautiful apartments—that of Mr. and Mrs. Burton Holmes, the travel-lecture institutions. It overlooks Central Park, and has an enormous living room window from which the whole expanse of greenery can be seen. It is amazingly decorated and furnished with trophies of Burton's world-rambles. Oriental stuff. Just drop in any time, ladies—say you heard him lecture once . . .

* * * *

Irene Beasley, the radio and night club singer, is said to be romantically inclined toward a Washington newspaperman. Well, some of them do have charm—I caught my "prize" in the city room of the Telegram here, right between paragraphs . . .

Clare Booth, author of "The Women," is reported planning a musical show with Dick Rogers and Lorry Hart.

Capes have always been a moot point in department stores and frocke shoppes. Buyers never know whether they'll get customer-acceptance. But this is a cape spring, I learn everywhere. They're moving rapidly, either as independent garments or part of the suit. Personally, I've always considered the cape as graceful and beautiful a thing as a girl can wear. Many seem to share the notion just now!

$2,000 Annually Urged for United College Graduates

College graduates should not attempt marriage on less than an income of $2,000 a year if they expect to continue living on the plane to which they are accustomed, believes Mrs. Prudence Stevens Connor, associate professor of Household Technology at Syracuse University.

Certain "loopholes" are suggested by Mrs. Connor if a college graduate who wishes to marry is not earning at least $40 a week. The bride may continue her work or there may be available savings or money in some account.

"A situation one meets everywhere today and to which men have to adjust themselves from a psychological standpoint, is the desire of many women to continue working after marriage," Mrs. Connor says.

"Management in the home makes for happiness. Bridegrooms being better fitted because of their training to handle budgets, probably should make the budget. It is necessary on the part of young people to have a goal clearly before them, so they know what they want out of life and co-operate in attaining it by putting themselves on a sound financial basis.

Coronation To Set New Food Styles

London's Restaurants Prepare for Two Million Visitors.

ALREADY setting the style in clothes, colors and jewelry, the coronation is certain to set new food styles, and coronation parties will be the new note for smart hostesses. With more than 2,000,000 visitors from all over the world, London hotels, restaurants and private homes will be serving the traditional dishes of many countries. Scotch dishes in honor of the Scottish Queen; traditional dishes of the House of Windsor, and special delicacies of French chefs will give an international flavor to these feasts and parties.

Whether you are "going to London to see the Queen" and the King and the coronation, or whether you see it by the papers, you will be taking a "cook's tour" to London if you are up with the times.

"The pleasures of the table" are no small part of the ceremonies, and to Englishmen the coronation is a time of fun, frolic and rejoicing. State luncheons and dinners at Buckingham Palace—where the solid gold dinner service—worth $16,000,000—will be used, mean many a dainty dish to set before the King.

The coronation is permeating all phases of British life, far in advance of the date and now it has reached the kitchen in the form of "coronation cake." British housewives already are practicing making it, for it is rather elaborate.

Coronation Cake Recipe.

Ingredients:
12 ounces flour
4 ounces rice flour,
10 ounces butter,
10 ounces castor sugar (powdered sugar)
6 eggs,
Grated rinds of two oranges
8 ounces glace cherries
8 ounces sultanas (seedless Smyrna yellow raisins),
8 ounces ordinary seedless raisins
1½ teaspoonfuls baking powder,
Pinch of salt.

Line a tin (cake pan) with stiff cartridge paper (oiled brown paper) and brush the paper with melted butter. Sift the flour, rice flour, baking powder and salt.

Grate the orange rind, cut the cherries in quarters, clean the sultanas and raisins in flour and mix all these ingredients together.

Put the margarine into a large bowl and work it with a wooden spoon until it softens. Add the castor sugar and beat well together until light and creamy. Add the eggs, unbeaten, one at a time, and beat them into a mixture. If, after the third egg, the mixture begins to separate, or curdle, beat in a tablespoon of flour before adding another egg.

When all the eggs are beaten in fold in alternately the flour and mixed fruit, stirring with a metal spoon until well mixed. Put into prepared tin, smooth out toward the sides of the tin and bake for 1¾ hours in a moderate oven, then reduce the heat until the oven becomes very cool and bake for 1¼ hours.

Take out of tin, remove paper and cool on a wire tray. It is best to keep this cake in a tin box for at least two weeks before icing it.

Cover With Almond Icing.

Cover the top with almond icing, then ice all over with plain white icing. Keep back two tablespoons of the plain icing for decoration. Color one red and the other blue with vegetable coloring. When the cake has set, pipe a border of blue and a border of red around the top edge.

Decorate the center of the top with a colored sugar crown, and tie a red, white and blue paper frull around the cake, and it is ready for the Coronation Day Tea.

The state crown of England is the correct one to use. That is the one King George VI will wear in the procession from Westminister Abbey. This has a level top, surmounted by a jeweled ball and cross.

Here are other coronation recipes:

Old English Date Pie.

Plain pastry
½ package pasteurized dates
¾ cup sugar
½ teaspoon cinnamon
⅛ teaspoon nutmeg
⅛ teaspoon cloves
½ teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon fine bread crumbs
2 eggs
1 cup evaporated milk or cream
½ cup shredded coconut

Line a 9-inch pie plate with pastry which has been rolled to a thickness of ⅛ inch. Sprinkle sliced dates over the surface of the pastry. Mix the sugar, spices, salt, and bread crumbs. Beat eggs, beat in the sugar mixture gradually, then the milk or cream. Pour this custard into the pastry-lined plate. Sprinkle coconut over the surface. Place in a hot oven (425 degrees F.) for ten minutes; reduce the temperature to very moderate heat (325 degrees F.) and continue to bake for 30 to 35 minutes or until the custard will not adhere to a silver knife inserted in the center.

Scotch Woodcock.

2 tablespoons mazola
1 tablespoon flour
1 cup milk
5 hard cooked eggs
1 tablespoon anchovy paste
½ teaspoon salt
6 slices bread

To prepare a white sauce, heat mazola in a saucepan or top of double boiler. Stir in the flour. Remove from direct heat and pour in the milk. Add eggs, chopped fine, anchovy paste and salt. Stir slowly but steadily over direct heat until the sauce boils. Have the bread toasted and place it on a hot dish. Pour the hot mixture over it and serve immediately.

Golden Brown Toast Tempts Lazy Appetites in All Months

French Sandwiches of Cheese, Prepared Meat and Other Spreads Are Especially Good if Served Hot With Preserves.

By Rebekah Blake.

HOT SLICES of golden brown toast are appetite teasers all the year round. During these spring months they take on an added appeal, for appetites need more encouragement at this season than any other and it is difficult to find "just the food" for present meals.

* * * * *

French toast sandwiches are so easy to make that any child can prepare them. If you have a young son or daughter who likes to help in the kitchen, you will surely wish to remember the opportunities which these sandwiches afford.

Those who entertain at breakfast will find these French sandwiches a fitting answer to the ever-present question, "What shall I serve?" The possibilities are really unlimited in this new and attractive sandwich, which will fit into your breakfast, luncheon or supper menus equally as well as the afternoon or evening snack.

The ingredients necessary for preparation are such old standbys that your pantry shelves will undoubtedly hold them ready before you ever check the recipe.

* * * * *

Prepare sandwiches in the usual manner and trim off crusts. Secure each corner in place with half a toothpick. The filling used in these sandwiches should be as free of moisture as possible. Cheese spreads or prepared meat and sandwich spreads of any kind are particularly well suited for this purpose. Dip each sandwich in a mixture of beaten egg and milk, or a thin fritter batter, and fry in deep fat (four inches deep is sufficient). Drain on absorbent paper. Serve piping hot, topped with fruit preserves or jam, such as strawberry, cherry, raspberry, peach or loganberry. For a less hearty sandwich, omit dipping in the egg mixture and fry until golden brown in deep fat.

Three Recipes For Vegetables Are Suggested

IS "WHAT VEGETABLE shall we have for supper tonight?" an everlasting question in your family. Vegetables you must serve for their indispensable mineral and vitamin content, but providing variety for those of the family who like them, yet expect a change from day to day, as well as for those who eat vegetables only under the spell of novelty, often becomes quite a chore for the meal planner.

White sauce is used as a binder for so many creamed dishes that the knack of making it is something that every homemaker should master. It is also used as a foundation for croquettes and patties.

Here are some new recipes for vegetables, using white sauce, that may help you to vary your meals:

Asparagus and Cheese Fluff.

2 cups medium white sauce
4 eggs, separated
½ cup grated cheese
2 cups asparagus, diced
2 hard-cooked eggs, diced
1 teaspoon salt
Dash cayenne pepper

Combine all ingredients, except egg whites, with white sauce. Fold stiffly beaten whites into mixture. Pour into buttered casserole. Bake, uncovered, 45 minutes, in a slow oven (325 degrees F.). Serve hot.

Mushroom Croquettes.

1½ cups cooked mushrooms, diced
3 hard-cooked eggs, chopped
2 tablespoons minced onion
¼ teaspoon dry mustard
½ teaspoon salt
Dash of pepper
1½ cups thick white sauce
2 tablespoons flour

Mix first six ingredients thoroughly. Add white sauce gradually, making mixture stiff enough to form into balls. Dip in milk, and then in flour. Fry in deep hot fat (365 degrees F.) until a crisp brown. Remove and drain on unglazed paper. Serve hot.

Use Clean Board for Reel.

When unraveling knitted garments, wind the yarn on a clean board. Then take a soft brush, dip it in soapy water and brush the yarn gently. Next rinse it and put it in the sun or in a warm place to dry. It can then be rolled into soft yarn balls just as easily as fresh new hanks.

Fruit Jar for Sugar.

Keep powdered sugar from lumping by placing it in an air-tight container immediately after opening the package. A fruit jar serves very nicely for this purpose.

CHILD CHATS

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

"TO MY BOYS, a successful career, and for my girls, a happy marriage!"

This is the wish most parents would make for their children even in this century when women are entering the business and professional world with the same freedom as men.

The ideal for woman remains home and marriage, and if she wants a career, she herself must go about getting it. Her brother is forced to earn his own living and be independent. No doubt he too will marry, but marriage for him is not regarded as a vocation, rather as an avocation.

Is it any wonder that unhappy marriages result from such diametrically opposed views of life? The boy is led to consider his wife's life and interests as a side-issue, the girl looks upon her husband's occupation as a means for getting her a livelihood. Neither husband nor wife has any united philosophy of living.

A successful marriage cannot be made by one partner of the contract. A contract to be of use must receive the support and co-operation of all the signers. In the case of marriage there are two. The marriage is a thing by itself, a relationship dependent just as much upon husband as wife. The support of the home depends just as much upon wife as husband. If she is not an earner in her own right, then it is her duty to do the spending. If earning and spending are to tally, she must know enough about her husband's business and he enough about the domestic economy to run the business of the home intelligently.

Both girl and boy should be trained for marriage, and both should in addition be trained for their separate professions, whether they be home-making or a career, getting or spending money.

Contest Asks For Recipes Using Honey

NATIONAL HONEY WEEK is to be celebrated April 19 to 24, so it is time for you to be looking for interesting honey recipes. In fact, there is no reason why you shouldn't use honey the year round.

This week The Washington Post Recipe Contest sends out a call for good recipes containing honey. There will be five cash prizes for the winners of this contest. These are $3 for first prize, $2 for second prize and $1 for each of the three remaining awards.

Perhaps you have a prize-winning recipe for Honey Apricot Blancmange, honey cookies, honey dressing, honey frosting, honey candy, honey cake or honey pudding. Or you may have a successful recipe for baked apples with honey, honey cheese pie, honey French dressing, baked beans with honey, honey pineapple bread, pumpkin pie with honey, ham baked with honey or honey date bars.

If you have such a recipe, copy it neatly and send it to Rebekah Blake, The Post Food Editor, so it will reach her not later than Saturday noon. Write your name and address clearly on your recipe.

Only one recipe will be accepted from each contestant.

Cake Baking Advice.

Here is an interesting variation of angel food cake. Just before putting ordinary angel food cake mixture into the tin, gently fold in 1-3 cup of Maraschino cherries which have been chopped fine and drained very dry. Then bake just as any other angel food cake.

PLEASANT HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

"WE HAD the movies at our house last night—not by television either!" remarked Roberta when she stopped by to borrow our pinking shears (our most popular possession.)

She went on to say that she and William, her husband, had just been moving the furniture all around. Something had been out of balance with the old arrangement, but they hadn't figured out just what the trouble was till they started experimenting.

Then they discovered that in their attempts to get their comfortable furniture in conversational reach, they had all the fat fabric furniture together in one end of the room and all the wooden furniture in a clique at the other end of the room. And a large handsome secretary of mahogany didn't do its best for the room because it had been against a wall space just wide enough for it with no margin to frame it graciously.

What they did was to loosen up the arrangement. One longish, narrow console table they grouped with two chintz covered chairs. And the sofa they moved where they could have it ensembled with a table big enough for tea things. This with a pair of wood frame open arm chairs made seating facilities for five, which is about as sociable as a grouping need to be. The other upholstered chairs and console did for more intimate occasions for two to talk. By making these two groups with the big pieces of the upholstered suite separated, the mood of the room was ligthened and balanced.

Then the secretary was moved from the space it had occupied between the windows to the center of a wider wall area. Being a handsome piece of furniture, they felt that it not only seemed more graceful in this more important place, but it had there more to contribute to the pattern of the room.

Other problems of furniture arrangement are considered in the writer's bulletin 'How to Arrange Furniture," which will be sent on receipt of a 3-cent stamp.

Stokes Urges National Alley Clearance Plan

Wants Housing Bill Altered to Include Program Like District's.

A request that the Wagner-Steagall housing bill be amended to provide for slum reclamation of the type being carried out by the District Alley Dwelling Authority was made to Senate and House committees yesterday by Dr. Anson Phelps Stokes, president of the Washington Housing Association.

Dr. Stokes, in an association report that approved the Wagner-Steagall bill in principle, also asked that the new legislation incorporate safeguards for the continuance of work now being done by the local Alley Authority.

After studying the bill, which would set up a United States Housing Authority and provide financial assistance to the States for building new dwellings suitable for low-income families, the local housing association recommended changes which would, it believes, make a public housing program more effective.

The association disapproved a section of the bill which provides that grants be made according to development cost of a project. Saying that such a measure might tend to encourage high cost of land and construction, the report advocated that subsidies be granted on a per-room basis, with minimum room sizes fixed.

In order that Congress and the public may check more frequently on the operations of the Authority, the association asked that less funds be made immediately available and that the Authority be required to seek additional appropriations and further authorization to issue obligations.

Along this same line, the association asked in its report for a restriction of broad powers conferred upon the Authority for auditing expenditures, making appointments and modifying contracts with local authorities.

500 Attend Dinner Of Southeastern U.

Awards were made to the class heads and to faculty members. In addition gold basketballs were presented to members of the basketball team. Dancing followed the dinner.

Flood Aid Plan Held Inadequate

By the Associated Press.

Chairman Whittington (Democrat), Mississippi, of the House Flood Control Committee, said yesterday he believed President Roosevelt's proposed appropriations for flood control should be materially increased.

Whittington told the United States Flood Control Federation that a suggested appropriation of $30,000,000 for projects authorized in the 1936 omnibus flood control bill should be boosted to between $50,000,000 and $60,000,000.

He added the President's recommendation for $22,000,000 for Mississippi Valley projects, authorized in the Overton bill of 1936, should be increased to at least $35,000,000.

D. A. R. Leader Among Guests For Americanization Festival

Mrs. William A. Becker, president general of the National Society, Daughters of the American Revolution, and Col. Frederick A. Delano will be among the special guests at the annual festival to be given Wednesday for foreign students of the Americanization School in honor of the D. A. R. in the Hall of Nations, Washington Hotel.

Planning the program in honor of the Daughters in recognition of the extensive Americanism work carried on by the organization in Washington and New York, the Americanization School Association will present songs and dances of many countries by students in native costume. Dancing will follow the program.

The Americanization School not only trains students in the facts necessary to pass citizenship examinations, but teaches them about the Constitution and the traditions upon which it was founded, that as new citizens they may have an understanding of their adopted country which is based upon American principles. The Americanism committee of the D. A. R., under the chairmanship of Mrs. Alexander H. Bell, has co-operated with the school by furnishing milk for the nursery and aiding in the citizenship projects. Tickets for the festival will be supplied upon request by Mrs. Bell.

The French section of the Twentieth Century Club will present a comedy, "Les Deux Gourds," today at 2:30 at the American Association of University Women. Miss Elizabeth Carhart will preside at the luncheon table. Mrs. John Van Schaick will be in charge of the play.

At the last meeting of the George Washington group of Delphians, the following officers were elected: Mrs. George Lilley, president; Mrs. G. P. Rawley, vice president; Mrs. John K. Freiot, secretary; Mrs. William Liddle, treasurer. Mrs. Alex Bell, Mrs. A. B. Manly, and Mrs. W. L. Evans, seminars.

A luncheon in honor of the retiring president was given at Woodward & Lothrop. The next program of the group will be held Wednesday under the leadership of Mrs. A. B. Manly, in the Peabody Room of the Georgetown Library. Among those taking part in the program will be Mrs. Robert Howard, Mrs. Carolyn Rask, Mrs. G. P. Rawley, Mrs. J. B. Tiffey, and Mrs. W. L. Evans.

The bimonthly tea will be given tomorrow at 4:30 p. m. at the Women's City Club, 736 Jackson place northwest. Miss Ann Sugar, pianist, will entertain. Mme. Garzia, chairman of the French section, will be the hostess.

The current events section will meet Tuesday at 5 p. m. Mrs. Louis B. Motford will speak on "The Land of the Midnight Sun."

The board will meet Tuesday at 8 p. m. Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley will preside.

A president's dinner, an event sponsored by the business and professional section, will be given Wednesday at 6:30 p. m. Marking the same date as Pan-American Day, an address will be given by Maurice H. Thatcher, former governor of the Canal Zone and former member of Congress from Kentucky. The presidents who will speak are: Miss Daisy Reed, Soroptomist Club; Miss Ruth Robinson, Business and Professional Women's Club; Mrs. Ruth B. Shipley, Zonta Club, and Miss Mabel Strider, Quota Club. Mrs. E. Richard Gasch will be the hostess.

In the last of the series of "Adventures In Music" Friday at 8:30 p. m., Mrs. Mary Izant Couch, chairman of the music section, will present Mrs. Lucille Pierce Ferguson, pianist. Mrs. Ferguson will tell in words and music of her personal adventures in exploring the Kentucky mountains in search of folk tunes.

The civics section announces a luncheon for Saturday, April 17, at 1:15 p. m. The speakers will be Miss Emily Kneu Buhl, chief, utilization section of the R. E. A., and the Rev. Russell J. Clinchy, president of the Council of Social Agencies, who will speak on "The Relief Situation In Washington." Mrs. Grace Dexter Bryan is chairman.

The French section will be entertained at tea Sunday, April 18, at the home of Mrs. E. Tibbetts Fulton, 1849 Irving street northwest.

A reception will be held Thursday evening at the Washington Club, Seventeenth and K streets, at which the members of the National Society, Daughters of Founders and Patriots of America, will introduce the incoming board. The reception will be held from 9 to 10 p. m.

Epsilon Alpha and Delta Sigma chapters of Sigma Phi Gamma international sorority will hold a dance tonight at Beaver Dam Country Club.

At a dinner meeting at the Mayflower Hotel the Washington Optimist Club elected officers for the year. J. Benton Webb is the new president, and the other officers are Vice Presidents William W. Chase, V. Manning Hoffman and William M. Kline. Raymond A. Catlin was elected secretary-treasurer, with William J. Bell as sergeant at arms. For the board of governors the following Optimists were elected for a two-year period:

Louiss K. Baumgardner, Richard S. Dean, Louis C. Carl, William T. Moreland, Charles H. Cooke and Joseph B. Murphy.

A continuance of the work among the boys of Washington will constitute the major effort of the Washington Optimists for the coming year.

The local chapter Women of the Moose, under the leadership of the senior regent, Mrs. Susie Sorenson, is formulating plans for the entertainment of Past Grand Regent Mrs. Jane Debus, of Columbia, Pa., on the occasion of her annual visitation the latter part of this month. Mrs. Margaret Bates, membership chairman, announces plans for initiation of a class of candidates in honor of Mrs. Debus on April 23.

Mrs. E. M. Graham and Mrs. H. H. Stippler were joint hostesses to the members of their luncheon club of the general club section of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration at 2400 Sixteenth street Wednesday.

The out-of-town guest at this luncheon was Mrs. D. R. Dickason, of Minneapolis, Minn.

Others attending the luncheon were Mrs. S. R. Smith, Mrs. P. R. Taylor, Mrs. E. W. Braun, Mrs. E. W. Browne, Mrs. H. M. Cleaver, Mrs. William E. Neal, Mrs. K. P. Bemis, Mrs. R. C. Butner, Mrs. J. L. Wann, Mrs. B. A. Holt, Mrs. G. W. Muller, Mrs. M. G. Young and Mrs. Anne McDrew.

Midamerica's Sale Reported Due in 2 Days

New Eastern Rail Powers Expected to Buy Van Sweringen Empire.

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, April 9.—Financial interests were writing an uncertain epilogue tonight for one of the most impressive success stories of modern times—the story of two newspaper boys, O. P. and M. J. Van Sweringen, who grew up to rule some 28,000 miles of railroad.

Secrecy cloaked negotiations reported to be under way in Cleveland and New York following George A. Ball's announcement that he had given his common stock holdings in the powerful Midamerica Corporation to a charitable foundation.

One report was that Midamerica—top holding company in the $3,000,000,000 railroad empire—may be sold within 48 hours either to a New York or a Cleveland syndicate. The Van Sweringen offices here said they could not confirm or comment upon the report.

Ball, the Muncie, Ind., glass jar maker, who joined G. A. Tomlinson, of Cleveland in 1935 in saving control of the railroads for the Van Sweringen brothers and then yesterday jolted financial circles with the announcement he had donated the controlling stock to the George and Frances Ball Foundation, could not be found for comment.

Midamerica was the holding company formed by Ball and Tomlinson to buy the controlling securities of the Van Sweringen empire at a public auction in New York. Ball has purchased most of Tomlinson's interest, and his common stock holdings were estimated recently at $10,000,000. Both Van Sweringen brothers have died.

Dispatches from Wall Street said rail men there believed Ball's charity donation was the first step in the entry of a new group into Eastern railroad affairs.

Beclouding the transaction further was an option given by Ball and Tomlinson to the Van Sweringens allowing the brothers to buy back control of Midamerica within 10 years if, in the opinion of Ball and Tomlinson, they had liquidated the large indebtedness which they acquired in the depression.

Federal Aid Asked For Conservation Of Timber Tracts

By the Associated Press.

Lumber manufacturers asked the Federal Government yesterday to assist them in a new campaign to conserve timber resources.

W. B. Nettleton, of Seattle, president of the National Lumber Manufacturers' Association, said the industry had taken the lead in conservation since invalidation of NRA codes "and now we want the Government to do the things expected of it."

"Then," we want to be given a further trial on a voluntary basis," he added.

A conference of 200 lumbermen and State foresters suggested Federal appropriations of $5,000,000 annually for 10 years to purchase lands for State forest purposes. They also proposed $9,000,000 for protection against forest fires; extension of forest credit loans similar to farm credit loans and efforts by the Agriculture Department to induce farmers to use benefit payments to protect woodlots from fire.

Favorite Contenders Lead in Bridge Tourney

New York, April 8 (AP).—The two favorite contenders in the National Masters' Team of Four Contract Bridge Tournament were leading tonight at the halfway mark in the semifinal matches for the national title.

The defending champions, "The Four Aces"—David Burnstine, Howard Schenken and M. D. Maier, all of New York; Oswald Jacoby, of Dallas, Tex., and B. J. Becker, of Philadelphia—led Lewis Bernard, of Cincinnati, and Phil Abramsohn, Morris Ellis and Harry Fishbein, of New York, by 2,120 points. Waldemar von Zedtwitz, Theodore Lightner, Samuel Fry, jr., and Edward Hymes, jr., were ahead of H. Dinkelspiel, jr., B. Rabinowitz, L. Yeager and Murray Seiler by 4,030 points. Both are all-New York teams.

Tomb Robbers Executed.

Peiping, China, April 9 (AP). — A large Chinese crowd today watched execution of four convicted tomb robbers at the "killing grounds" near Temple Heaven, despite an effort to keep time of the shootings secret.

Noted Author Dies

ALBERT BIGELOW PAINE.

Albert B. Paine, Author-Editor, Dies in Florida

Biographer of Mark Twain Also Served on Pultizer Prize Committee.

New Smyrna, Fla., April 9 (AP).—Albert Bigelow Paine, 76, of West Reading, Conn., author and biographer and member of the Pulitzer prize committee for the past eight years, died here tonight after an illness of four weeks.

Paine spent the winter in south Florida and was en route to New York when he was stricken and brought to a hospital here.

Survivors include the widow, Mrs. Dora L. Paine, who was with her husband; three daughters, Mrs. Louis Paine Benjamin, of New York, associate editor of the Ladies Home Journal; Mrs. Frances Paine Wade, of Paris, France, and Mrs. J. H. Cushman, of West Reading; a sister, Mrs. Carry Alexander, of Orange Park, Fla., and a nephew, James Tully, of Xenia, Ill., who also was at his bedside.

Paine was the literary executor of Mark Twain and wrote a biography of the humorist.

One of his first works was "Rhymes by Two Friends," written in collaboration with William Allen White. He contributed poetry to a number of magazines.

In 1928, he was decorated by the French as a chevalier in the Legion of Honor.

Paine was born at New Bedford, Mass., July 10, 1861.

His literary career extended from 1893 to 1935. One of his last works was "Mark Twain's Notebook."

For ten years he was a department editor of St. Nicholas Magazine.

He was author of more than 40 novels, biographies and other works. He wrote of Twain, Lillian Fish, Thomas Nast and George Fisher Baker, among others.

For the past 40 years Paine had spent most of his time in Europe and the East.

Col. Jackson, 63, Flood Expert, Dies on Cruise

Headed Mississippi River Control Board From 1928-1932.

Col. Thomas H. Jackson, 63, Army Engineer Corps, retired, former president of the Mississippi River Commission, died Wednesday on board the S. S. Reliance at Ching Wang Tao, China, the War Department announced yesterday.

Funeral arrangements have not been announced.

He had retired from service March 31 from the office of the chief of engineers in the Munitions Building. With his wife, Mrs. Maude E. Jackson, the only immediate survivor, he was on a tour of the Far East at the time of death.

From 1928 to 1932 he served as president of the Mississippi River Commission, appointed to that post by President Coolidge June 15, 1928, and serving with the rank of brigadier general. It was under his presidency that the Mississippi flood control program was placed in active operation.

A native of Ontario, Canada, he was appointed to West Point from Michigan, commissioned a second lieutenant in the Corps of Engineers upon graduation in 1899. After early service at the Washington Barracks he spent two years in the Philippines on duty at Iloilo and Fort William McKinley. Later he served on the West Coast and was in charge of the Engineering District at Wheeling, W. Va.

During the World War he was senior instructor in engineering at Madison Barracks, New York, and later at Tours, Paris, and other European cities on engineering duties. For his World War services he was awarded the Distinguished Service Medal. He also was a member of the French Legion of Honor and a holder of the Purple Heart decoration. After the war he served at the War Department here and on various assignments on the West Coast.

Maurice J. Kaufmann Dies in San Francisco

Maurice J. Kaufmann, former Alexandria, Va., resident and uncle of Joseph A. Kaufmann, of 2901 Connecticut avenue northwest, died Tuesday in San Francisco, it was learned here yesterday. Funeral services and burial were held in San Francisco, Thursday.

Surviving, besides his nephew, are his wife, Mrs. Sarah Kaufmann; two brothers, Jerome Kaufmann, of Alexandria, and Sydney Kaufmann, of San Francisco, and a sister, Mrs. Raymond Blumenfeld, of Alexandria.

Man Only Slightly Hurt In Blast, $100,000 Fire

Stratford, Conn., April 9 (AP).—John Boyd, a millwright, was thrown clear as a chemical tank on which he was sitting today exploded. He was dragged to safety by fellow workmen without serious injury, even as other tanks in a storeroom blew up.

Season of Conception Shapes Man's Career, Scientist Says

By the Associated Press.

Cambridge, Mass., April 9.—Dr. William F. Petersen, Chicago scientist, said tonight that the season in which a person's life first begins—nine months before he is born—may determine his entire career.

Persons whose life is formed during months in which the weather is unstable may become a scientist—or even criminally insane—Dr. Petersen told members of the American Association of Physical Anthropologists.

Persons conceived in stable months may be sober sedate and conservative, he added.

Resistance or susceptibility to certain diseases, Dr. Petersen continued, may be determined by the season in which conception occurs.

Dr. Petersen is noted for his research on the effect of environment on the development of human organs.

Supports Claims.

In an illustrated lecture he reproduced statistical charts and research data in support of his assertions.

Children conceived in late winter and early spring, he said, tend to be lighter in weight than those whose conception occurs in the other months.

He attributed the less rugged physical structures to the seasonal temperature changes. This conclusion was reached, he said, by studying a large number of student groups.

Dr. Petersen stated that it does not follow that robust parents should produce robust children. The birth month, he emphasized, does not influence the lives of persons.

Maniacs Early in Year.

Referring to a diagram, he traced the curve of conception through a period of years. The general trend of the arc, he commented, showed that scientists, progressive individuals and creative persons entered the embryonic stage in the early months of the year. Too, he said, violent maniacs and criminally insane persons are conceived in this period.

In the months from May to August, he said, the tendency is toward reserved and conservative persons. During this span, the downward trend is evidenced in the mentally deficient; the violently insane mind is tapered off the moronic or idiocy.

Deaths resulting from erysipelas tend to be more prevalent for those persons conceived between January and June; infantile paralysis, from June to December, Dr. Petersen said. The mortality rate for tuberculosis is the highest among those conceived in the summer months.

Bob Burns Says

Copyright, 1937

By Bob Burns.

It looks like science is influencing our lives more every year. It's gettin' so it's hard to get a job now without havin' to submit to some kind of a test that some scientist has thought up.

They had a bunch of men apply for the job of pickin' up paper in the courthouse yard. The foreman was showin' the applicants how to do it by giggin' a piece of paper with a sharp spike on the end of a stick. One man stepped forward and he says "I know I'm jest the man for the job." The foreman said "Did you ever do this before?" and the man says "No." The foreman says "What makes you think you're qualified for this position?" The man says "Well, my grandfather use'ta harpoon whales."

Skullduggery

There's a room they unofficially call the Chamber of Horrors in Agriculture's South Building. Officially, it's probably called by some other name; but if you ask anyone where the Chamber of Horrors is located, they will know what you're talking about and will show you the way.

Actually, there aren't any horrors there, unless you're of a mind to construe misrepresentation and, perhaps, man's skullduggery, as a horror. There is aplenty of that sort of horror. For the room, an ample one, contains vast exhibits of flim-flam, most all with pretty labels.

The food and drug people know it's all flim-flam stuff—from the bottles with the fake bottoms to the cosmetics that not infrequently have put women's eyes out—but they can't do very much about it. They can, of course, put the tweezers on other minor ways the law will permit them to squelch obvious cheats. But it's tough going, at best—so the drug and food people set out their exhibit and maybe some will look and learn.

If someone escorts you through the room, he will say that it's a common practice of citizens—the buying public—to look at the size of the package and to disregard the label. One table is full of the folly of this practice. For example: The packages there are considerably over-sized for their contents. The packages, say, would hold 10 ounces, but actually, they contain, say, 3 or 4 ounces. This is quite within the written law, because always the contents are truly stated on the label. The proprietors know if they don't do this they will get it in the neck. The rub is this: The purchaser sees the big box and says something like: "Oh, look at that big box of macaroni, or cheese, or salt," or anything. If he took time to read the label he would sense a smaller quantity.

Other such flim-flams are fake bottoms (and the ingenuity of some of these are tributes to man's ingenuity, if not to his conscience) . . . a clever box for making all eggs seem of the same size (you guessed it right; they all appear of a large size) . . . a cheese box with a fake bottom that left scarcely enough top to put a rat's supper in . . . a lot of cosmetics that have left many women skin-scalded or blind . . . jars and bottles and packages and paper containers of reducing fluids and powders (it's either injurious or pure unabashed fake, the guide will tell you) . . . and a lot of patent medicines with lables that scream.

One particular gem among the patent medicines was the discovery by a shirt salesman who—before medicine made him rich—traveled the cross-roads of Pennsylvania. He heard the old women along the route proclaiming the curative properties of horsetail, a weed that thrives along the railroad tracks and elsewhere of the Keystone State. The shirt salesman dreamed a scientific dream and awakened, after a while, in the medicine business as the proprietor of a startling cure. They've had him in the courts, but the law is strong for the man in the dock and the Government couldn't prove that he lacked faith in his product, that it was not—so far as he personally was concerned—all that he said it was.

It all may be worthless as a last year's ballot, but if the label is true the Government's inspectors can't act. They can beef and squawk and place the stuff on the tables of the Chamber of Horrors, but they can't act. And they're helpless, too, when the proprietors tone down, and bring to law-conformity, the label claims but at the same time make incredibly preposterous claims for the same products in advertising. The Chamber of Horrors embalms much of this.

Now that the indictment has been read, the defense should go on. One proprietor, who had placed three ounces of something in a package built to hold 10, was asked why. "It's perfectly all right," he said, "because you have to have considerable room in which to shake the —up."

And in the long catalogue of flim-flam, that explanation should certainly be coupled to the carnival man's classic statement: "I don't explain nothing, I just tells them."

N. F. F. E.'s national headquarters here has issued two more charters to newly-organized local unions, says Gertrude M. McNally, secretary-treasurer . . . These are: No. 603, Bardstown, Ky., with membership composed of employes in the Alcohol Tax Unit, and the Department of Agriculture, No. 604, Mobile, Ala., with membership composed of employes in various Federal agencies in that area.

Expert Cites Cure for D.C. Traffic Evils

Senator King Criticizes Use of Streets for Parking Lots.

By Howard F. Wentworth.

A revamped highway system, segregating traffic speed channels and eliminating the dangers of intersection collisions by providing elevated or submerged crossing points, was proposed yesterday as a partial solution to Washington's traffic problem by Dr. Miller McClintock, director of the Harvard Bureau for Street Traffic Research.

Speaking to members of Congress, city officials and traffic authorities at a Willard Hotel luncheon meeting of the traffic advisory council, American Automobile Association, Dr. McClintock said District traffic had "outgrown" the original L'Enfant city design.

When the city was first laid out, he declared, it was never contemplated that thousands of fast-moving automobiles would some day jam the broad streets and avenues of L'Enfant's "hub and spoke" design.

And before the tangled traffic problem can be solved, Dr. McClintock said, the entire highway system must be rebuilt. He predicted that the next ten years will bring an unprecedented congestion problem and warned that remedial action must begin at once in order to gradually approach a solution.

Wide Streets Help.

The city's broad streets, however, have enabled authorities to regulate and control the traffic volume with a certain degree of efficiency, Dr. McClintock asserted. Without this to aid, he added, officials would be faced with a much greater problem.

Senator William H. King (Democrat), Utah, chairman of the Senate District Committee, directly blamed the L'Enfant plan for creating a traffic situation in Washington unequaled in any other major city. He struck also at parked cars and condemned the practice of making city streets "an open garage."

"Repeatedly," said Senator King, "I have been asked to aid in ridding the city of this parking evil. I feel it should be done. There is no other city in the country which permits streets to be used as public garages."

Washington is not alone in its efforts to seek an answer to the muddled traffic question, Dr. McClintock declared. The entire country, he pointed out, has joined to combat highway hazards.

"This problem is the responsibility of every resident," said Dr. McClintock. "It is a universal problem. Everyone wants to travel about his or her daily tasks with a reasonable degree of security. It is regrettable that some persons cannot—or will not—be educated to the necessity of direct responsibility."

Separated Grades Urged.

Although traffic education is one of the foremost factors in traffic control, the Harvard expert declared, authorities have been forced to turn more and more to enforcement as a means of regulating those who scoff at instruction.

While stressing the three "E's" of traffic safety—education, enforcement and engineering—these items will never bring a permanent solution to the problem, Dr. McClintock said.

"These are slow, long-term methods of traffic control," he declared. "They bring relief—but not solution."

It was at this point that Dr. McClintock cited Washington's highway system and rapidly increasing automobile registration as the crux of the local situation.

"A system of separated traffic grades must be superimposed over the present street layout," he asserted. "It is only by this means that mass transportation can be facilitated without ever-present dangers."

He pointed to New York's recently opened "clover leaf" maze of high-speed highways as an example of what can be done. Over this system, he said, congested traffic is moved swiftly through heavily populated urban centers without the hazards of cross traffic.

Four Measures Stressed.

All congestion and all types of accidents can be placed under four separate heads, said Dr. McClintock. He listed them as follows:

1. Head-on collisions.
2. Running from roadway.
3. Broadside collisions.
4. Rear-end collisions.

Even if vehicles involved in these types of crashes don't strike, he added, attempts to avoid the accidents result in congestion in one form or another.

Dr. McClintock, internationally recognized traffic authority, lauded Washington's current efforts to improve conditions. He spoke of the safety patrol campaign in which The Post is co-operating with the police department.

Other guests at yesterday's meeting included:

Commissioners Hazen and Sultan, Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, highway director; Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer and his assistant, M. O. Eldridge; Maj. Ernest W. Brown, police superintendent; Inspector William E. Holmes, newly appointed traffic supervisor; Capt. Milton D. Smith, traffic division commander.

Senator Reynolds (Democrat), North Carolina; Representative Ross Collins (Democrat), Mississippi; Representative David Lewis (Democrat), Maryland; Representative Palmisano (Democrat), Maryland; Representative Jack Nichols (Democrat), Oklahoma; Representative Virginia Jencke (Democrat), Indiana.

Thomas H. McDonald, Bureau of Public Roads; Thomas Lodge, president, Federation of Citizens Associations, and other civic and A. A. A. leaders.

Lawyer Attacks Jurisdiction Of D. C. Court

Contends District Attorney Should Handle Many Auto, Liquor Cases.

Authority to prosecute most traffic offenses and violations of the Alcoholic Control Board regulations should be taken from the office of the corporation counsel and placed under the authority of the district attorney's office, Attorney T. Edward O'Connell asserted yesterday in a motion filed before Judge Walter J. Casey.

The judge took the motion under advisement. He set April 19 as the date on which he will make a ruling.

Meanwhile, several persons were seriously injured in automobile accidents in the District yesterday.

O'Connell's motion came in defense of Byron H. Moyer, 29-year-old street car motorman, charged with second offense reckless driving. If convicted, Moyer faces a penalty of a one-year prison sentence or a $1,000 fine, or both.

The attorney's motion cited a section of the District code which states that the corporation counsel's office has no legal right to prosecute cases involving a maximum penalty of more than a year in jail.

Authority Outlined.

The corporation counsel's office gets its authority to prosecute certain major traffic offenses and municipal regulations, many of which carry excessive penalties on conviction, from the traffic act, which O'Connell claims to be in direct violation of the District code, which holds that such authority rests with the United States.

Boy Hurt by Truck.

Edward O'Reilly, 5, of No. 41 M street northwest, was knocked down by a truck in an alley off M street northwest, between North Capitol and First streets, yesterday afternoon, when he ran between the vehicle and the wall of a building as the truck was entering the alley.

Removed to Sibley Hospital, Edward was treated for fractured left arm and abrasions to the head and shoulders and was later sent home.

Calhoun Hackett, colored, 28, of 4326 Hayes street northwest, who was operating the truck which is owned by Arthur Crayton, 825 Forty-eighth street northeast, was not held.

A charge of reckless driving was placed against Josephine A. Embrey, 20, of 1022 Eighth street northwest, after an automobile which she was driving collided with a truck at Seventh street and Constitution avenue northwest yesterday.

Two Hurt in Crash.

She was riding with James L. Thompson, of Vienna, Va., owner of the car, when she hit the truck. The impact sent the car skidding. Before it came to a stop, it had torn down a police call box and crashed against a fence.

The injured were taken to Emergency Hospital for treatment. Edward Melanson, 27, of Fort Washington, Md., was treated for shock, and released.

Former Candidate for President Says Roosevelt and the 'Nine Old Men' Are 'Human,' but Sometimes 'Need a Little Spanking.'

Representative William Lemke (Republican), North Dakota, said last night that the Congress of the United States is on a sit-down strike. He felt that the "inactivity" of Congress was equivalent to a sit-down.

He aired his views of the current political scene extensively before more than 100 members of the Central Business Men's Association at their annual banquet, bearing down particularly on some of the views he expressed last year when a candidate for President in "a campaign that I thoroughly enjoyed."

Taking the floor after a program of torch songs, tap dancing and Hawaiian music and after a meal of fresh mackerel, shredded lettuce and neapolitan ice cream, Lemke said he will forever hold human rights and property rights as inseparable. "And I can't see any difference between a sit-down strike, a Green strike or a Lewis strike. If anything, the sit-down strike is more humane and effective," he said.

He viewed all public officials as the hired men of the country and that applies "to the nine old men on the Hill. Every one is just human . . . you shouldn't make tin gods of them . . . they all have feet of clay," he said. He deplored the "playing of cheap politics" and reminded that the Government belongs to the people.

In past times he said he has disagreed with the Administration, but he congratulated the President on his handling of things in 1932, and then, following the train of things to the present, he declared the Congress on a sit-down. He said he held no brief for the Supreme Court, but "don't you think that Congress has made more mistakes than the Supreme Court?"

"I have criticized the Supreme Court as much as any man and I have criticized the President, but that doesn't mean that I would like to abolish either; they just need a little spanking sometimes," he said.

The Business Men's Association, after a rollicking program, installed officers, as follows: Hugh V. Keiser, president; Dial H. Elkins, first vice president; William J. Mileham, second vice president; Mrs. Estelle Whiting, third vice president; Walter C. Poteet, treasurer, and Miss Mabel S. White, secretary. The directors are Elkins, Frederick Levy, F. Harold Deland and Mileham.

Kehoes Celebrate 55th Anniversary Of Their Wedding

There were merry congratulations and wishes of happy returns of the day yesterday to Mr. and Mrs. Edward T. Kehoe, sr., out in their pleasant home at 1439 Clifton street northwest.

The occasion was their fifty-fifth wedding anniversary. Natives of New York, they were married in the gaslit era at St. Stephen's Church, Brooklyn, April 9, 1882.

They came to Washington in 1890, where Kehoe was employed at the Bureau of Printing and Engraving until 1926, when he was retired. Kehoe is 75. His wife is 74.

Boy Bandit Suspect Admits Shooting Caton; Kin Dying

A youthful bandit, still weak from wounds he suffered when he was shot by Precinct Detective John Caton in an attempted holdup Tuesday night, last night confessed he fired the three bullets which wounded the policeman.

As William Knight, 17, appeared at headquarters during the lineup and made his verbal confession, his brother, Louis, 18, lay dying in Emergency Hospital, and Detective Caton, thrice shot himself in the gun-battle in an ice cream store at 806 Upshur street, was recovering at Walter Reed.

"I shot those three times. Louie didn't shoot," said Knight. "Louie's innocent of any shooting."

After talking to police, Knight was taken to jail and held without bond.

Third of the bandit trio, who are implicated in 13 robberies, is Ferguson Thiebolt, 19, who was unhurt when Caton's gun flashed before he fell. Thiebolt also is held without bond.

A special message went over the police teletype last night.

It informed men in all precincts that Caton, hero of the force and slayer, three years ago, of William B. Phillips, desperate tri-State "rodman," was on the way to recovery.

Parole Group Confers Here And Organizes

Executives of Mid-Atlantic States Pick Officers, Discuss Problems.

A new organization, the Mid-Atlantic Parole Conference, was formed yesterday at a meeting in the Justice Department Building of parole executives from New York, Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Maryland and the District.

The Mid-Atlantic Conference, like other regional conferences now in existence, will co-operate with the American Parole Association and with the American Prison Congress.

Various phases of the parole problem were discussed at the meeting. Particularly emphasized was a discussion of uniform practices by the several parole boards regarding supervision of parolees from other jurisdictions.

After the meeting, Wilbur La Roe, jr., chairman of the District Parole Board, declared that the conference was "a distinct success." "It was especially helpful to our board," he said, "because we have not yet brought our system in the District to the state of efficiency that has been attained in some other jurisdictions."

George C. Jennings, chief parole officer of New York State, was elected permanent chairman of the conference. St. Alban Kite, assistant parole director of New Jersey, was named permanent secretary.

Others who attended the conference were Courtland Butler, parole supervisor of Pennsylvania; W. David Tilghman, jr., Maryland parole commissioner, and Frank R. Jelleff, Emmett J. Scott and Hugh F. Rivers, all of the local parole board. La Roe presided at the meeting.

Foreign Masonic Dignitaries Here

Four visiting officials of the Masonic Order of England and Scotland were guests of honor at a banquet last night in the Mayflower, with Paul B. Cromelin, grand master of the District lodge, presiding.

The delegation, which earlier in the day visited various public buildings in the District and in Virginia, is led by Gen. Sir Francis John Davies, provincial grand master of Worcestershire and deputy grand master of the United Grand Lodge of England; Brig. Gen. E. C. W. D. Walthall, deputy provincial grand master of Derbyshire, past grand deacon of the Grand Lodge of England; Viscount Traprain, substitute grand master of the Grand Lodge of Scotland, and the Right Worthy Brother T. C. Winning, grand secretary of the Grand Lodge of Scotland.

District Held Mulcted on Fire Rates

Insurance Overcharge Reported $10,000,000 for 12 Years.

House Bill Provides $4,600 for Expert to Study Levy Structure.

Washington property owners were "overcharged" more than $10,000,000 in fire insurance rates during the 12-year period from 1924 through 1935, the House sub-committee on District appropriations disclosed yesterday.

Supplementing a statement in the report on the District supply bill, the sub-committee made public a communication from J. Balch Moor, superintendent of insurance. Is was on the basis of this report that the sub-committee made provision for the employment of an insurance rate expert at $4,600 a year.

Citing figures to support his conclusion, Moor told the sub-committee that "the insurance public of the District of Columbia is paying an exorbitant rate for fire insurance protection."

"It is generally understood," he explained, "that companies are required to set up reserves equal to 50 per cent of the premiums received against losses that are expected to occur.

Method Explained.

"As a rule the State rating boards actually figure that the company should operate with a fair profit on a basis of only 45 per cent of the premium received, allowing 55 per cent available for losses.

"Under the liberal formula of 50 per cent for expected losses the actual experience shown * * * indicates a liberal premium charge over these 12 years should not have exceeded $16,714,767.68, the actual overcharge thereby amounting to $10,276,679.34 during the period.

"Rates are usually calculated on the basis of the previous five-year average, which, if applied to the experience in the District shows a loss ratio of 25.12 per cent, meaning that out of every $100 paid in the District during this period, only $25.12 was required to cover all losses sustained."

Rate Expert Needed.

"These figures undoubtedly indicate that the insurance-paying public is paying an exorbitant rate for fire insurance protection."

Moor pointed out that fire insurance rates are fixed by a central rating bureau for all stock companies, whereas mutual organizations establish their rates separately. In neither case does the department of insurance exercise any supervision.

After citing laws as authority for the opinion that his office "is empowered to go a long way toward the regulation of fire insurance rates," the superintendent suggested that this regulation could not be effective unless information is first developed by a competent rate expert.

Child Health Day Is Set for May 1

May 1 was proclaimed a Child Health Day yesterday by President Roosevelt. His proclamation, coinciding with the twenty-fifth anniversary of the founding of the Children's Bureau, calls on the Nation "to consider and appraise child health conditions and the community organization for child health and to plan for health protection for every child during the coming year.

"I call upon the children," said the President, "to celebrate the gains they have made in health during the year and to lend their aid to the community in its year-round effort to promote the health of the Nation."

D.A.R. Convention Date Is April 19, Not 14

Due to an erroneous report, headquarters of the Daughters of the American Revolution has been flooded this week with inquiries as to the date of the opening of the Forty-sixth Continental Congress. The congress will open on Monday evening, April 19, in Constitution Hall. It will be in session through Friday, April 23.

One published story of recent date erroneously stated the congress would open April 14. With thousands of D. A. R. members ready to trek to Washington and practically all hotel reservations completed, publication of the erroneous date caused confusion.

Five Deaf Girls 'Hear' Appeal For U. S. Aid

Handicapped Children Show Abilities for Senate Group.

"Smile now! Smile for us," urged photographers on all sides, as bulbs flashed to the snap of their cameras. And five pretty little girls who had never heard a sound in all their lives smiled with all their might.

They had come before a Senate sub-committee to prove that with proper training deaf children can learn to talk and "hear." In strange accents of persons whose ears have never recorded human speech, they answered questions put to them by their teacher, Miss Kathleen Noland, of the faculty of the Maryland State School for the Deaf.

They danced, and laughed, and bowed to each other. It was fun—particularly for 8-year-old Joanna Sturgis, whose bright eyes twinkled with merriment through the entire demonstration. Alyce Bean, 8, and Mary Lou Jones, 7, enjoyed it, too; but tiny, dark-haired Fern Spencer, 6, never once smiled. Both she and the other 6-year-old, Virginia Clare, were hard put to it to keep up with "the older girls," it seemed.

Give Demonstration.

A few minutes before, they had sat back in the audience, attentive and wide-eyed, as two pupils from the Maryland State School for the Blind had put on their demonstration in support of a bill proposing Federal appropriation of $11,158,000 to be devoted to education of handicapped children.

Andrew Birmingham, 16, and totally blind, tapped out a few sentences on his Braille writer and then passed them across to small Frances Wright, 8, who fingered the lines quickly and then read them aloud, as a smile dimpled her chubby cheeks. She read from a big book, too—a book printed in dots and filled with fascinating stories all little girls like; and she showed how to write on a Braille slate.

At the beginning of the hearing before Senator Claude Pepper, of Florida, chairman of the Senate sub-committee on education and labor, Dr. John W. Studebaker, U. S. commissioner of education, discussed the need of Federal assistance for educating almost 2,000,000 handicapped children throughout the country.

"These youngsters are not getting a square deal," he declared. "This is because most parents are not faced with the problem of providing educations for handicapped children, and because special educational methods are so expensive. The result is that the Federal Government today is not touching the problem of educating physically handicapped boys and girls."

Many Speak for Bill.

Continuing his comments, Dr. Studebaker reminded the committee, however, that the Budget Bureau has already disapproved of extra appropriations for pending legislation. "Yet, certainly, as soon as its fiscal policy will permit, the Government, in interest of genuine social security, must do something for the education of the handicapped child."

Among others who spoke in support of the bill designed to meet this need were Miss Mary T. Bannerman, National Congress of Parents and Teachers; Miss Betty C. Wright, of Washington, director of the American Society for the Hard of Hearing; Miss Mary E. Church, of Baltimore, secretary of the Maryland League for Crippled Children, and L. I. Watts, of Richmond, president of the American Association of Workers for the Blind.

Sponsored by the International Society for Crippled Children, the bill proposes an outright Federal grant of $40,000 to each State and the District of Columbia, with $9,000,000 in reserve for matching local funds and $500,000 for administration.

Lions' Charity Ball Will Be Tonight

The annual charity ball of the Lions Club will be held tonight at 9 o'clock at the Mayflower Hotel.

Proceeds of the affair, sponsored both by the District group and the Lions' Club, of Silver Spring, Md., will go to finance the charitable enterprises of the two organizations.

Realty Levy Rise Viewed As Thwarted

Collins, Kennedy Agree to Avoid any Boost for District.

District Committeeman Seeks to Put Tax on Landlords.

By James D. Secrest.

Danger of any increase in the $1.50 real estate tax here appeared averted yesterday when Representative Collins, of the House sub-committee on District appropriations and Representative Kennedy, of the House District Committee, reached an agreement after a long discussion.

Both men, discussing the District revenue problems, decided to avoid any increase in the real estate tax and expressed satisfaction over their general accord on the objectives of the inquiry tentatively scheduled to begin next week.

Kennedy, however, is in favor of imposing a tax on excess profits from realty investments. While no bill has been drafted, he said that he is considering a measure to tax landlord's earnings so as to prevent the tax from being passed on to the renter.

Collins, who has already introduced eight local tax measures and is drafting a ninth to be offered next week, told Kennedy that he did not intend to press for enactment of all the tax bills at this session.

Would Relieve Burden.

He explained that his purpose in offering the new bills is to broaden the District tax base so as to relieve the burden on real estate, especially that on small home owners.

The Mississippi Representative told Kennedy that his measures will tap new sources of revenue in imposing taxes on motion picture theaters, corporations, parking lots and insurance companies.

The agreement between Collins, who is chairman of the House sub-committee on District appropriations and Kennedy, chairman of the tax sub-committee of the House District Committee, came just a week after a controversy raised during consideration of the District supply bill.

Will Seek Meeting.

At that time members of the House District Committee waged an intensive battle against legislative riders in the local money bill on the ground that Collins was encroaching on their territory.

Undaunted by his failure to obtain a quorum of the tax sub-committee on Thursday, Kennedy plans to attempt another meeting Tuesday. He predicted that once hearings are started they will move along rapidly because of the large amount of data available on both taxation and governmental reforms.

"We have had enough studies and reports," he declared, "and it's time that recommendations were taking the form of legislation.

He indicated that the sub-committee inquiry will be a study to end studies and will avoid repeating testimony already gathered by previous investigating bodies.

Engineers Discuss Heating Problems

The growing industry of supplying steam from a central generating source for the heating of apartment and office buildings was described last night by D. S. Boyden, president of the American Society of Heating and Ventilating Engineers, at a meeting of the Washington Chapter of the society in Wesley Hall.

His address, entitled "Economic Uses of Purchased Steam," dealt with the various problems of the expanding industry, which annually generates 35,000,000,000 pounds of steam, enough to heat 400 buildings the size of the Empire State Building in New York City. He also described efforts to reclaim and re-use the condensate remaining after the steam has done its work.

Other speakers were E. Holt Gurney, of Toronto, first vice president, and Lieut. Col. W. A. Danielson, chairman of the society's committee on research.

Bette Davis Is At Top Flight In Vivid Drama

"MARKED WOMAN." Warner Brothers picturization of an original screen play by Robert Rossen and Abem Finkel, starring Bette Davis, with Humphrey Bogart, Eduardo Ciannelli, Lola Lane, Isabel Jewell, Jane Bryan, Rosalind Marquis, Mayo Methot, Allen Jenkins, John Litel, Henry O'Neill, Raymond Hatton, William B. Davidson, Kenneth Harlan, Robert Strange, Arthur Aylesworth, John Sheehan, Edwin Stanley and Guy Usher. Directed by Lloyd Bacon. Reviewed Friday afternoon by Mary Harris.

"Marked Woman" is a show with an impact, shall we say, like a sledge hammer. No; that's too weak. The impact of "Marked Woman" is more like a falling skyscraper. It leaves the audience not only thrilled, but breathless.

Though an announcement states that the story and characters are "entirely imaginary," many folks will be struck by a certain general resemblance to the "Lucky" Luciano case. True, the girls are clip joint hostesses and not exactly of the sisterhood of the street, but the same racket methods prevail.

Powerful and high-paced direction is responsible for much of the picture's effect. But a flawless and inspired cast is equally important.

Bette Davis plays as well, we thought a shade better, than she did to win top screen honors in 1935. She gives just the right shadings of madness and viciousness to the "smart girl" who makes her money in the easiest way, but who does a perilous turnabout when her young sister is entangled in the racket. Bette rates a special medal for waiving all claim to good looks in the scene after she is beaten up. Hollow-eyed, bruised, pasty-faced and generally banged about, she looks like something that no self-respecting cat would drag in. But it is a topside bit of make-up and acting in the realistic manner.

Ciannelli Is Perfect "Heavy."

Though Bette rates her star honors, other equally star performances appear. Eduardo Ciannelli (remember him in "Winterset"?) plays the big shot gangster with his own poisonous perfection and realism, hardly to be equaled in Hollywood today. If you have not seen a Ciannelli gangster, well, you just ain't seen no gangsters. Close-mouthed, arrogant, with a suppressed egotism bordering on megalomania, Ciannelli gives a picture not only of criminal actions but of the criminal mind.

Humphrey Bogart, even with the high-test Davis and Ciannelli competition, and in a naturally less colorful part as assistant district attorney, more than holds its own. The answer lies in the sincerity and strength with which Bogart imbues every role.

A group of highly skillful young actresses appear as the luckless night club hostesses. They are Lola Lane, Isabel Jewell, Mayo Methot and Rosalind Marquis. And each and all of them have the proper hard-bitten but good-hearted touch. Jane Bryan is freshly sweet as the young sister and Allen Jenkins gives a few needed laughs.

"Marked Woman" is one that you should mark up on your "must see" list.

Willie Rolls 'Em.

Willie Howard is so funny that he practically rolled the poker-faced Earle orchestra out of their chairs yesterday. A lot of comedians can roll their audiences in the aisles, but the orchestra will maintain demeanors of pained seriousness. That will give you an idea of how good Willie is. His "radio broadcast" of a lesson in French will leave you limp with laughter, especially if you know anything about French, and even if you don't. Another knockout is Willie's impersonation of a radical speaker. Jovial Brother Eugene helps the fun along nobly and there are a couple of other clever people in the act also.

Popular Bert Granoff and Carolyn Henry, pretty as a magazine cover, score again in songs, topping off with a fine rendition of "Can You Remember" from "Maytime." Their associate, Organist Dean Herrick, also does very handsomely.

Smart young fellows are the Three Wyles, dancers. Their soft shoe and tap numbers are enriched by good impersonations and trick makeups.

The Five Jansleys, tumblers, arrayed in satin shirts and white flannels, are as clever as their clothes and perform the practically impossible in the way of high and lofty jumping about.

RKO-Keith's

"HISTORY IS MADE AT NIGHT." Walter Wanger's production of a story by Gene Towne and Graham Baker, starring Jean Arthur and Charles Boyer, supported by Leo Carrillo, Colin Clive and Ivan Lebedeff. Directed by Frank Borzage. Reviewed Friday night, second week, by Sally Stroud.

Jean Arthur occupies a New York park bench again, but not in the gaily-yowling mood she enjoyed with "Mr. Deeds." This time her companion is Paris' best headwaiter, a gentleman known as Paul. They tarry on the bench but briefly, for Jean, or Irene, is telling Paul he is wanted for murder in his native Paris. Bruce, her dog-in-the-manger husband, is the guilty party. He is also guilty of other acts of a heinous nature, for he refuses to give his innocent wife her freedom, preferring to believe her a philandering falsifier.

Certain ingredients on a menu, certain nuances of a tango, definite alikeness tie Jean and Paul together. That they triumph over a despicable husband and the major hazard of their ship's striking an iceberg is to be chalked up in favor of persistent love which admits no defeats.

Leo Carrillo as Chef Caesare is delightful in "History Is Made at Night." Incidentally he indites the rather hodge-podge melange of plot-fixtures with a chance question: "What do you suppose from these?"

Colin Clive, as the husband, is properly neurotic and hateful. Charles Boyer, as Paul, is ideal, having sufficient dignity and charm for any plot. Heroine Arthur is occasionally off-key, but always likable.

You will like this show at RKO-Keith's for a second week. It leaps about a bit, but is never tiresome. And there is always Carrillo.

Nelson B. Bell About The Show Shops

'Song of City' Is a Weak Film Romance of Life in 'Little Italy.'

"SONG OF THE CITY." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of a story and screen play by Michael Fessler with music by Dr. William Axt and lyrics by Gus Kahn, featuring Margaret Lindsay and Jeffrey Dean, with J. Carroll Naish, Nat Pendleton, Maria Shelton, Inez Palange, Charles Judels, Edward Norris, Fay Him and Frank Puglia. Directed by Errol Taggart. Reviewed Friday afternoon at Loew's Capitol Theater.

To the discriminating amusement-seeker with a lust for the lighter things of the theater in his soul—I would not say playgoer—the chief item of interest at Loew's Capitol this week will be Cab Calloway and His Cotton Club Orchestra, assisted by a limited group of clever specialists recruited from Harlem.

BELL.

Calloway, on this visit, seems a little more subdued than usual, although there is still a considerable measure of "hi-de-hi" and "ho-de-ho" in his hour's revue. The nimble maestro dances all over the place, sings lustily and in rather better voice than I have ever heard him and altogether acquits himself in fine fashion. His band is about as it always has been—strident, blaring with brass and chopped into all sorts of broken rhythms.

The stage interval is opened with "Harlem Congo," which is a barbaric composition that has a swing to it, and then Evelyn Keyes comes out to execute a long and intricate tap dance through which she steps with the unerring precision of a Bill Robinson, Eleanor Powell or Sunny O'Dea. Following this syncopated interlude, Cab sings "The Hi-De-Ho Miracle Man," a sequel, in a manner of speaking, to his earlier "hi-de-ho" numbers, with a twist or two added. He then does "I've Got You Under My Skin," perhaps a little better than it ever before has been sung from a local stage.

A Girl With a Voice.

Arvis Andrews next is introduced as a singer who appeared with Calloway and his crew at the Cotton Club in New York. Arvis Andrews is the possessor of a soprano voice with startlingly clear high notes that make her "Copper Colored Man of Mine," medley of old-time ballads and "Good Night, My Love" the high spots of probably the best hour of melody Cab ever has brought to town.

As a sop to the lovers of the "truckin'" type of number, "Pickin'" is offered next, with the indefatigable Calloway singing the song and doing the pickin'—which I suggest you leave to him, instead of trying to do it yourself. Then comes the "sit-down strike" of the orchestra, with the resultant introduction of the Tramp Band of eight tatterdemalions of the washboard and tin washtub variety. These ragged lads produce no melody to speak of, but they do create a deal of comedy and a rhythmic swing that may be relied upon to panic any audience. In the meantime, Cab has done "That Man Is Here Again," with unspoken apologies to Ken Murray's broadcasts. After the sit-down strike is over, the band resumes with "Minnie the Moocher"—inevitable on any Calloway program—and winds up the act in a blaze of glory.

The Picture Limps.

There is, to be sure, a picture on the Capitol screen, too, this week, but it would be my notion that the less said about "Song of the City" the better. The story of this distinctly third-rate subject concerns itself with a young man who refuses to live on the bounty of an heiress and finds himself, in time, in the turbulent waters of San Francisco Bay, into which he has tumbled off a ferry boat in an alcoholic daze. He is rescued by the crew of an Italian fishing smack and taken into the home of the Ramandis, simple Italian folk, with a daughter betrothed to the "big shot" of the native colony.

Angelina has a voice that seems to want cultivation in Milan. Her expedition abroad is financed by Mario, but, while Paul Herrick is aboard his jilted fiancee's yacht, a distress call comes from the liner on which Angelina is a passenger. He dashes to the rescue of the burning ship and saves the daughter of the house that gave him refuge in an hour of acute need. You can write the rest of the ticket for yourself.

Margaret Lindsay Sings.

The piece is staged with some effective atmospheric touches, but acted without that distinguished finesse that customarily adds luster to M.-G.-M. productions. Margaret Lindsay, as Angelina, performs her task well and reveals a singing voice—if it is hers and not "dubbed in"—of which she never before has been suspected. Charles Judels and Inez Palange are well cast as her parents and Nat Pendleton does well enough as Benevenuto, the belligerent older brother. J. Carroll Naish, as the unsuccessful suitor, Mario, and Frank Puglia, as a racketeering waterfront boy, are best in the supporting cast. I am sorry to say that Jeffrey Dean, cast as the romantic hero of the play, is more or less a complete washout in the estimation of this reporter.

"Ready to Serve," an average comedy, co-starring Buster West and Tom Patricola in a subpoena-serving adventure; a Terrytoon comedy, "Bug Carnival;" the Fox Movietone News and Phil Lampkin's Massenet overture augment a feature that runs a very deep last to the Calloway stage show.

Metropolitan

"THE KING AND THE CHORUS GIRL." Warner Brothers picturization of a story by Norman Krasna and Groucho Marx, with music and lyrics by Werner R. Heymann and Ted Koehler, costarring Fernand Gravet and Joan Blondell, with Edward Everett Horton, Mary Nash, Alan Mowbray, Jane Wyman, Luis Alberni, Kenny Baker, Shaw and Lee, Lionel Pape, Leonard Mudie and Adrian Rosely. Produced and directed by Mervyn LeRoy.

It is high time that this engaging subject was booked for a continuation of its downtown popularity. It is one of the most facile of recent screen comedies, with interpolations of tuneful songs and a story that sparkles throughout its length.

Foremost among the various elements of superiority that mark this film is the introduction to American audiences of Fernand Gravet, a young leading man who possesses unusual capabilities and a completely ingratiating personality. Mons. Gravat is truly kingly in bearing, the delivery of his lines and the general deportment that might be expected to characterize royalty. In the other title role, Joan Blondell appears as the chorus girl at the Folies Bergere in Paris, who engages the exiled monarch's attention.

The story, for the full span of its considerable length, is an effervescent recital of what might happen if a bored young sun-dodger, who never sees daylight from one year's end to the next, what with his bottle of brandy and all, should of a sudden go to a show and spy a chorine who struck his fancy. This young American chorus girl, however, proves no easy prey for the regal splendors. She has a mind of her own—uncultivated as it is—and exercises it to the best interests of all concerned.

Important supporting roles are played in a fine comedy spirit by Edward Everett Horton and Mary Nash, who appear as the unofficial guardians of the welfare of their recalcitrant young charge. Alan Mowbray also comes into the picture as a headwaiter, who wields an important part in the life of the former king, Alfred VII, descended from a long line of bibulous ancestors.

The music, what little there is, is tuneful and catchy and the entire film adds up to a diverting hour or so in the theater.

A single-reel subject, devoted to Jacques Fray and His Orchestra, a cartoon comedy in Technicolor, "Chicken a la King" and the full newsreel, featuring the Supreme Court Justices and interior views of the new court building, augment a feature that must take rank with the best light screen comedies of the year.

Headline Stage Bill at Earle

In Hollywood

Hollywood, April 9.—Idol chatter: Martha Raye in full stride has a farmery, hop-over-corn-rows gait. Discovery: All movie singers wear glasses to read and have shrewd business heads. Title for O. O. McIntyre's suggested novel on stooges who have made good (Patsy Kelly, Sid Silvers and more): "From Back-bite to Backbone." Peas from the same pod: Grace Moore and Mae Clarke.

GRACE MOORE.

* * * *

With Virginia Valli and Virginia Field here, seems like the Old Dominion State has moved West. Nobody has more tomboyish fun and frolic than Claudette Colbert in slacks. Nutshell description of Fred Astaire: Rhythmaculate. I fear Richard Arlen's golf is getting him more on sport pages than in tournaments. J. Edward Bromberg's movie villainy brought him a phonograph record of a three-minute hiss from a fan; Bromberg plays it on slight prodding.

* * * *

Add funny sights: Meek Charles Butterworth being mauled by the giant dog which he bought in puppyhood without knowing it was a Dane.

* * * *

What a No-Man's-Land is that row of second-floor dressing rooms for women only at M.-G.-M. Lyda Roberti's description of the general reaction to a highly successful preview of her new comedy, "Mr. (Hal) Roach was happy, and everybody was surprised." Turn about: Marsha Hunt is teaching sister Marjorie dramatics, and Marge is teaching Marsha ballet dancing. Joan Crawford never loses that eager-for-I-don't-know-what look.

* * * *

Next to Garbo, Ronald Colman is the colony's least-seen-in-public star. (And if Greta keeps up her surprise visits to night clubs and previews, she is going to lose her No. 1 recluse title to Colman.) He was telling me the other day of his plan to travel around the world again. "Didn't you see enough on the first circle?" I asked.

* * * *

"A motion-picture celebrity," Ronnie replied, "must always plan two trips. The first time, the world sees the star. The second time, if luck is running, the star may see the world."

* * * *

Hollywood's pet story of the moment concerns an independent producer who operates on pin money. It is his habit to employ an expensive star, rush the picture to completion, and cut costs to the marrow. During his most recent production, the high-priced star failed to arrive for a 9 o'clock call. The frantic producer seized a telephone. The star said he had worked late the night before and had overslept. He was sorry and would be at the studio within an hour.

The producer hung up and walked to the set. There he took one look at the 35 people engaged by the hour, and suddenly inspired, called: "Time out for lunch!"

Palace

"MAYTIME." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of the operetta by Sigmund Romberg and Rida Johnson Young, adapted to the screen by Noel Langley, costarring Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy, with John Barrymore, Herman Bing, Tom Brown, Lynne Carver, Rafaelo Ottiano, Charles Judels, Paul Porcasi, Sigmund Rumann, Walter Kingsford and Guy Bates Post. Directed by Robert Z. Leonard. Reviewed Friday afternoon, third week, by Mary Harris.

The way that "Maytime" clicks with audiences lends color to the report that it will be May time by the calendar before "Maytime" leaves the Palace.

Already conceded to be one of the greatest successes of the year, this latest and best of the Nelson Eddy-Jeannette MacDonald string of successes is a top-flight example of a great musical show that presents irresistible appeal to every element that makes up an audience. Highbrows, lowbrows, morons and professors, bachelor maids of uncertain age and seminary girls—everybody goes for "Maytime." More remarkable is this when you consider that the production makes no concessions to undeveloped musical tastes, but offers large gobs of such musical caviare as Tschaikovsky, along with the popular and ever-loved "Carry Me Back to Old Virginny" and "Will You Remember."

Undoubtedly, a great factor in the "Maytime" appeal, aside from gorgeous music, excellent acting and direction and opulent production, is its sentiment and romance. For "Maytime" has genuine sentiment and authentic romance as distinguished from the pure tosh and mere lovemaking that pervade too many current celluloids.

Not only are Jeannette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy both in finer voice than ever before in this picture, but both stars show great development in acting. Miss MacDonald adds dextrous characterization to her familiar sparkling charm. Nelson Eddy completely downs those critics who have accused him of stiffness by turning in a performance that properly mirrors moods of lightness and tragedy.

'On the Avenue,' Powell and Lots of Music, Still Popular.

"ON THE AVENUE." Twentieth Century-Fox picturization of a story by Gene Markey and William Counselman, starring Dick Powell and Madeleine Carroll, supported by Alice Faye, the Ritz Brothers, George Barbier, Cora Witherspoon and Alan Mowbray. Music by Irving Berlin. Directed by Roy Del Ruth. Reviewed Friday night, repeat engagement, by Dorothea Lewis.

This gay musical is packing them in for the third week on our entertainment avenue and rightly so.

It is one of the sprightliest and speediest of its kind and the Irving Berlin score is really tops, hummable feet-tappable; almost had us whistling.

One of the nicest things about the picture is the way that its big musical show (certainly it has a backstage angle and a show within a show, but we'll bet you won't mind) is mixed in with the story and given to you in bits, instead of all at once in a tremendous gob of super-entertainment, slowing everything up. What's more, there isn't a single shot from above, revealing a welter of chorus girls and waving legs forming strange shapes. Honestly, every number that is supposed to take place on a stage could be housed in a Broadway theater, provided it had a few movable and revolving platforms.

The tale, which is fun from start to finish, concerns Gary Blake, musical comedy star, and Mimi Caraway, the richest girl in America. Boy meets girl, or rather, in this case, girl slaps boy upon their first meeting. They fall in love on second sight, out on third, and spend the rest of the time making up and blowing up, aided and abetted by a would-be girl friend of Gary and an amazing aunt of Mimi.

Dick Powell is in elegant voice, and, save for a few coy moments, excellent as Gary. Madeleine Carroll is devastatingly beautiful but a little shrill as Mimi. We liked Alice Faye better and loved her husky voice. Alan Mowbray, Cora Witherspoon, George Barbier and the Ritz Brothers also contribute.

Interesting subsidiaries include a Pete Smith reel on "Dexterity;" a Paramount Pictorial, featuring Brownie and Blackie, two impetuous and impudent bear cubs who have an hilarious time falling into milk cans, and the M.-G.-M. newsreel reminding us of war horrors 20 years ago and pleading for peace today. It's a grand show.

Wardman Park

Frank Parker, diseur, evoked much applause with his character studies and narrative poems in a program presented for the Principia Alumni of Illinois. Utilizing dramatic incident, episodic pantomime and song-and-dance characterization, he presented a wide variety of impressions.

In the bits where he wore masks from Paris and Vienna, he obtained his best effects, though some of his other mimicry was little short of superb. Ranging from the dramatic to the absurd, Mr. Parker proved his right to the superlatives which the press in London, Paris, New York and Chicago have lavished upon his work. The sketches, written by the actor, were backgrounded with music by Miss Ruth Gordon.

Were a criticism permitted, it would be that too much reliance is placed upon costuming and lighting. Miss Cornelia Otis Skinner, for instance, would have created identical effects with much less effort. Or is their work not comparable?

Mr. Parker performs with a good deal of authoritative poise, but he really should do something about those intolerable pauses between his individual acts.

'Marriage Clause' Abolition Sought In McKellar Bill

Senator McKellar (Democrat), of Tennessee, who recently introduced a bill to repeal Section 213 of the economy act, known as the "marriage clause," yesterday offered a new bill designed to obtain the same result by a different method.

The new measure seeks to amend a civil service act of 1883 by providing:

"In any reduction of personnel in any branch or service of the United States or District of Columbia governments and in the appointment of persons to the classified civil service, no person shall be discriminated against or given any preference because of the marital status of such person or because the husband or wife of such person is in the service of the United States or the District of Columbia."

The bill was referred to the Senate Civil Service Committee and Senator McKellar said he will ask for early consideration. The prior bill was referred to the Senate Appropriations Committee.

NOEL COWARD— Gertrude Lawrence, who just vacationed in Atlantic City, is greatly relieved now. She walked out of the Ambassador lobby onto the boardwalk—and was amazed. Practical-joking friends had assured Miss Lawrence that the Atlantic City boardwalk was glass inclosed . . . GEORGE ABBOTT: Frankie Albertson, your star in "Brother Rat," was asked to help in the tryout of a young actress auditioning for a role in a road edition of that play. Albertson was asked to play opposite her in one scene to ease her nervousness. The young lady recited the script perfectly. Albertson, however, muffed his lines.

MERT WERTHEIMER: Harry Richman is negotiating now for the purchase of the Beach and Tennis Club in Miami Beach. In that case, he will reopen it next year as the Club Richman.

* * * *

PHILLIPS HOLMES: If you still want to spend so much time with Libby Holman this summer, be prepared for a farmer's life. Libby will emote in serious roles for two summer stock companies this year.

* * * *

* * * *

HARRY WARREN: Al Dubin, your song-writing partner, is somewhat amazed at the success which has come to both of you. Al says he never realized he had insomnia—until he bought a home and finally had a place to sleep.

* * * *

WILLIAM ANTHONY McGUIRE: With the death this week of Mrs. Frieda Spyropolous, the original "Little Egypt" hula dancer of the Chicago World's Fair of 1893, her suit against M.-G-M. will be terminated. She had sued as a result of the "Little Egypt" characterization in the movie, "The Great Ziegfeld."

EMPEROR HIROHITO: Jay Faggen, press-agent proprietor of the Harlem Uproar House, thought he'd take a chance for a front-page story by inviting your brother, Prince Chichibu, to visit his cafe. Faggen phoned the Pierre, contacted the royal suite, and kept repeating "Harlem Uproar House" . . . "I'm sorry," he was told, "but the Prince isn't visiting any foreign consulates this trip!"

* * * *

DOROTHY PARKER: Your dog swallowed a butter knife last night! . . . Paul Muni: Willie Howard's contribution to "Broadway Melody of 1937" will be a burlesque of your role in "The Good Earth" . . . Jack Johnson: A mutual friend asked me to write about your appearance at the Flea Circus here and to report that you were earning $800 a week. As a result, a theatrical agent, who read the item, is preparing suit against you—for $80 a week commission! . . . Bill Hardey: Your Gay Nineties Cafe, which has been the haven for veterans like Yvette Rugel, Eddie Leonard, the Cherry Sisters and John Settle, for a change has brought a new star. Rudy Mattison, your tenor, has been signed for the St. Louis Opera Co. this summer.

Contract Bridge

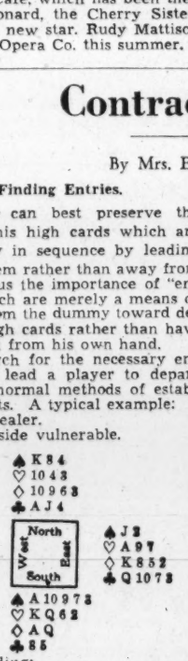
By Mrs. Ely Culbertson.

Finding Entries.

Declarer can best preserve the value of his high cards which are not solidly in sequence by leading toward them rather than away from them. Thus the importance of "entries," which are merely a means of leading from the dummy toward declarer's high cards rather than having to lead from his own hand.

The search for the necessary entries may lead a player to depart from the normal methods of establishing suits. A typical example:

North, dealer.
Neither side vulnerable.



The bidding:

North	East	South	West
Pass	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
2 ♠	Pass	3 ♡	Pass
3 N T	Pass	4 ♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

South's bidding was a trifle on the optimistic side but not unduly so. His choice between the final contract of three notrump and that of four spades was based largely on the fact that he was a much better player than his partner.

West opened the deuce of clubs, and declarer considered his problems. He was bound to lose a club, a heart and a trump. In order to avoid the loss of a diamond and a second heart trick, however, he would have to lead three times from the dummy. The heart suit would require two leads, since South could not reasonably expect to make the contract unless East had the Ace of hearts—and that player would not play the Ace the first time the suit was led; and the third entry was needed for the diamond finesse.

With three entries needed, declarer could see at first only two in the dummy—the Ace of clubs and the King of spades. After some thought, however, he saw a chance for a third entry and proceeded to play the hand on the assumption that that chance would actually materialize.

He won the opening lead with dummy's Ace of clubs, and led a low heart from dummy. East played low, and South's King held the trick. Next, he led the ten of spades. West played low, dummy ducked, and East won with the Jack. East continued the clubs, and South trumped the third round with the nine of spades. The three of spades was then led, and dummy's eight-spot finessed. When this held, the declarer was assured of the necessary extra entry.

A diamond was led from dummy for the finesse of the Queen. This succeeded, and the seven of spades was led to dummy's King. Another heart lead from dummy gave South his contract.

Georgetown Beats Harvard, 16 to 15, in Ten Innings

Petroskey, Ferrara Star In Slugfest

Georgetown defeated Harvard, 16 to 15, in a ten-inning game featured by the relief pitching of Mike Petroskey and hard hitting on both sides.

At the end of the ninth inning the score stood stalemated at 11-all. Harvard scored four runs in the first half of the tenth and Georgetown bounced back in their portion of this inning with five runs which clinched the victory.

Nicketakis Yanked.

Nick Nicketakis, Georgetown's ace southpaw pitcher, started. He allowed seven runs and seven hits in four innings before being yanked.

Nick gave way to Petroskey, who pitched a brilliant game considering weather conditions. The game was played through a steady drizzle in ankle-deep mud which made fielding very difficult unless the ball was hit directly to the retriever.

Following a see-saw nine innings, Harvard came to bat in the crucial tenth. First Baseman Lupien struck out and Shortstop Bilodeau walked. Owen, Harvard's third baseman, knocked a high fly to Smitty Nau in leftfield. Under ordinary circumstances, Nau would have been able to connect, but he became mired in the mud and just barely touched the ball with his glove. It was Nau's first error in two years of varsity and one year of freshman play for the Hoyas.

Bad Bounce Helps.

With Nau's error, Bilodeau moved to third and Owen to second. Centerfielder McTernen was purposely passed to set the stage for a double play. Petroskey fanned Rightfielder Sullivan and Leftfielder Grondahl hit a hot grounder to Tommy Keating, the Hoya shortstop.

The grounder should have been an easy out, but a bad bounce sent the ball over Tommy's shoulder and two runs came galloping across the plate. Catcher Doyle, the next Harvard batsman up, singled to leftfield, scoring McTernen and Grondahl to give the Crimson the four-run lead it boasted briefly.

Jap, Anzac Davis Cup Stars Arrive

San Francisco, April 9 (AP).—Tennis stars from Japan and Australia reached North America today in quest of the Davis Cup—their hopes buoyed by abdication of Fred Perry, of England, as amateur king.

The three Nipponese aces, Jiro Yamagishi, Fumitero Nokano and Hideo Nishimura, expressed confidence they will eliminate the United States in zone matches here April 30, May 1 and 2.

New Kansas Coach.

Albuquerque, N. Mex., April 9 (AP).—Employment of Gwinn Henry, athletics director at the University of New Mexico, to the same position at the University of Kansas was announced today. Henry formerly coached football at the University of Missouri.

Taft Wright Released To Nationals' Farm

By Shirley Povich,
A Staff Correspondent.

Chattanooga, Tenn., April 9.—Cold and dismal today in Chattanooga, but for a pair of Washington baseball athletes there was a tolerable substitute for sunshine, birds were surely singing in the trees and life was nearly at its best.

Outfielders Freddie Sington and Jesse Hill were treading with a lighter step, breathing in longer draughts and finding the world a better place to live in. Weeks of anxiety and fretting were at an end.

Because Outfielder Taft Wright this afternoon was released to the Nats' Chattanooga farm by Manager Bucky Harris.

Therein, the big, leonine-looking Sington and fleet trim Hill found deliverance from their fears. Because Chattanooga has loomed as the jumping-off place for one or the other. It was to be either Wright, Sington or Hill who was to be lopped off the Washington squad today, and Manager Harris had been giving no hint which one it would be.

Sington wouldn't have taken the rap. Fully determined to quit baseball unless he was retained in the major leagues this season, he wants no more of the minors, with their second-class fare, their stodgy hotels and their night ball. He was the holder of a Phi Beta Kappa key from the University of Alabama and he could make a living otherwise, he reasoned.

Ready to Squawk.

Hill was prepared to squawk too. He had hit .300 last season with the Nats and held a lucrative teaching job with California High Schools. He would continue to play big league baseball but he wouldn't go back to the minors at a cut in salary.

And so it was Wright. But there had been great doubt that it would be the short but husky reserve outfielder. In the battle that was developing among Sington, Hill and Wright for the two reserve outfield jobs on the Washington Club since Al Simmons had been installed in a regular post Wright had been a serious contender.

In fact, the rotund Wright had outshone both Sington and Hill with his cleven work in the outfield and promise of his hitting power. Sington had been a woeful disappointment at bat, was shaky in the outfield in exhibition games and was apparently wasting the opportunity to fit into the Nats' regular outfield. Hill, faster than both Sington and Wright, represented no great power at the plate, but, like Sington, had the redeeming feature of being a right-handed hitter. That he was a left-hander was Wright's chief sin. The Nats are overburdened with left-handed hitters.

Sent On Option.

Wright found balm in his release when Manager Harris announced that he was being left here on option of recall by the Nats on 24 hours' notice.

Tomorrow is expected to bring the announcement that Pitcher Jack Salveson has parted company with the Nats. Harris and Owner Clark Griffith tonight were debating the advisability of releasing him to Chattanooga.

Salveson has been the chief disappointment on the Washington Club. The every appearance of the big right-hander on the mound has been greeted by a barrage of enemy base hits.

His release to Chattanooga would close a dismal chapter in Griffith's history as a trader. The Nats' owner gave up the veteran Earl Whitehill in an even swap for Salveson last winter on the strength of Salveson's 21 victories in the Pacific Coast League.

Phoebus Is Ready.

Should he release Salveson, as he has been indicating, Manager Harris is expected to recall Pitcher Bill Phoebus, of the Chattanooga Club. Phoebus has been suffering from influenza since his release by the Nats a month ago, but the chunky right-hander looms as the best hurler on the Chattanooga staff.

The Nats' scheduled game with Chattanooga here today was called off on account of cold, wet grounds and no crowd. Thus this is a typical Chattanooga lay-over. In six days spent here by the Nats during the past two springs, they have been unable to play a game.

The Nats are also scheduled to play Chattanooga tomorrow and Sunday. Buck Newsom and Monte Weaver will share tomorrow's pitching duties and Newsom then will rest until Tuesday when he will attempt to go the nine-innings route against the Boston Bees at Gastonia, N. C., home of Buddy Lewis.

Clark Griffith was scheduled to address Chattanooga fans over the radio late tonight. Following is a brief transcript of his talk (or I'm sadly mistaken):

"I am going to put a pennant-winning ball team in Chattanooga this season and you fans will be proud of it. The Washington Club will spare no expense to give Chattanooga the kind of baseball it deserves. I want you to know, etc."

Potomac Boat Club Re-elects Herman

George A. Herman, for 37 years a member of the Potomac Boat Club, has been re-elected its president at its sixty-eighth business meeting. Other officers elected included Charles Eisenstein, vice president; Jerry Lawler, secretary; James W. Burch, treasurer. William Belt, Ed Warren, Ernie Millar, Cliff Cox and Elmore McKay were named to the board of governors.

Dave Knox was named captain in charge of rowing; Rudolph Kauffman, first lieutenant, and George Shorb, second lieutenant. The float committee has completed resetting of the floats and runways. President Herman has called a meeting for tomorrow to make final plans for a stag party, to be held Friday at the clubhouse.

Michigan's Swimmers Set Record

Higgins Is 220 Breast Stroke Victor; Hutter Takes Freestyle.

By the United Press.

New Haven, Conn., April 9.—Michigan's Wolverines created a world record tonight as they won the 400-yard relay title and forged into the lead for the team championship on the second night of competition in the National A. A. U. tourney in Yale's Payne Whitney Pool.

The Midwestern swimmers, champions of the National Collegiate A. A. this year, added the amateur title by going the distance in 3:31.4, to cap a night that saw Johnny Higgins, Ohio State freshman from Providence, score a "double" by retaining his 220-yard breast-stroke title, while Charley Hutter, of Harvard, became the 220-yard freestyle titleholder.

Michigan won by a shade in a stretch duel with the New York Athletic Club, winners last year, and shattered the American mark of 3:31.6 set a year ago by the defenders. The Wolverines' mark automatically became a world record because the international board last summer agreed to recognize the distance in world competition.

The 10 points picked up by Michigan's quartet—Waldemar Tomski, Tom Haynie, Ed Kirar and Bob Mowerson—boosted them into the lead for team honors with 17 points. Chicago's Lake Shore Athletic Club, winner last year, was in second place at the end of 7 of 10 championship events in the 3-day meet with 14. Harvard, thanks to 5 points picked up by Hutter tonight, moved into third with 12, while the New York A. C. was fourth with 11.

The men from Michigan created the first record the meet had seen. On the first 100 yards, N. Y. A. C. and Michigan battled neck and neck and were still level when the second men—Harry Williams for New York and Haynie for Michigan—got away. Williams put the N. Y. A. C. into a slight lead at the end of his leg but on the third, Ed Kirar, N. C. A. A., 50 and 100 yard champion, put Michigan at least 8 feet out in front as he swam against William Giesen. On the last lap it was Peter Fick, of New York, national 100-yard champion, against Mowerson.

Fick swam the last leg under 52 seconds, but he could not make up those entire 8 feet and lost the race by a touch. Yale was third by a shade over Harvard. The Olneyville Boys Club of Providence, was fifth and last.

Hutter, Harvard's captain-elect and member of the United States Olympic team in 1936, succeeded Jack Medica as 220-yard free style champion.

Coming from behind to overtake Adolph Kiefer, the flying fish of the Lake Shore A. C., Chicago, Hutter power-housed his way through the final 100 yards to top the Western backstroke specialist by 3 feet. Hutter's time was 2:11.2, compared to Medica's world record of 2:07.9. The 1936 champion was unable to defend his title as he is touring Australia.

Deb? No, Lady Wrestler

83-Year-Old Hopeful Enters 26-Mile Run

Boston, April 9 (U.P.).—Despite an official ban, 83 year-old Peter W. Foley, of Winchester, today said he planned to compete in the 26-mile annual Boston A. A. marathon April 19. Foley plans to start at 10 a. m.—two hours before the field. "I can run 15 miles anyway," he said. "They don't give an old man credit, but I'll show them something."

Matwomen To Provide Fun Tonight

'Lightweight Champion' One of Principals in Hair-Pulling Bout.

Legion to Benefit From Lady Wrestling Debut in Arena Card.

Some time tonight there should be an ominous rumble in the earth that will develop palsy in practically all the seismographs in the world. It won't be caused by an earthquake, but by thousands of deceased wrestlers revolving rapidly in their graves at the thought of such goings-on as will be taking place at Turner's Arena.

Milos of Crotone, Frank Gotch and other former mat greats undoubtedly will turn over in their graves at the thought of such things as bouts between lady wrestlers, and Clara Mortensen, who claims to be the women's lightweight wrestling champion, will be having it out with one Clarice Davis at Turner's.

The whole business, which marks the debut in the Capital of female grapplers, has been arranged for the benefit of the American Legion, which will receive a portion of the receipts to buy uniforms for the Legion's Junior Baseball League players.

Supporting the female hair-pullers will be a flock of sturdy grapplers of the opposite sex.

Laverne Baxter, the big bad burper from North Carolina, will find himself pitted against Floyd Marshall in the principal men's bout, which will play second fiddle to the Mortensen-Davis affair.

In other bouts, Jack Hader, who roughed up Ed Meske just last Thursday night, will tangle with Ernie Powers; Jim Coffield will meet Bob Roberts and Bill Lewis, the overstuffed bewhiskered gent from Richmond, will take on Gabriel Ganuso.

Clara Mortensen was trained by Ray Steele, who is a title claimant. She has been wrestling since she was 14 and has had more than 200 bouts. She has defeated such female experts as Dot Lee, Betty Blondell, Dolly Dalton, Dot Apollo, Virginia Holmes, Molly Burke, Heen Carter and others.

Increase in Salary Reported for Star

'Big Poison' Is Last of Holdouts, Signs While Pirates Start Trek East From California Camp; Had Great Season in 1936.

By the Associated Press.

Dallas, April 9.—Paul (Big Poison) Waner, National League hitting king, ended his prolonged holdout today and scratched his name to a Pittsburgh Pirate contract for the twelfth consecutive year.

Waner was somewhere in Dallas when he had his change of heart, but no amount of sleuthing could track down the veteran outfielder.

From Longview, Tex., where the Pirates were playing an exhibition game, President Bill Benswanger confirmed the report.

"Paul signed today, all right," said Benswanger in a telephone conversation. "I just talked to him in Dallas. Where is he? Why, I don't know. I just assumed he was stopping at the hotel where we planned to stay Sunday."

Hotel clerks the city over said they hadn't seen Waner.

Increase Reported.

Benswanger said the contract represented "a nice increase" over last year's salary, but that no bonus was attached.

"We don't put bonus riders on our contract," he explained. Waner signed for the original contract offered and will join the club tomorrow at Fort Worth for an exhibition."

Yesterday, at Memphis, Waner told newsmen he had not received an increase. His Memphis statement:

"Last year I signed a contract with a $1,000 cut on the understanding I'd get the money back if I had a good year. Well, I had one of my best years and the Pirates did, too, and I didn't get the bonus. When Benswanger sent me my contract this year he inclosed the check. I didn't sign and I didn't cash it."

Led the League.

Waner had one of his greatest years at the plate in 1936. On 585 trips he banged 218 hits, including 53 doubles, for a final average of .373—6 percentage points better than Brooklyn's Gordon Phelps. It was the third time "Big Poison" had paced the league. He belted across 94 runs.

Only Charles (Red) Ruffing, New York Yankee hurler, remains among the major league's "big shot" holdouts.

Benswanger said he is confident Waner is in good physical condition and would be ready to play immediately. The little gardener has been working out with various clubs, once teaming up with Diz Dean in a dual "holdout workout" with the Boston Bees.

PAUL WANER.

One Hit by Feller Result of Slow Ball

Helena, Ark., April 9 (AP).—Bob Feller, Cleveland's schoolboy pitching sensation, blamed "an experimental slow ball anybody could have hit" today for the only safety registered against his speed delivery in 15 innings of exhibition baseball this year.

Stopping here with the Indians for their tilt with the New York Giants, Feller admitted he felt like he was in for a big year on the mound.

Second Baseman Donkey Dean, of New Orleans, claimed the only safety against the 18-year-old hurler. Feller pitched four innings against the Southern Association entry recently. The Giants have failed to score a hit against him in 11 innings, while he was fanning 16.

Aneroid Beats Sunned by Head in Bowie Feature Race Duel

Bounding's Win Worth $24 in 3d

Daily Double Returns $112 on Graceful Flight, Bounding.

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Bowie, Md., April 9.—Aneroid, owned by J. A. Mancuso, of Washington, D. C., came out of winter retirement to take a head decision from Sunned, the property of Mrs. B. F. Christmas, of Upper Marlboro, Md., in the running of the Severn Handicap, today's six-furlong feature race. Five lengths behind in a thrilling battle for first money, came Master Lad to be third ahead of a pair of "also rans," Vote Boy and Good Omen.

Aneroid, a courageous son of The Porter, spotted his rivals from 14 to 23 pounds and ran the route in 1:14 1-5, excellent time over a track that was sloppy from last night's rain. He was well backed and returned $5.90 for each $2 investment.

The day was not an ideal one for the sport. The dark clouds frowned all afternoon and intermittently the mist turned to rain. To those who played the 4-and-7 combination in the daily double, the day was a success, for Graceful Flight and Bounding teamed to bring a $112.90 mutuel. There were 116 in the crowd of 6,000 who guessed right.

Aneroid did not break well in the feature, but once under way proved a prominent factor. Good Owen, the lightweight of the group, took the early lead, accompaned by Vote Boy.

Approaching the stretch, Aneroid began to move up on the outside, but in the meanwhile Sunned had taken a brief lead. The two then hooked up in a duel that lasted to the wire. Master Lad, heavily played, made a nice move nearing the final bend but ran out and lost whatever chance he had.

Graceful Flight, sired by Flying Ebony and foaled by Her Grace, a pair of prominent ones in their racing days, made good at the first asking in the opening dash for maidens. Graceful Flight, owned by Ral Parr, Maryland sportsman, was much the best and toyed with her field to defeat, among others, Black Boo and Trostar. Her good trials made her a favorite with the betters and she paid a $3.80 mutuel. Her time was 1:15 3-5, creditable over the bad track.

The second odds-on favorite of the day scored in the second race when Smoke Signal outclassed six other maiden juveniles over the four-furlong route. The Transmute colt, second in the Kindergarten Stakes did not break well, but was 1... front before the stretch was reached and drew away to win by eight lengths. Legal Light was second and Way Out was third. The winner paid $3.10 and was clocked in 0:49. .

The parade of favorites was stopped abruptly in the third race when Bounding, a 12-to-1 shot, ridden by H. Lindberg, surprised with a length victory over Sunline, with Pomposity third. Sunline probably was the best horse in the field, being practically left at the post. Bounding paid a $24.40 mutuel and stepped the six furlongs in 1:16 3-5.

Trial Sought On Trainer's Doping Ban

By the Associated Press.

Miami, Fla., April 9.—Bert S. Michell, ruled off the turf on a charge that a horse he trained was stimulated artificially, moved for a hearing today while his attorney and his employer voiced suspicion the case was a frameup.

Attorney Dan Chappell, a friend of the noted trainer, who said "Bert doesn't have to retain me," announced he would request a hearing before the State Racing Commission, probably early next week. Secretary Parks Glover indicated it would be granted.

Chappell charged that persons he did not identify made several attempts to extort money from Emil Denemark, wealthy Chicagoan whose wife's stable Michell trained with phenomenal success here, on threats to "get" the trainer and the contract jockey, Charley Kurtsinger.

"We want to get the facts," the attorney said. "If Michell was framed, we want to know that."

Mistake or Frameup.

Denemark, in Chicago, said the matter was "either a mistake or a frameup." Meanwhile he appointed his breeding farm foreman, June Johnson, as trainer "until we get this mess straightened out." Johnson also will train the stable of Elmer Dale Shaffer, of Chicago, which Michell had been saddling.

The commission issued the suspension order, which bars Michell from every race track in this country and Canada, without hearing from him. It acted on a report from the Central Saliva Testing Bureau in New York that a sample from Mrs. Denemark's 3-year-old All Round showed the filly had been stimulated for the third race at Tropical Park March 23, in which it finished eighth in a field of 12.

Charge Ridiculous.

"I watched the saliva test the day All Round acted so queerly at Tropical Park," Denemark said. "The result then was negative. The filly always has been high strung. We are not going to stop until we get this mess straightened out."

Chappell quoted Michell as telling him the charge was "the most ridiculous thing in the world."

"He said if he was going to go in for that sort of thing he certainly wouldn't do it with that horse," Chappell said. "All Round was the joke of the stable."

At The Post

WITH BILL BENNINGS

Dear Al: Selections at Bowie.

Bert Michell, the trainer for the Denemark Stables, is in trouble as the result of Florida racing. They say that Michell stimulated a horse, or indicated as much by ruling him off. The whole thing doesn't seem to add up in my book. The horse that was "helped" was All Round, a maiden and a 31-1 shot that ran eighth. At those odds, the heavy money hardly was bet. Stack this up against the fact that Michell's horses have won some 40 races this year and dominated the Maryland season last fall and I believe we have something. Michell's winners have been to the saliva test time and again. Doubtless there were many persons who were jealous of his success. Therefore, Michell's winners must have been examined even more closely than others. If they passed, isn't that evidence that they were not "helped?" Michell has 30 years of training behind him and until yesterday had never been in trouble. Here's a story I got from a veteran stableman. He said that in one of the biggest races in this country the winner was stimulated without the knowledge of either owner or trainer. On the morning of the race, the horse was worked out and would hardly get out of a gallop. The trainer was disappointed and the owner felt that he would be disgraced in the afternoon. A stableman decided to do something, so he put a quart of applejack in a bucket of water and gave it to the horse just before he went to the paddock. The horse won easily. Clocker Mike was reported to have been seen chopping wood outside a Richmond lunchroom yesterday—and Mike isn't training for a fight. BILL.

Newsom, Lookouts in a Feud And All Set to Fight Today

Chattanooga, Tenn., April 9.—Threats have been hurled and a smouldering feud between Buck Newsom, Washington pitcher, and members of the Chattanooga ball team may break into open flame tomorrow when the two teams take the field here.

The entire Chattanooga team, which is a part of the Nats' farm system and thus draws its pay from Clark Griffith, is hopping mad over big Newsom's alleged attempts to "dust them off" at the plate last week in Sanford, Fla.

Bobby Estalella, the squat, husky Cuban, who was forced to hit the dirt twice when Newsom's pitches buzzed perilously close to his head, was, in his broken English, outspoken about Newsom tonight.

He had learned that Newsom is scheduled to pitch tomorrow, he be careful," said Estalella. "Eef he peetch close to my head, I t'row my bat down and punch heem. I keel heem, dat beeg bum. He try to bean me in Sanford. He t'row at my head too many times."

Young Jimmy Wasdell, the Chattanooga first baseman, who was also forced to duck frequently against Newsom's pitching, is also up in arms.

"Let that Newsom throw another one close to my head tomorrow and he'll never throw another one close to anybody else's head. That bat of mine is going to fly out of my hands, and it may not be accidental. I had my jaw broken by a baseball and was out for six weeks last year. I don't want any more funny business from that big bum after what he did to us at Sanford."

Newsom uttered a loud "humph" when word reached him that the Chattanoogans were laying for him.

"Just for that, I'll probably make a few of 'em hit the dirt—just for the fun of it," he said. "And if they come out there to the pitcher's mound, I'll lick any two of 'em.

"And if they bring a bat out there with 'em, just don't let 'em forget that I'll still have a bat in my hand. I'll turn it loose at 'em the minute they start to make a move.

"That Estalella, why, I'd slap him down with my open hand. I'm gonna be out there pitching my kind of game. If they don't like 'em close, they'd better look out. That's what they call this Chattanooga team—Lookouts. Well, they'd better."

Prep School Match Play Starts Today

Firmly installed as favorite after his record-tying medal score of 66, Buddy Sharkey, defending champion, leads 15 other prep school linksmen into the match play rounds of the eighth annual Georgetown Prep invitation tournament at Garret Park today.

Buddy Bowie, representing St. Alban's, looks as the most serious threat to end Sharkey's two-year reign. The former Columbia Country Club star, now a member of Indian Spring, tied Dick Meyer for second medal honors with a 73, including several bad holes. If favorites win, Bowie and Meyer will meet in the second round.

In the lower bracket, Dick Canning, host school ace, looms as the semifinal opponent for Sharkey, with Charlie Clarke, of St. John's, in the role of dark horse.

The R. Harris Trophy for the team match crown is anybody's title, with Gonzaga, St. John's, and Georgetown Prep in the running. The Little Hoya's qualified five men for match play.

Pairings and starting times:

10:30, Buddy Bowie (St. Alban's) vs. Buddy Titus (Georgetown Prep); 10:35, Don Sullivan (St. John's) vs. Don Quinn (Gonzaga); 10:40, Dick Meyer (St. John's) vs. Jack Dettweiler (Georgetown Prep); 10:45, Elwood Berkeley (Landon) vs. George Rehkoff (St. John's); 10:50, Billy Heimbaugh (Georgetown Prep) vs. Frank Dunham (Landon); 10:55, Dick Canning (Georgetown Prep) vs. Phil Regan (St. John's); 11:00, Charles Clark (St. Johns) vs. Ralph Botton (Devitt); 11:05, Fred Guttenplan (Devitt) vs. Buddy Sharkey (Gonzaga).

Battle Due in Bowie Finale

Bowie, Md., April 9.—A vestpocket field of seven, barring scratches, will face the barrier here tomorrow in the annual running of the Southern Maryland Handicap, outstanding event of the meeting and the closing-day feature. While in numbers the field is disappointing, the distribution of weight seems to point to an interesting struggle.

E. K. Bryson's Calumet Dick, carrying top weight of 121 pounds, is the probable favorite as the result of his smashing victory here last week. He is expected to get much contention, if not a beating, from th three-horse Araho Stable entry. The New England owned establishment will have New Deal and Mucho Gusto as its chief reliances, with Jackie D., one that appears a trifle outclassed, tossed in for good measure.

A. C. Compton's Weston, trained by Guy Bedwell, will draw a share of the backers despite a recent ordinary race. He has worked well for this event. Quincy, fourth in th Louisiana Derby at New Orleans last winter, gets in with only 98 pounds and has a good clockers' report. Kenty, the other contestant, probably will be the real longshot of the field.

June Johnson, for many years stable foreman under Bert Michell, will succeed his former boss as trainer of the Denemark Stable horses, it was announced yesterday. Michell is under suspension by the Florida racing solons on doping charges and that State has a working agreement with Maryland.

While Johnson hasn't a Maryland trainer's license, he is eligible and it is expected that the Denemark horses, now at Havre de Grace awaiting the opening there on Monday, will swing into action under his guidance.

Jervis Spencer, of the Maryland Racing Comission, said yesterday that Michell would not be allowed in the vicinity of the Denemark Stables as long as the Florida ban was upheld.

Triple Action, courageous son of Canter, will not be shipped to Louisville for the Kentucky Derby, his owner, J. W. Y. Martin, announced yesterday. Martin explained it was not because he did not believe Triple Action of Derby caliber that he was withdrawing his entry but that the colt was not far enough advanced in training at this stage to cope with some of the better conditioned horses.

Martin plans to race Triple Action in the Chesapeake at Havre de Grace and then send him out for the Preakness at Pimlico.

Triple Action joins Betty's Buddy, Airflame and Victorian Star which have been eliminated recently, among the Maryland hopefuls. The Free State now looks to Tedious, Pompoon and Grand Play for a possible Derby victory.

Turf notes—Trainer Willie Shea shipped Merrymaker, his Derby candidate, to Havre de Grace this morning where the colt will start in the Chesapeake . . . Shea is reported to have wagered $20 against $2,000 in the winter books that Merrymaker takes the Kentucky classic . . . Zebulo was scratched from today's race because it was found that he was ineligible under the conditions of the race . . . the three-card monte boys were fleecing the customers again on the clubhouse road . . . J. Jackie and J. Barba, two energetic apprentice riders, will leave for New York early next week . . . H. LeBlanc, however, is likely to ride through Havre de Grace . . . given good weather, Bowie will draw another 20,000 crowd tomorrow.

Riding Club's Hunter Show Listed Today

The sixth annual edition of the Riding and Hunt Club Hounds Hunter Trials, blue ribbon show of local hunters, will be held at Bradley Farms today. The first of the six scheduled classes will be held at 12:30 p. m.

A shift in the judging personnel brings Hon. Melvin C. Hazen, Maj. A. Roffe and Wilbur Hubbard, M. F. H., into the judges stand.

One of the features of the show will be the Junior Hunt Plate, which is being inaugurated this year. This class is for boys or girls who have not yet reached their seventeenth birthday. A prize plate has been presented by Mrs. L. T. Hundt.

The Junior Hunt Plate will be run over a modified course about 1½ miles in length. Jumps are built to represent as nearly as possible conditions actually encountered while hunting.

The obstacles will average about 3½ feet in height. There will be post and rail, chicken coops, stone walls, Hitchcocks and plank fences. There will be about 15 entries for this class. Five other classes are scheduled.

Mrs. Greenough, of the Blue Ridge Hunt, will bring three of her sturdy jumpers to compete in the trials. Miss Louise Meyers, of Middleburg, has entered two horses and Miss Anna Hedrick, of the Loudoun Hunt. Leesburg, will have one horse entered.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GRACEFUL FLIGHT, $3.80, $3.20, $2.90; BLACK BOO, $2.90, $2.40; TROSTAR, $2.90.

GRACEFUL FLIGHT, a good filly, disposed of TROSTAR with ease in the early running, was taken in hand until displaced by BLACK BOO and then drew away without effort when put to hand ride. BLACK BOO, off poorly, saved ground entering the stretch to take a brief lead midway of the stretch, but was no match for the winner. TROSTAR was hard used running with GRACEFUL FLIGHT and tired gradually through the stretch. MAY MUSIC went well for a quarter. ZINNIA was shuffled back at the break. WALMISS tired. SAKUNTALA had some early speed.

SECOND RACE—Four furlongs. Purse, $1,000. For 2-year-old maidens. Start good from stalls. Won handily; place driving. Went to post at 3:01. Off at 3:03. Winner, Manhasset Stable's b. or br. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SMOKE SIGNAL, $3.10, $2.40, $2.20; LEGAL LIGHT, $3.10, $2.80; WAY OUT, $6.70.

SMOKE SIGNAL, much the best, found his stride quickly to dispose of SURE CLOUD and drew out to a long lead to be taken in hand at the end. LEGAL LIGHT, forwarding placed throughout, closed gamely. SURE CLOUD, closest to the pace of SMOKE SIGNAL after the opening sixteenth, hung on well despite hard handling. WAY OUT showed an even effort. BOW TIP broke on top and raced greenly. SCHLEY GOREE and HAPPY CHIEF were outrun.

Middleburg Cup Races Today

69 Horses To Compete In 6 Events

Welbourne Jake Is Choice in Classic Timber Event.

By M. Grace Brooks.
A Staff Correspondent.

Middleburg, Va., April 9.—John M. Schiff's Indigo, aged gray gelding and winner of the Middleburg Hunt Cup in 1935, rules a strong favorite with local racing fans in the 4-mile timber race, feature of the opening day of the spring race meet on the Glenwood race course tomorrow. Indigo easily captured the hunt cup two years ago, and sportsmen are looking to this horse to give the field a swift run for the trophy. His stablemate, Pomiochio, has been scratched in this number leaving seven to go to the post in the Middleburg Hunt Cup race. Bobby Davis will ride Indigo.

Jack Skinner will pilot Paul Mellon's Welbourne Jake, winner of the Deep Run Hunt Cup last Saturday in the big race. Mrs. F. M. Gould's Ostend, winner of the hunt cup in 1933, will be ridden by Randy Duffy; Bill Street will ride Gigolo; Louis Stoddard will be on Girard S. Smith's Sun Faun; Henry Forst will ride Mrs. Simon T. Patterson's Career, and Mr. Harrison, of Philadelphia, will be atop George A. Osherstrom's Nicias.

A real racing atmosphere was thrown around Middleburg today with the arrival of racegoers. Recent rains have put the grounds in excellent condition and the going will be good. With clearing weather the largest crowd in the history of the meet is expected. Many dignitaries will be present. The Governor of Virginia and Mrs. George C. Peery and Miss Frances Perkins, Secretary of Labor, are among those who are planning to be present. The picturesque course never was prettier, and the beauty of the greensward is enhanced by hundreds of spring flowers in bloom.

The first race will be called at 2 p. m. This is the Sunnybank, a 1½-mile hurdle race, with 16 entries. Unless there are scratches, the race will be split. Likewise, the Three Oaks, a flat race with 18 entries, may have to be divided. Three other races are on the program, the William Skinner Memorial, a 2½-mile brush race; the Rose Hill, a 3-mile timber race, and the Loudoun Plate, a 2-mile brush race. The admission fee is $1, which goes to the Loudoun County Hospital. Six races will be run on Wednesday, the closing day of the meet.

Listen to that announcer, will yuh? I had no idea we were puttin' up such a swell fight.

Yanks Win 13 in Row; Indians Shade Giants

Cards Have Won Only 4 Tilts With Big League Foes; White Sox Down Pirates; Reds Score; Cubs Conquer Browns, 8-1.

By the United Press.

Tulsa, Okla., April 9.—The New York Yankees scored their thirteenth straight victory of the season today as they chalked up an 8-3 victory over the Tulsa Oilers, champions of the Texas League.

The Yanks got to the Tulsa hurlers, Milstead and Lahti, for 12 hits, while Kemp Wicker and Johnny Broaca combined to allow 9 safeties.

Wicker blanked the Oilers for the first seven innings, their only three runs coming in the eighth off Broaca on four hits, a walk and a long fly.

Helena, Ark.—The Cleveland Indians came from behind to tie the score in the sixth inning, scored twice in the ninth off Frank Gabler and beat the New York Giants, 5-3, today. The Indians now are ahead in their series, six games to five.

The Giants collected their seven hits and all of their runs off Willis Hudlin, the Indians' starting hurler. They tallied twice in the third and once in the fourth, and then were held scoreless by Hudlin and Joe Heving.

Cliff Melton and Gabler divided the Giants' hurling. Melton allowed six hits in seven innings.

San Antonio, Tex.—Larry French, one of the Chicago Cubs' ace pitchers, held the St. Louis Browns to five hits yesterday and the National Leaguers won an exhibition baseball game, 8 to 1.

Longview, Tex.—Home runs by Rip Radcliff and Fred Walker topped a three-run assault in the fourth inning and gave the Chicago White Sox a 5-3 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates yesterday. It was the White Sox's first victory over the Pirates against two defeats.

Jacksonville, Fla.—Ralph Birkofer and Roy Henshaw allowed half a dozen hits yesterday while the Brooklyn Dodgers collected 14 safeties for an 8-to-4 victory over the Jacksonville Sally League club in a spring exhibition. Ed Hudson and Jack Winsett contributed homers.

Daytona Beach, Fla.—The Gas House gang from St. Louis broke camp last night and headed northward with a batting average of .242 for 14 major spring exhibition games, of which they won only four. The Cards scored 57 runs, the opposition 68, and were charged with 21 errors to 20 for the foes.

Savannah, Ga.—The Cincinnati Reds regained their batting eyes today, defeating Savannah of the South Atlantic loop, 11 to 3, in a game featured by three home runs.

Lakeland, Fla.—Manager Mickey Cochrane began a new experiment today to permit the Detroit Tigers to keep the hard-hitting recruit, Rudy York, at third and still use Marvin Owen.

Snead Takes $6,000 Links Tourney Lead

Picard Falters as Scores Mount in 35-Mile Gale, at Charleston.

By the United Press.

Charleston, S. C., April 9.—Sam Snead, the West Virginia mountaineer, blazed back into the lead of the $6,000 Charleston tournament of the Gardens today with a 70—209 over a course swept by a 35-mile wind.

Snead's sparkling 36-34 put him two strokes in front of defending champion Henry Picard. Picard led the field at the 36-hole mark but faltered in a disastrous third round to card a 37-39 for a total of 211.

Most of the scores went skyward in the 35-mile kind. Snead and Jimmy Thomson were the only ones to break par. Thomson carded a sub-par 70 for a 213 total.

Lawson Little, former amateur king, was disqualified by the rules committee because he improved the line of flight on the eighth hole.

Little's tee shot caught the ditch, and against the opinion of the rules committee he dropped his ball out on the fairway in clear sight of the hole. The committee said there should have been trees in the line of flight.

Johnny Revolta, of Chicago, out in 36, had a great chance to catch the leaders, but faltered on the back nine. He took four fives and went over par on three holes for a total of 215.

Dunkelberger Meets Hunter in Golf Final

Pinehurst, N. C., April 9 (AP).—Bobby Dunkelberger, of High Point, N. C., and J. T. Hunter, of North Adams, Mass., won their semi-finals matches in the North and South Amateur golf tourney today, the former with a 5 and 4 defeat of Tom Jamison, of Pittsburgh, and the latter with a 2 and 1 victory over Carl Dann, jr., of Orlando, Fla. They will meet in the 36-hole final tomorrow.

G-Men Play G-Men.

Old Line, G.W. Sport Teams Active Today

Maryland Busy in 3 Fields; Colonials in Baseball.

Maryland's triple bill at College Park with an assortment of tough opponents, augmented by George Washington's baseball game with Washington College, comprises today's collegiate sports card—one of the best of the early season weekends.

The Terps meet Virginia Poly's powerful squad in track, Rutgers in baseball and the Baltimore Athletic Club in lacrosse, and there is little assurance that they will not be artistically whitewashed before the day is over.

Rutgers took a fall out of the Terrapins on the diamond last year,; so today's game is something of a grudge affair. Maryland is hard up for hurling talent, what with George (Bull) Woods working every game, Dale Patterson away at a collegiate press meeting and Charley Weidinger on the ailing list.

The Baltimore club is new in the lacrosse field, as a unit, but individually the boys add up to a formidable array of talent. Featuring the visitors' line-up are the Cristhilf brothers, John and Frank, who learned their stickwork at college Park under Jack Faber. The team holds an 8-6 victory over Princeton, a victory achieved with second-stringers playing the second half, which is a fair indication of its ability.

In track the Gobblers have a decided edge over their hosts, who are handicapped by the absence of dash men and hurdlers. The Virginians' big guns are Bradshaw in the sprints and hurdles, Shafer in the pole vault and Douglas in the high jump. Maryland will rely on Frank Cronin, quarter-miler and pole vaulter, and Bill Guckeyson, weight and field ace, for the majority of its points. Maryland has little hope of winning.

Boasting a new lease on life after its well-deserved victory over Boston University, George Washington is expected to take the measure of its Eastern Shore foe without undue difficulty. Vince DeAngelis, whose pitching has been up to par, but whose support was at a sub-zero level in previous games and he, consequently, didn't fare so well.

Central Deals Rifle Loss to Roosevelt

Central High got off to a flying start in the opening match of the interhigh small-bore rifle championships yesterday, defeating Roosevelt, 1,293 to 1,267, on the Rough Riders' range. Fletcher Jones, Central leader, shot a 272 for high score. Competition was prone, kneeling and standing.

Eastern and Tech who were scheduled also to shoot, postponed their match, Eastern being unable to compete. Tech is the defending champion. In addition to Jones' score the following won for Central: Jack Marzolf, 269; Arthur Thompson, 261; James Waters, 255, and Jerome Maxwell, 236.

Table Entries Open.

The District of Columbia Junior Table Tennis championships for juniors, 16 and under, and Pee Wees, 12 and under, will be held April 15 and 16 in the boys' gymnasium of the Y. M. C. A., located at 1732 G street northwest.

Middle Atlantic 'Y' Meet Lures 8 Associations

Eight associations, including the Washington Association, representing four States and the District, will participate in the fourth annual Middle Atlantic Y. M. C. A. swimming championships today at the Shoreham Pool.

Preliminaries start at 6:15 p. m. and the finals at 8:15 p. m. Approximately 135 contenders are entered.

The York Y. M. C. A. club, winner last year, is favored to retain the title, having entered 19 men. Scranton, which heads the list with 28 entries, is expected to give York a battle.

Other associations represented are: Camden, N. Y., with 20 entries; Baltimore, Md., with 18 entries; Wilkes-Barre, Pa., with 2 entries; West Side, New York City, with 17 entries; Bronx Union, New York City, with 7 entries; Washington, D. C., with 20 entries, and Camden, N. J., with 16 entries.

Terp Frosh '12' Loses to Baltimore

Tossing away an early lead, Maryland's freshman lacrosse ten bowed to Baltimore City College yesterday, at College Park, 7-3.

Possessor of a 3-0 advantage at one point late in the third quarter, the Baby Terrapins' defense crumbled and the Baltimoreans shot half a dozen goals in the final period.

Hunky Wilder, who paced the Orioles with three goals, brought City its first score with 8 seconds left in the third canto. Wilder continued his accurate bombardment on the Terp netting as he and Sindall pumped six shots into the cords to win.

American U. Books Eight 1937 Grid Tilts

By the Associated Press.

American University announced today an eight-game football schedule for 1937. It is the most ambitious schedule ever arranged for the Eagles.

November 6, Randolph-Macon; 13, Johns Hopkins, at Baltimore; 25, Hampden-Sydney.

Eastern High Runners Bow

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Alexandria, Va., April 9.—Episcopal High School's track team trounced Eastern High School's thinly-clads here this afternoon. The final score of the meet was 90½-36½.

The Maroons copped first place in 10 of the 13 events. Cohen, Cooksey and Englehart were the only members of the visiting squad to register five-pointers.

Peyton Hopkins, Episcopal dash man, was the only double winner of the meet, scoring firsts in the 100 and 220.

Episcopal lost an additional 10 points when they were disqualified in the mile relay, after they had actually won the event with yards to spare. Hopkins' failure to pass the baton to Gravatt within the specified 10-foot distance resulted in the reversed decision.

Women's Pin Unit In Record Meeting

The Women's Duckpin Association of the District held a record meeting last night indicating that its tournament opening April 28 at the Lucky Strike alleys will set a new high for the event. Fourteen leagues were represented at the gathering at Ruty's Cafeteria.

It was decided to close the entries April 27, and averages submitted must be of April 17. The association has 363 paid members, an increase of 119 over last year's membership.

Sports in Brief

Houston, Tex.—Hal Surface, Kansas City tennis star, forced Bryan (Bitsy) Grant, defending champion of Atlanta, Ga., to 40 games here today before losing his quarter-final match in the annual River Oaks Country Club meet, 9—7, 7—5, 7—5.

Grant and Sabin will meet in the semi-finals tomorrow as will Walter Senior, of San Francisco, and Wimer Allison.

Denver.—Coloradoans awaited only the scratch of a pen today to see pari-mutuel betting brought back to the State. The pen is Gov. Teller Ammons'. He has not indicated whether he will sign or veto the bill passed by the State Legislature to bring back betting on horse and dog races after a lapse of 29 years.

This Morning

WITH SHIRLEY POVICH

Chattanooga, Tenn.

One day out of Orlando, where nothing ever happened . . . except the continual rattle of the slot machines and the infrequent joyous whoops of the suckers when the iron monsters spat a handful of nickels . . . or dimes, quarters, halves or cartwheels, depending on the investment . . . Orlando, where the Nats spent six slightly weary weeks that the oncoming season might be properly ballyhooed.

POVICH.

And you remember:

The squawks of the early arrivals among the ball players, the chaps who hastened down there to get on Mr. Griffith's board bill before the time they were supposed to report . . . moaning at the utterly unfeeling board of governors of the local golf club who refused to give 'em the courtesy of the links as they did in 1936 . . . and charged 'em one buck per round.

* * * *

Bucky Harris leading the small squad of hopeful rookies into camp, and in confidential asides to correspondents whispering that this kid or that kid had a chance to make good . . . young Jimmy Wasdell, the first baseman, blissfully ignorant of the fact that he was purchased by the Nats for duty in Chattanooga, not with Washington . . . Wasdell and young Jake Early, the kid catcher, pounding the ball in batting practice, avidly reading their press notices, and beginning to think they had made the team.

* * * *

Shanty Hogan, entertaining the visiting correspondents who had known him with the Giants, permitting Nick Altrock to measure his waistline with a borrowed tape measure for the inevitable clown pictures . . . Buck Newsom bombarding Griffith with collect messages from Hartsville, S. C., and still refusing to take a cut in salary . . . Cliff Bolton reporting and refusing to sign until he was given the $500 bonus promised him last year.

* * * *

A Practical Joker!

Jack Salveson's practical joking around the hotel and his dead serious play on the golf links . . . Monte Weaver, noticed by none and noticing none, buried in a science magazine . . . those pinochle games in the upper mezzanine with the old master, Griffith, getting back at 10 cents per chip, some of those shekels he is paying his athletes . . . the nursing of nickels among the ball players who actually don't get their first pay check until two weeks after the season starts . . . the rookies woefully short of dough . . . and Harold Conn winning $26 knocking off a string of bulls-eyes in a nearby shooting gallery.

* * * *

That first game with the Giants and the Nats taking an awful 8-0 lacing . . . Buck Newsom finally reporting and denying he took a salary cut . . . Cliff Bolton complaining that his arm was sore but agreeing to stay with the team . . . Cliff Bolton jumping out of a Sanford-bound bus and saying, with an oath that he was going home and didn't give a damn if Griffith or Harris didn't like it.

* * * *

The bus load of rookies, given their release and swinging into the wagon bound for the Nats' penal colony at Chattanooga . . . Jake Early, Jim Wasdell, Bill Phebus, Harry Kelley and Frank Petticolas—all taking it philosophically except Wasdell, who thinks he is good enough to play in the big leagues and probably is . . . and bemoaning his luck that brought him to the Nats when he might have had a regular job with Bill Terry's Giants, who wanted to buy him.

* * * *

Chapman's Slump.

Freddie Sington, apparently a big league outfielder at last, trying mightily to justify his spot in the clean-up hitting role . . . and not quite succeeding . . . and getting just a bit panicky, as are Bucky Harris and Clark Griffith . . . but Ben Chapman in even a worse hitting slump is not fretting . . . because he knows he'll hit, as do Griff and Harris . . . the Nats' bosses finally admitted that they are bargaining for another right-handed hitting outfielder.

* * * *

Beating the St. Louis Gas House Gang regularly at Orlando and Daytona . . . Cecil Travis, at shortstop, drawing praise from every rival manager who watches him play . . . Young Buddy Lewis, a confirmed big leaguer this year, also drawing covetous glances . . . Johnny Mihalic stealing the play from Buddy Myer, who takes his own good time about getting into condition . . . and Mihalic making you wonder if Myer, at his best, will ever get his second base job back.

* * * *

Wheeling into the Tampa Terrace Hotel an hour after the Gas House Gang has assaulted two visiting newspapermen . . . and greedily trying to learn second-hand all the luscious details . . . returning to Orlando via Lakeland and learning that Griffith has bought Al Simmons from the Tigers . . . and wondering how Freddie Sington feels about that . . . and sympathizing with him.

Griffith and Harris pleased with themselves for the Simmons deal . . . but anxiously waiting for him to start to hit . . . that throw by Simmons that helped to shut out the Tigers . . . eventually, that Thursday night train out of Orlando, where nothing ever happens.

Wilson-Roosevelt Tilt Off; Will Play Tuesday

Wet grounds and damp skies stalled off the opening of the interhigh baseball series yesterday, preventing the scheduled conflict between Tech and Woodrow Wilson on Roosevelt's field. The game will be played Tuesday at 3:30 p. m., the same day on which Central and Western will play at Central.

Because of cadet drills on Roosevelt's field, the Tech-Wilson game cannot be played on Monday. Birch E. Bayh, director of physical education, then moved the game up to Tuesday.

On the Air Today

For those who enjoy the better things in the world of music, Saturday is turning out to be quite an adventure in radio. Included in the fare for today are the Eighth Annual Library of Congress Chamber Music Festival, two operas from Boston, the seventieth anniversary program of the Cincinnati Conservatory of Music and the Chicago Symphony Orchestra.

Today's hour and three-quarters from the Library of Congress Festival is the first of two Columbia broadcasts from the Washington event. The second, next Saturday, will feature the Elizabeth Sprague Coolidge prize-winning quartet composition for 1936.

Paul Hindemuth, German composer and violin virtuoso, is to be heard today in the library musicale, WJSV, at 11 a. m., in a program of his own compositions. He will be assisted by Georges Barrere, flutist; Jesus Maria Sanroma, pianist; Frederick Jagel, Metropolitan tenor, and the Dessoff Choir, directed by Paul Boepple.

The program begins with the sonata, composed in 1936, for flute and piano, played by Barrere and Sanroma. Next will follow four songs from poems of Friederich Hoelderlin, sung by Jagel. Hindemuth then will play his sonata, Opus 25, No. 1, for viola alone. Hindemuth will describe his music in the intermission to be followed by the Dessoff Choir and Saroma's playing of the Sonata No. 3 for piano.

Here and there: John R. Chisholm drops in to tell a bit of a story about Jane Froman, who comes to the Earle soon. Chisholm was in college (University of Missouri) with Jane back in the days of the Atwater Kent contests. It was about 1927 or 1928, and Jane tried for a regional winner's award. She lost. And, in addition, she was told she hadn't the right kind of voice for radio, thank you. It really didn't make much difference because the Fromans are a musical family and Jane developed just as though she had won the old contest . . . Jack Benny will have Gracie Allen as his guest tomorrow night at 7 . . . Arch McDonald has gone to Chicago for a huddle with his sports sponsor in preparation for the baseball season.

Inventories Today Exceed Total in 1929

New York, April 9.—Inventories of major American corporations today exceed 1929. This is brought out in a survey today by Business Week, which says that industry will have to begin replenishing its working capital in the near future, either by raising money from investors or borrowing from the banks.

Stocks of raw materials and merchandise of 200 major industrial companies amounted to $2,919,941,000 at the end of 1936. That was 13.8 per cent above supplies on hand at the end of 1935, and 20 per cent above 1934. In 1929, inventories of those same companies totaled $2,912,019,000.

Higher prices for raw materials, higher labor costs, greater industrial activity and the necessity for laying in larger supplies because of delivery delays and strikes have contributed to the sharp upswing in inventories, the report enumerates. Another factor which tends to cramp working capital of business is the undistributed earnings tax, which has caused many to pay dividends rather than taxes.

Business, as the result, has already begun to strengthen its finances, the report declares, and cites the increase in common stock financing during 1936 and a concomitant bulge of $800,000,000 in commercial bank loans.

Freight Claims Paid $20,920,487 in Year

Claims paid by the railroads in 1936 because of loss and damage to freight shipments totaled $20,920,487, according to complete reports for the year made public yesterday in connection with the observance of April as "perfect shipping month" by the shippers' regional advisory boards, in co-operation with the railroads, express companies, and commercial organizations all over the United States.

Freight claims paid in 1936 were greater than any year since 1931, when they amounted to $24,565,360. In 1935 the amount of freight claims paid totaled $17,946,049. In the past four years the amount of such claims has steadily increased, due in part to increasing freight traffic and rising prices of commodities.

$50,000,000 Bills Offered by Treasury

The Secretary of the Treasury gives notice that tenders are invited for Treasury bills to the amount of $50,000,000, or thereabouts. They will be 273-day bills, and will be sold on a discount basis to the highest bidders. Tenders will be received at the Federal Reserve banks or branches up to 2 p. m. Monday. Tenders will not be received at the Treasury Department.

Poor's New Business Highest in 77 Years

New York, April 9.—De Witt N. Conklin, vice president of Poor's Publishing Co., announces that the company's new business in March reached an all-time peak, the highest level in 77 years, and was 20 per cent over the March, 1936, record.

He points out that this increase is a continuation of the advance, begun several years ago, based on the recovery movement and the broad public interest in securities.

Daily Oil Output Sets New Record

The Bureau of Mines said yesterday that the daily average production of crude petroleum was 3,327,600 barrels—a new record.

Wheat Lower With Outlook For Big Crops

Market Irregular, With Government Report Due After Close.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, April 9.—Unwarranted fears that the United States government crop report issued after the close of trading would indicate enlarged yields led to wheat price setbacks late today. The setbacks virtually wiped out net gains of about a cent a bushel which followed a denial from President Roosevelt that any plan exists to lower the price the American government pays for gold.

At the close, wheat was ⅛ cent down to ⅜ cents higher compared yesterday's finish, May, 1.39@1.39⅛; July, 1.25⅜@⅜; September, 1.21⅜@½; corn ½@1⅛ advanced; May, 1.30⅛@¼; July, 1.20½@¾; September, 1.11⅜@½; oats unchanged to ¾ up, May, 49⅝@⅞, and rye varying from ⅝ decline to ⅝ gain, May, 1.14⅞. Oil Companies Raise Wages of Workers

Houston, Tex., April 9 (AP).—The Texas Co. announced today a general wage raise, averaging 10 per cent, to pipe line, production and refinery workers. The company has 28,000 workers. The company said it would make "certain equalizations" in the salaries of its office workers.

The Humble Oil and Refining Co. announced raises last night amounting to $1,454,880 annually and affecting 13,000 workers. Both increases were effective as of March 16.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively, A Special Correspondent.

Stocks Rally on Gold Price Assurance; Bonds Higher; Francs Break.

New York, April 9.—Government bonds hardened somewhat on another assurance on the gold price and further Federal Reserve Bank support, and speculative markets worked irregularly higher. Stocks on the average sold at new low prices for the year, recovered briskly and briefly, and then finished fractionally higher. Trading volume was rather light at all times, the total falling well below 2,000,000 shares. July wheat closed ⅜ of a cent higher at 125⅝ cents a bushel.

Indecision of stocks after their mild recovery yesterday from the early throwdown did nothing to create an atmosphere of bullishness in the early trading today. Tested by large offerings on opening sales, the standard industrial and railroad shares could not stand up and the further declines in the first sales encouraged a half hour of general selling. For the most part the market emerged from the selling with prices but little below the opening quotations.

United States Steel lurched heavily, dropping 2⅜ points on 3,000 shares. Declines of a point or more were common in such issues as Central, Anaconda, Bethlehem, Chrysler and American Telephone. Those losses were made up almost entirely shortly after the end of the first hour when a sharp rally followed reports of President Roosevelt's remarks on gold. The incident may have shown that the stock market had been vulnerable to the recent rumors of a cut in the gold price or other deflationary steps; it also may have proved nothing more valuable than that the market was ready for a bit of a rally and that the news was merely a timely incidental.

Another Gold Denial.

At all events, the President seems to have nailed down the rumors for the time being. He was quoted as saying that he knew nothing of any plan to lower the gold price, that the alleged plans seem to have been mere press stories (especially foreign press) and that the Treasury also had denied knowledge of any such plan. The markets were inclined to take the President as giving a straight-out denial, but it nevertheless was still thought that the rumors had been allowed to circulate as a sort of trial balloon and that the Administration had not been upset by the fact that they had brought a crack in the stock and commodity markets.

In that connection, the denial of Secretary Morgenthau, as quoted by a news service, was another of those equivocal denials that might mean anything. "Not right now," was the Secretary's reply to the question as to whether the Treasury was planning to reduce the gold price. The rumors seem to have grown out of the supposition abroad that the recent large shipments of Russian gold here would be unwelome, although the trimming of the story to the effect that the Treasury had refused to give a 60-day guaranty of an unchanged buying price looks a bit shabby. Everybody knows that the Treasury never gives any guaranty on that score. What makes more sense is that the British government, agreeable to the suggestion from this side, is trying to discourage British investment in our markets, and probably with no great success, except in the case of large commitments by investment trusts.

Credit Pumped In.

Although stocks began the day in anything but an inflationary minded mood, the overnight developments did something to reassure those who had feared immediate steps that might be taken along deflationary lines by the authorities. For all the equivocation contained in the reported "official" denials of any intention to change the Treasury's buying price for gold, either directly or indirectly through a higher mint service charge, the market was minded to accept them. At any rate the large purchases of Government bonds this week by the Federal Reserve Banks was a practical demonstration of the new technic of taking in credit surplus at one hole and squeezing it out at another.

Since so much distance had been traveled with the increase in bank reserve requirements, and since so much loss of face would have resulted in a straight-out postponement of the higher requirement to go into effect on May 1 would have resulted, another way of doing the same thing was decided upon. Following the Federal Reserve Board's hint that it would buy Government bonds, the system in the first three days of this week added a total of nearly $29,000,000 to its investments, the first change in several years.

More Excess Reserves.

The purchase of the bonds not only served to provide bids for bonds that the banks were offering, partly as a means of preparing for the higher reserve requirements, and thereby cushioned the fall in prices, but it also poured just that much excess credit into the market. Excess reserve this week rose $40,000,000, and another $18,000,000 was added to gold stocks, although it was sterilized. Thus the net results of the week have been a deflation of prices for stocks, bonds and commodities; a threat of deflationary action by the authorities; an actual performance of an inflationary act.

Francs.

Foreign exchange traders had one of the most active days they have enjoyed in a long time. The French franc experienced another bad break in London before New York banks opened and were quoted at one time around 110 to the pound, against 107.15 yesterday. Here the rate broke to 4.46, off about 9 points, or three times as much as the loss recorded yesterday. Sterling sagged below $4.88½. When the President denied intention to change the price this country is paying for gold short covering began in the foreign exchange market in a big way, the rate for francs climbing above 4.50 cents and the pound rising to $4.90. There were indications of activity by the various stabilization funds when the franc decline became disorderly. At their low point today francs were not far above the legal limit of devaluation under existing French laws.

Tourist Bait.

That the French authorities have decided to allow the franc to follow its natural bent and slide to the lower limit of the devaluation decided upon when France went off gold, is admitted. The explanation that the decline was envisaged by the government in order to attract tourists to the world's fair this summer, by making francs cheaper, looks more to be the making of a virtue out of a necessity. In any event, it will be a good trick if the French government can manage to hold prices in France down so that the cheaper francs will buy as much as the more costly ones now will buy.

Age Limit for Job Runs Up to 65 Years

New York, April 9.—Of 405 representative industrial companies surveyed by the National Industrial Conference Board, only 18, or 4.4 per cent have made it a definite policy not to hire male workers 40 years of age or over. The survey points out that over three-quarters of the reporting companies have not fixed maximum age limits on the hiring of older workers.

Of the remaining companies covered by the survey, 22, or 5.4 per cent of the total, has established 45 as the maximum hiring age; 33, or 8.1 per cent, have established 50, and 16, or 4.0 per cent have established 60. Three companies reported that they employ new male workers up to 65 years of age.

Freight Traffic Continues Rise Over Year Ago

Total of 726,687 Cars for April 3 Week Is 18.4 Per Cent Gain.

Loading of revenue freight for the week ended April 3 totaled 726,687 cars, the Association of American Railroads announced yesterday. This was an increase of 113,106 cars or 18.4 per cent above the corresponding week in 1936 and an increase of 181,231 cars or 33.2 per cent above the corresponding week in 1935. Loading of revenue freight for the week of April 3 was a decrease of 34,422 cars or 4.5 per cent below the preceding week.

Miscellaneous freight loading for the week ended April 3, totaled 328,874 cars, an increase of 10,384 cars above the preceding week, 59,212 cars above the corresponding week in 1936, and 89,059 cars above the corresponding week in 1935.

Loading of merchandise less than carload lot freight totaled 174,070 cars, an increase of 3,854 cars above the preceding week, 11,685 cars above the corresponding week in 1936 and 11,369 cars above the same week in 1935.

Coal loading amounted to 118,317 cars, a decrease of 53,497 cars below the preceding week, but an increase of 19,340 cars above the corresponding week in 1936 and 49,091 cars above the same week in 1935.

Grain and grain products loading totaled 32,271 cars, an increase of 4,026 cars above the preceding week, 2,352 cars above the corresponding week in 1936 and 6,667 cars above the same week in 1935. In the Western districts alone, grain and grain products loading for the week ended April 3 totaled 19,406 cars, an increase of 2,627 cars above the preceding week, and 1,163 cars above the corresponding week in 1936.

Decrease in Livestock.

Livestock loading amounted to 10,806 cars, a decrease of 15 cars below the preceding week, 751 cars below the same week in 1936, and 1,590 cars below the same week in 1935. In the Western districts alone, loading of livestock for the week ended April 3 totaled 8,120 cars, an increase of 72 cars above the preceding week but a decrease of 792 cars below the corresponding week in 1936.

Coke loading amounted to 10,860 cars, a decrease of 476 cars below the preceding week, but an increase of 4,319 cars above the same week in 1936 and 5,531 cars above the same week in 1935.

Member Stock Trades 21.25% of Volume

The Securities Commission reported yesterday that dealings of members of the New York Stock Exchange for their own accounts amounted to 21.25 per cent of all round-lot transactions on the exchange during the week ended March 12.

The personal deals amounted to 7.26 per cent of round-lot transactions initiated on the floor, 5.45 per cent of transactions initiated off the floor and 8.54 per cent of specialists' transactions.

Steel Prices Unchanged.

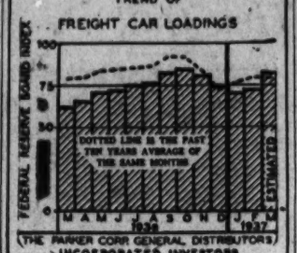
Freight Loadings 30% Over Year Ago



Boston, Mass., April 9.—The trend of freight car loadings has been steadily upward with the estimated index for March loadings the highest for any March since 1930 and about 30 per cent greater than a year ago. So far this year less-than-car-lot loadings gained 8½ per cent over last year, which might indicate that the railroads are no longer losings freight to motor trucks.

Curb Prices Gain Following Decline

New York, April 9 (AP).—The curb market dug in for a rally today following a new general decline in the first hour. Reversal of the trend was based on an upturn on the big board after President Roosevelt declared the Government had no present intention changing the gold price.

The recovering was good for final gains of 1 to around 2¾ points in Newmont at 118¾; Pan American Airways at 67; Pittsburgh Plate Glass at 134¾; Royal Typewriter at 44; Great Atlantic & Pacific at 109¼ and Babcock & Wilcox at 126. Shares fractionally higher included Niagara Hudson Power, Sherwin Williams, Wayne Pump, American Cyanamid "B," International Petroleum and Lake Shore Mines.

Youngstown Distributes Record Pay Rolls

Youngstown, Ohio, April 9 (AP).—Distribution of the largest single industrial pay roll in the Youngstown industrial district began today. Estimates place the distribution at close to $7,000,000 over the week-end or at the rate of $14,000,000 a month.

Youngstown Sheet and Tube Co., Republic Steel Corporation and Carnegie-Illinois are giving approximately 50,000 workers their first pay under the increased wages for steel workers recently announced.

General uneasiness over the French monetary situation and the American gold price intentions brought further selling of francs in world markets yesterday and dropped most other currencies lower in terms of the dollar.

Off as much as .09 of a cent earlier in the session, francs recovered slightly reducing its loss to .07¾ of a cent at 4.48 cents in New York. Holland guilders and Swiss francs also declined, the former losing .04 of a cent to 54.68 cents and the latter .01 of a cent to 22.73 cents. The pound sterling dipped ⅛ of a cent to $4.89¼.

In London the dollar moved up ⅞ of a cent to close at 4.88⅛ to the pound, compared with the New York overnight rate of $4.89½.

The American unit in Paris closed at the equivalent of 4.464 cents to the franc, compared with the overnight New York rate of 4.458 cents.

Boston Wool Market.

Boston, April 9 (U. S. Department of Agriculture).—Business was slow in the wool market today as mills restricted purchases to small quantities for the most urgent immediate needs.

Recent sales have included fine territory wools in original bags at steady prices ranging mostly $1.00@1.02 scoured basis for bulk short French combine length and $1.03@1.06 scoured basis for average to good French combing length.

Buyers showed little interest in country packed lots of ⅜ and ½ blood Ohio, Michigan and Indiana bright fleeces which were offered at 45@46 cents in the grease delivered East.

Sales and Debt On Installment Hit New High

3 Billion Owed on Purchases Is a Rise of 50% Since 1929.

New York, April 9.—Installment sales and the outstanding volume of installment debt reached new peaks in 1936 representing an expansion of 50 per cent since 1929, according to estimates of the index of the New York Trust Co. today. It places the total of such sales during the past year at $9,000,000,000 and the outstanding debt at approximately $3,000,000,000. Two-thirds of all sales of automobiles are reported, by the bank review, to have been on an installment basis in comparison with about half in 1929, while wholesale, or dealer financing, by sales financing companies has increased even more.

"During the past few years, moreover," the index says, "the record of the sales installment finance companies has been excellent. Throughout the country, collections were uniformly good even in depression years, and while the comparative loss ratio did decline as a result of adverse economic conditions, it never reached serious proportions. Through lower rates, extended terms and smaller down payments, the ease of financing new purchases has greatly increased from the consumers point of view.

"While the strong capitalization of the leading finance companies and their satisfactory experience have enabled them to extend these more favorable terms without immediate risk, there are dangers inherent in present practices which are emphasized by the keen competition prevailing in the installment finance field and the prospect of such competition increasing."

WILLIAM E. FUREY, Attorney, Southern Building.

IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE United States for the District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court. In re: Estate of Harriet Louise Wise, deceased. Administration No. 49656. Order of publication. Letters of administration upon all the money, goods, chattels, rights and credits of Harriet Louise Wise, late of the District of Columbia, deceased (also known as Harriet L. Wise), having been granted unto Bernard M. Wise and Charles F. Wilson on the 28th day of May, 1936, and no distribution, partial or otherwise having as yet been made to any of the next of kin or heirs at law of said decedent, and it having been made known to the court by the petition of Bernard M. Wise and Charles F. Wilson, administrators as aforesaid, filed herein the 12th day of February, 1937, for the appointment of a special master to ascertain and determine what part of the assets of the said estate, if any, is to be regarded as realty and to determine who are the proper next of kin and heirs at law entitled to distributive shares of this estate and the respective interests of such distributees, that it is impossible for the said administrators definitely to determine who are all of the persons who would be entitled to participate in said estate and, as well, impossible to compute the exact amount distributable to each of said persons until they be definitely ascertained, and it having been ordered by this honorable court, by its order entered herein the 16th day of February, that the said petition and all proceedings thereafter to be taken thereon shall be deemed a plenary proceeding within the meaning of Title 29, Section 61, of the Code of Law for the District of Columbia, and that the said administrators of said District of Columbia, holding a Probate Court, and answer the exigencies of the said petition filed herein on the 13th day of February, 1937, which said process so issued was duly returned "not to be found" as to the hereinafter named persons, and it having been shown in the affidavit of Bernard M. Wise, one of the administrators of said estate, hereinfore filed herein, that all of the following persons are residents of residents of the District of Columbia, it is this 22nd day of March, 1937, ordered: That William W. Breneman, 2 Ralston avenue, Hyattsville, Maryland; Mary Breneman Thomas, Ralston avenue, Hyattsville, Maryland; William Valentine Wilson, Rockville, Maryland; Gertrude T. Wilson, 128 E. 34th Street, New York City; Billings Wilson, care of New York Authority, New York City; John S. B. Wilson, 326 B Plaza Road, Fair Lawn, New Jersey; William Wilson Durant, 30 Rockefeller Plaza, New York City; Dorothy Baxter, care of Social Iseminger Street, Philadelphia, Pa.; Thomas Baxter, a minor, 2603 South Iseminger Street, Philadelphia, Pa.; Robert Baxter, a minor, 2603 South Iseminger Street, Philadelphia, Pa.; Cora Wilson Turner Ewing, Columbus, Ohio; Laura Turner Smith, Columbus, Ohio; Virginia (Jennie) Ackers, 18976 89th Street, Cleveland, Ohio; Earl D. Gardner, 1411 Southway Drive, Columbus, Ohio; Gertrude G. Lowery, Columbus, Ohio; Mary T. Adams, Columbus, Ohio; Charles S. Adams, Columbus, Ohio; Sara J. Adams, Columbus, Ohio, and Walter L. Adams, the unknown heirs at law and next of kin of Harriet Louise Wise, deceased (the foregoing persons being named in said petition), and all other persons having or claiming to have any right, title, interest or claim in and to said estate, and they hereby are commanded to appear in this court on the 19TH DAY OF JULY, 1937, to answer under oath the said petition and to show cause, if any they have, why they severally have or do not have an interest in said estate or why they severally claim any right to distributive shares in said estate, as well, also, why the prayers of said petition should not be granted and a special master appointed as therein prayed, provided, however, and it is further ordered, that a copy of this order be published in the Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Post, once in each a newspaper of general circulation published in the District of Columbia, twice a month for three successive months before the return day herein mentioned, the first of said publications to be not less than ninety days before said return day. JENNINGS BAILEY, Justice. Attest: (Seal.) THEODORE COGSWELL, Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court.

CHARMING TOWN HOUSE.
AN ENGLISH BASEMENT BRICK.
On Rhode Island Avenue, just off 16th St., overlooking Scott Circle.
In the midst of fine old residences. Solidly constructed of red limestone and brick, with 10-in. walls. Four stories and basement. Two front entrances. Main portal opens into huge English hall with log-burning fireplace. Powder room and lavatory. Library to rear of hall; fireplace and numerous book shelves. Kitchen, butler's pantry and servants' room also on entrance floor. The main living floor (second floor) embraces living room, dining room and room-size pantry with built-in china cupboards on both walls.
Third floor has two bedrooms, commodious sitting room and two baths. Fireplaces in bedrooms. Several huge closets. Three bedrooms and two baths on top floor; front bedroom with private bath. A large storage attic affords air chamber over entire building.
A rear staircase mounts to all floors, offering private entrance for servants. Library and three of the bedrooms open onto a private courtyard, the walls of which are trained with flowering wisteria vines. A detached brick building, to rear of main residence, houses two-car heated garage and three large rooms, hall and bath above. These may be used as servants' quarters, or rented as an attractive studio apartment for at least $50 per month.
This residence is equipped with a comparatively new oil burner and Ruud hot-water heater. Throughout, the house is in excellent condition, the present owner having spent several thousand dollars for improvements. The layout and spaciousness of the residence make it a particularly excellent opportunity for a doctor's residence and office, or for those who desire a town home sufficiently large to accommodate guests while entertaining.
We will show it, because of owner's request, by appointment only.

Army Aircraft Concentrates on West Coast

The Post is the only daily morning paper in Washington with A. P. WIREPHOTO Service.

HOME AGAIN, SAFE—Dramatic picture made at Los Angeles when 4-year-old Dolores Snyder, kidnaped but released by stranger in an automobile, was returned to her distracted mother after being found by police.

U. S. Army Photo.

WINGING WESTWARD—Practically the entire U. S. air force has been directed to report for tactical maneuvers in California during the month of May. Fighting planes, totaling 244, including pursuit squadron shown above, are winging their way westward.

TROUT SEASON OPENS—At Cortland, N. Y., an angler hooks a husky rainbow trout along the snow-banked Grout Creek on the opening day of the trout season. A scene enacted by hundreds of fishermen in up-State New York.

HERALDS THE "BIG TOP"—When Barnum & Bailey open the spring circus season in New York City shortly, this lovely trumpeter will swing from the highest trapeze, heralding the grand parade.

SCULPTURE OF SLAIN MODEL—A bust of Veronica Gedeon, the work of Robert Irwin, who is being sought in connection with the murders of the model, her mother, and a boarder in the Gedeon home.

OSHAWA, CANADA—Women who attended rally of striking employes of General Motor of Canada plant, shown applauding speakers. Mounted police were assembled in Toronto in preparation for any emergency that might arise.
